

MANUAL OF
ENGLISH GRAMMAR AND COMPOSITION
NESFIELD

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO

3 1761 01628330 1

PRESENTED TO THE UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO
BY

The Copp. Clark Company

MANUAL OF
ENGLISH GRAMMAR AND COMPOSITION

BY

J. C. NESFIELD, M.A.

AUTHOR OF 'ENGLISH GRAMMAR PAST AND PRESENT,' 'HISTORICAL ENGLISH AND DERIVATION,' ETC.

IN FIVE PARTS

I.—PARSING AND ANALYSIS

II.—COMPOSITION: FORCE AND PROPRIETY OF DICTION

III.—ENLARGEMENT OF VOCABULARY: FIGURES OF SPEECH

IV.—PROSE AND POETRY

V.—HISTORY OF THE LANGUAGE

H H H 10
16 / 2 / 99

MACMILLAN & CO., LIMITED
ST. MARTIN'S STREET, LONDON
NEW YORK: THE MACMILLAN COMPANY

1898

STAMPED TEXT (Faint, illegible)

REGISTERED
COPY

CONTENTS

PART I.—PARSING AND ANALYSIS.

| CHAP.  | PAGE |
|--|------|
| 1. ANALYSIS IN OUTLINE . . . . .   | 1    |
| 2. THE PARTS OF SPEECH IN OUTLINE : PHRASES . . . . .  | 7    |
| 1. The Parts of Speech. 2. Classification of Phrases.  |      |
| 3. NOUNS . . . . .   | 16   |
| 1. The kinds of Nouns. 2. Gender. 3. Number. 4. Case.  |      |
| 4. ADJECTIVES . . . . .  | 26   |
| 1. The kinds of Adjectives. 2. The two Uses of Adjectives. 3. Comparison of Adjectives.  |      |
| 5. PRONOUNS . . . . .  | 31   |
| 1. Personal Pronouns. 2. Demonstrative Pronouns. 3. Relative or Conjunctive Pronouns. 4. Interrogative Pronoun.  |      |
| 6. VERBS . . . . .   | 39   |
| 1. The kinds of Verbs. 2. Transitive Verbs. 3. Intransitive Verbs. 4. Auxiliary Verbs. 5. Active and Passive Voices. 6. Complete Conjugation of a Verb in the Finite Moods. 7. Indicative Mood. 8. Imperative Mood. 9. Subjunctive Mood. 10. Infinitive Mood. 11. Participles. 12. Gerunds and Verbal Nouns. 13. The Strong and Weak Conjugations. 14. Defective, Irregular, and Impersonal Verbs. |      |
| 7. ADVERBS . . . . .   | 70   |
| 1. The Functions of Adverbs. 2. The kinds of Adverbs. 3. Comparison of Adverbs. 4. Verbs compounded with Adverbs. 5. The two Uses of Adverbs.  |      |
| 8. PREPOSITIONS . . . . .  | 75   |
| 9. CONJUNCTIONS . . . . .  | 78   |
| 1. Co-ordinative Conjunctions. 2. Subordinative Conjunctions.  |      |
| 10. INTERJECTIONS . . . . .  | 80   |
| 11. THE SAME WORD AS DIFFERENT PARTS OF SPEECH . . . . .   | 81   |
| 12. SYNTAX AND PARSING . . . . .   | 84   |
| 13. ANALYSIS IN DETAIL . . . . .   | 93   |
| 1. Sentences Simple, Compound, and Complex. 2. Scheme of Analysis in Detail. 3. Degrees of Subordination.  |      |
| EXAMPLES IN PARSING AND ANALYSIS . . . . .   | 107  |
| EXAMPLES IN DIRECT AND INDIRECT NARRATION . . . . .  | 114  |
| PART II.—COMPOSITION : FORCE AND PROPRIETY OF DICTION.   |      |
| 14. PUNCTUATION, OR THE RIGHT USE OF STOPS . . . . .   | 118  |
| 15. THE NORMAL ORDER OF WORDS . . . . .  | 126  |

| CHAP.   | PAGE |
|---|------|
| 16. INVERSION OF THE NORMAL ORDER : EMPHASIS . . . . .  | 135  |
| 17. STRUCTURE OF SENTENCES . . . . .  | 141  |
| 18. PURITY OF DICTION . . . . .   | 150  |
| 19. PROPRIETY OF DICTION . . . . .  | 156  |
| 1. Common Errors in the Use of Common Words. 2.Words used in Wrong Senses or Wrong Connections.   |      |
| PLURALS IN SPECIAL SENSES . . . . .   | 176  |
| 20. PERSPICUITY OR CLEARNESS OF DICTION . . . . .   | 178  |
| 1. Grammatical Precautions. 2. The Obscure. 3. TheDouble Meaning.   |      |
| 21. SIMPLICITY OR EASE OF DICTION . . . . .   | 189  |
| 22. BREVITY OR TERSENESS OF DICTION . . . . .   | 195  |
| 23. ELEGANCE OF DICTION . . . . .   | 204  |
| PART III.—ENLARGEMENT OF VOCABULARY :FIGURES OF SPEECH.   |      |
| 24. ENLARGEMENT BY COMPOSITION . . . . .  | 210  |
| 1. Unrelated or Juxta-positional Compounds. 2. Re-lated or Syntactical Compounds.   |      |
| 25. ENLARGEMENT BY PREFIXES AND SUFFIXES . . . . .  | 214  |
| 1. Teutonic Prefixes. 2. Teutonic Suffixes. 3. RomanicPrefixes. 4. Romanic Suffixes. 5. Greek Prefixes.6. Greek Suffixes. 7. Some General Results, withQuestions. |      |
| 26. FIGURES OF RHETORIC . . . . .   | 230  |
| 27. ENLARGEMENT OF VOCABULARY BY METAPHOR ANDMETONYMY . . . . .   | 252  |
| PART IV.—PROSE AND POETRY.  |      |
| 28. MAIN DIVISIONS OF PROSE-COMPOSITION . . . . .   | 266  |
| 1. Classification according to Matter. 2. Classificationaccording to Form.  |      |
| 29. PROSODY AND POETIC DICTION . . . . .  | 284  |
| 1. Prosody. 2. Poetic Diction.  |      |
| 30. MAIN DIVISIONS OF POETRY . . . . .  | 296  |
| PART V.—HISTORY OF THE LANGUAGE.  |      |
| 31. ORIGIN AND GROWTH OF ENGLISH . . . . .  | 304  |
| 1. English and Cognate Languages. 2. Old English.3. Middle English. 4. Modern English.  |      |
| 32. BORROWINGS . . . . .  | 319  |
| 1. Celtic. 2. Danish or Later Scandian. 3. Dutch.4. Latin. 5. French. 6. Greek. 7. ModernBorrowings : Miscellaneous.  |      |
| 33. NOTES ON AFFIXES AND ACCIDENCE . . . . .  | 333  |
| 1. Origin of Teutonic Affixes. 2. Noun Forms. 3. Adjec-tive Forms. 4. Pronoun Forms. 5. Verb Forms.   |      |
| INDEX OF SUBJECTS AND SELECTED WORDS . . . . .  | 343  |

PART I.—PARSING AND ANALYSIS.

CHAPTER I.

ANALYSIS IN OUTLINE.

This chapter assumes that the student has a rough knowledge of the Parts of Speech to start with.

1. Sentence.—When one person says something to another, or puts what he says into writing, he uses a combination of words which is called a sentence :—

Fire burns.

Here “fire” is the thing talked about. The word “fire,” though it names the thing, does not make a sentence. It is a name, and nothing more. It is only by adding such a word as “burns” to the word “fire,” that is, by saying what the thing (fire) does, that we can make a sentence.

Definition.—A sentence is a combination of words, in which something is said about something else.

Note.—That which is “said” may be an assertion, or a command, or a question, or a wish, or an exclamation,—whatever, in fact, can be expressed by a Finite verb (on the meaning of Finite verb see § 5). Thus there are five different kinds of sentences :—

- (a) Assertive, affirming or denying. (Indicative Mood.)
A man's success depends chiefly on himself. (Affirmative.)
He did not get much help from others. (Negative.)
- (b) Imperative, commanding or prohibiting. (Imperative Mood.)
Rely chiefly on your own efforts. (Command, Advice.)
Do not rely much on the help of others. (Prohibition.)
- (c) Interrogative, asking a question. (Indicative Mood.)
Have you finished that task ?
- (d) Optative, expressing a wish. (Subjunctive Mood.)
Thy kingdom come, thy will be done.
- (e) Exclamatory, expressing some emotion. (Indicative Mood.)
What a foolish fellow you have been !

2. Subject and Predicate.—Every sentence, when it is expressed in full, consists of two parts, a Subject and a Predicate.

In a very short sentence like "fire burns," the word "fire" (which is called a Noun) expresses the whole of the Subject, and the word "burns" (which is called a Finite Verb) expresses the whole of the Predicate.

However long a sentence may be, it can always be divided into the same two parts as the shortest sentence :—

| Subject.   | Predicate.   |
|---|---|
| (1) Fire  | burns.  |
| (2) A fierce fire   | burnt down my house.  |
| (3) A fierce fire, breaking out yesterday,                                    | completely burnt down my house.   |
| (4) A fierce fire, suddenly breaking out yesterday afternoon,                 | completely* burnt down my house and many others in the same street.                     |
| (5) A fierce fire, suddenly breaking out yesterday afternoon at four o'clock, | completely burnt down my house and all the other houses in the same street except five. |

Definitions.—The Subject of a sentence is a word or words denoting what we speak about.

The Predicate is a word or words by which we say something about the thing denoted by the Subject.

Note 1.—In grammar the Subject is not "what we speak about," but "the word or words denoting what we speak about." Grammar deals exclusively with words, and this fact has to be recognised in all the definitions.

Note 2.—Such a sentence as "Go!" is elliptical. Here the Subject "thou" or "you" is understood. Still more elliptical is a sentence in which the Subject and the Finite verb are both understood :—

Companion, hence !—SHAKSPEARE.

To express this sentence in full, we have to say—

Companion, go thou hence !

3. Nominative or its equivalent.—The predicate-verb has for its Subject some noun or noun-equivalent of the same number (Singular or Plural) and the same person (First, Second, or Third) as the verb itself. The noun that stands as Subject to a verb is invariably in the Nominative case, and so it is best to call it a Nominative at once.

Fire | burns.

Here "fire" is the Nominative to the predicate-verb "burns."

A pronoun is a very common form of noun-equivalent :—

He | is standing outside.

We cannot say "Him is standing outside." So the pronoun like the noun must be in the Nominative case.

Another form of Nominative is a Gerund or Verbal noun ending in -ing :—

Walking | is good for health.

Sometimes an Infinitive is used as an equivalent to the Nominative :—

To walk | is good for health.

Sometimes a clause (that is, a sentence which is part of a larger sentence) is used as an equivalent to the Nominative. This is called a Noun-clause, because it does the work of a noun :—

Whom the gods love | die young.—Proverb.

4. Enlargement of Nominative.—The Nominative is sometimes enlarged by a word or words that add something to its meaning.

The commonest form of enlargement is an adjective or a participle ; and both forms of enlargement may occur together :—

A fiere fire
A fiere fire, breaking out yesterday, } burnt down my house.

Another very common form of enlargement is a noun or pronoun in the Possessive case :—

My prospects | are not bad.
A fox's tail | is of a tawny colour.

Another form of enlargement is a noun in apposition (i.e. referring to the same thing as the other noun) :—

John, the baker, has taken a new shop.

Another form of enlargement is a preposition followed by a noun :—

My prospects in life | are not bad.
A bird in the hand | is worth two in the bush.

Sometimes a clause can be used to enlarge the Nominative. This is called an Adjective-clause, because it enlarges the noun as an adjective would do.

The house in which we live | has been sold.

5. Finite Verb.—Any part of a verb that can be used for saying something about something else (in any of the five senses shown in § 1) is called Finite.

The word “finite” means “limited.” A Finite verb is so called, because it is limited to the same person (First, Second, or Third) and to the same number (Singular or Plural) as its Nominative :—

(a) I see him.

(b) They see him.

In both sentences the form of the verb “see” is the same.

But in (a) the verb is in the First person, because its Nom. "I" is in the First person, and in the Singular number, because its Nom. "I" is Singular. Similarly in (b) the verb is in the Third person, because its Nom. "they" is in the Third person, and Plural, because its Nom. "they" is Plural.

Note.—Those parts of a verb which are not finite, that is, are not limited to number and person, are of three kinds :—(1) the Infinitive mood, as "I wish to retire"; (2) a Participle, as "a retired officer"; (3) a Gerund or Verbal noun, as "I think of retiring." These, though they are parts of a verb, have lost what is most essential in the verb-character; that is, they do not enable us to say anything about anything else, and therefore they can never be the verb of a Predicate.

6. Completion of Finite Verb.—Some verbs make a complete sense by themselves. If so, they are called Intransitive verbs of Complete Predication :—

Fish swim. Rivers flow. All animals die.

Other verbs do not make a complete sense by themselves, but require some word or words to be added for this purpose. Such additional word or words are called the Completion.

The Completion may be either (a) an Object, or (b) a Complement; and there is one class of verb (Factitive, see below) that requires both :—

(a) Object :—

A verb that requires an object is called Transitive. "Transitive" means "passing over" or "passing on." A verb is Transitive, when the action denoted by it does not stop with the doer, but passes on to something else :—

Ships traverse the ocean. He shot a tiger.

There is no sense, or at least a very imperfect sense, in saying "Ships traverse," "He shot."

A Transitive verb may even have two objects :—

He asked me a difficult question.

To say "he asked" gives a very incomplete sense. "He asked me" brings the sense a step nearer to completion. But the sense is not really completed till we say, "He asked me a difficult question."

(b) Complement :—

This word is used to denote any kind of completion except the object or objects to a Transitive verb. Transitive verbs which need a complement as well as an object are called Factitive; Intransitive verbs which need a complement are called Copulative.

That grief drove him (Object) mad (Complement) (Factitive.)
He seems to be mad (Complement) . . . . (Copulative.)

If we omit the complement, and say "That grief drove him," or "He seems," the sentences are almost meaningless. It is the complement which furnishes what was wanted to complete the sense in either sentence.

7. Extension of Finite Verb.—The Finite verb is said to be "extended," when its meaning is increased by an adverb or by some word or words that have the force of an adverb :—

That grief nearly drove him mad.
That grief drove him mad all of a sudden.

Here the meaning of "drove" is extended in the first sentence by the adverb nearly, and in the second by the adverbial phrase all of a sudden.

Sometimes the Finite verb is extended by a clause. A clause so used is called an Adverb-clause, because it has the force of an adverb :—

The news drove him mad, as soon as he heard it.

The sentence italicised extends the meaning of "drove" by mentioning the time of the action.

8. Scheme of Analysis.—Sentences are analysed according to the following scheme, the details of which have been already explained in §§ 3-7 :—

The new master soon put the class into good order.
A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush.
Evil communications corrupt good manners.
Without any necessity, he asked me a rude question.

| I. SUBJECT.               |                          | II. PREDICATE. |                               |                        |                        |
|---------------------------|--------------------------|----------------|-------------------------------|------------------------|------------------------|
| Nominative or Equivalent. | Enlarge-ment.            | Finite Verb.   | Completion.                   |                        | Extension.             |
|                           |                          |                | Object.                       | Complement.            |                        |
| master                    | (1) The(2) new       | put            | the class                     | into good order        | soon.                  |
| bird                      | (1) A(2) in the hand | is             | ...                           | worth two in the bush. |                        |
| communi-cations           | Evil                     | corrupt        | good manners.                 |                        |                        |
| He                        | ...                      | asked          | (1) me(2) a rude question | ...                    | without any necessity. |

Analyse the following sentences according to the model :—

1. A certain fowler, having fixed his net, withdrew to a little distance, that the birds might not be afraid to come.

2. A flight of pigeons, led by their king, was by chance passing through the sky at this time.

3. They caught sight of the rice-grains scattered by the fowler near the net.

4. The pigeon who was king of the rest then asked his rice-loving followers this question—

5. Why are rice-grains lying here in this lonely place ?

6. We will see into this thing.

7. We must be cautious in our movements.

8. One conceited pigeon among the rest gave them bad advice.

9. He told them to fly down to the rice-grains and satisfy their hunger.

10. Having listened to this bad advice and flown down, they began to peck up and swallow the grains.

11. On beginning to peck they were all caught in the net.

12. Then they blamed their rash and imprudent friend for having given them such bad advice.

13. They ought rather to have blamed themselves for having listened to him.

14. The king now told them what to do.

15. At one moment and with one united movement springing suddenly up fly off with the net.

16. Small things become strong by being united among themselves.

17. Even mad elephants can be held fast by a rope made of thin blades of grass.

18. The pigeons acted on this advice.

19. Making a sudden spring together, they flew up into the air, carrying the net with them.

20. At first the fowler hoped to see them come down again to the earth.

21. Flying along as fast as they could, they passed out of sight with the net about them.

22. In this way the fowler lost both his net and the pigeons.

23. The pigeons then said to their king :—“O king, what is the next thing to be done ?”

24. The king directed them to a certain place.

25. There his friend, the king of the mice, received them kindly.

26. The king of the mice set them all free by nibbling through the net.

27. Thus the whole troop of pigeons escaped by means of union.

28. All men should profit by this lesson.

29. A chariot will not go on a single wheel.

30. A creeper, having nothing to support it, must fall to the earth.—Digest of Eastern Fable.

SUMMARY OF CHAPTER I.

Sentence : a combination of words in which something is said about something else (§ 1).

- Subject : the word or words denoting what we speak about (§ 2).
Predicate : the word or words by which we say something about the thing denoted by the subject (§ 2).
Clause : a sentence that is part of a larger sentence (§ 3).
Nominative or its equivalent : the noun or noun-equivalent that fixes the number and person of the Finite verb (§ 3).
Noun-clause : a clause that does the work of a noun (§ 3).
Enlargement of Nominative : an adjective or adjective-equivalent that enlarges the meaning of the Nominative (§ 4).
Adjective-clause : a clause that does the work of an adjective (§ 4).
Finite verb : any part of a verb that is limited to number and person (§ 5).
Non-finite parts of a verb : those parts of a verb that are not limited to number or person, viz. the Infinitive, the Participle, and the Gerund (§ 5).
Transitive verb : one that requires an object (§ 6).
Intransitive verb : one that does not require an object (§ 6).
Factitive verb : a Transitive verb that requires both a complement and an object (§ 6).
Copulative verb : an Intransitive verb that requires a complement (§ 6).
Extension of Finite verb : an adverb or adverb-equivalent that extends the meaning of a Finite verb (§ 7).
Adverb-clause : a clause that does the work of an adverb (§ 7).

CHAPTER II.—THE PARTS OF SPEECH IN OUTLINE : PHRASES.

SECTION I.—THE PARTS OF SPEECH.

The definitions given in this chapter will not be repeated in subsequent chapters.

9. The Parts of Speech.—The different kinds of words used for different purposes in a sentence are called Parts of Speech.

Until we see a word in a sentence, we are often unable to say to what part of speech it belongs :—

(a) Water the roses. (b) Take some water. (c) A water bird.

In (a) water is a verb. In (b) it is a noun. In (c) it is an adjective, or a noun used as an adjective.

10. Noun.—Take such a sentence as the following :—

The howling of the wolf filled the flock with terror.

Here howling is the name of an action ; wolf, of an animal ; flock, of a multitude ; terror, of a feeling. So howling, wolf, flock, terror are all nouns.

Definition.—A noun is a word used for naming anything.

Note 1.—The word “thing” in this definition stands for person, place, quality, action, feeling, collection, etc., anything, in fact, that we can speak about. It is so used in all the definitions that follow.

Note 2.—Noun and name both mean the same thing at bottom. Noun is from Latin nomen, a name. Name is from Anglo-Saxon nama, a name.

11. Pronoun.—Take such a sentence as the following:—

I told James that the snake which you saw in the garden would do him no harm, if he let it go its own way.

Here I is used for the speaker; you for the person spoken to; him and he for “James”; which, it, and its own for “snake.” So all these words are pronouns.

Definition.—A pronoun (Latin pro, for, instead of) is a word used instead of a noun. (It is, in fact, a substitute word or proxy. It denotes a thing without being a name for it.)

Note 1.—Pronouns in the First and Second persons save the mentioning of a noun, and in the Third the repetition of one. The speaker, however, can give his own name, if he chooses:—

We, John Cade, so termed of our supposed father, etc.

2 Henry VI. iv. 2, 33.

Usually, however, the speaker simply says “I” without giving his own name, and in addressing any one he simply says “you” without mentioning the name of the person spoken to.

Note 2.—Pronouns are also used as substitutes for a noun-equivalent:—

Climbing up rocks is an amusement to me; but that (=climbing up rocks) is a labour to you.

12. Adjective.—A noun standing by itself is sometimes of too general a meaning to indicate the thing to which the writer or speaker is referring.

Supposing the noun to be “house,” the speaker might wish to point out some particular house. He would then have to say “this house,” or “that house,” or “the other house.”

Or he might wish to allude to the quantity, as “the whole house”; or to the number, as “one house,” “four houses”; or to the serial order, as “the first house,” “the fourth house.”

Or he might wish to describe the kind of house, as “a little house,” “a comfortable house,” “an untidy house,” etc.

Or he might wish to speak about several houses in a distributive sense, as “each house,” “every house.”

Any word thus added to a noun is called an Adjective (Lat. adjectivus, “used for adding on”). The noun and adjective thus combined make a kind of compound noun. Sometimes this compound noun can be written as a single word, as "greatcoat," "blackguard," "nobleman," "halfpenny," "quicksands," "sweet-heart," etc., every one of which can easily be broken up into a simple noun and an adjective that precedes it.

Definition.—An adjective is a word that enlarges the meaning and narrows the application of a noun.

Enlargement of meaning is necessarily accompanied by a narrowing of application. This is a vital point. Thus the noun "house," so long as its meaning remains unenlarged, that is, so long as no adjective is added to it, can be applied to an almost countless number of things called by the general name of "house." But if I add to the noun the adjective "fourth," the noun so enlarged can be applied to only one house, viz. to that house which stands fourth in a certain row or terrace.

Observe that when we enlarge the meaning of "house" by adding "fourth," we do not alter the meaning of "house." "Fourth house" means all that "house" means, and more besides.

Shorter definition.—An adjective is a word used to qualify a noun.<sup>1</sup>

This shorter definition is intended to signify exactly the same thing as the longer one. On account of its shortness it is more convenient for parsing. Thus in parsing "fourth house" we can say that "fourth" is an adjective qualifying the noun "house."

Note.—Amongst adjectives we must not omit to include the Definite article the (a short form of this) and the Indefinite article a (a short form of one).

13. Verb.—This has been described already in §§ 2, 5.

Definition.—A verb is a word used for saying something about something else.

"Verb" is from Latin verbum, a word. A verb has been called pre-eminently "the word," because it is the chief word in a sentence. In fact, it is the most important kind of word in human speech. "James laughs": we might designate James by pointing to him with our finger; but we cannot express any fact about him, as "laughs," without using our voice and saying the word laughs.

14. Preposition.—Take such sentences as the following:—

(a) I put my hand on the table.

(b) A bird in the hand is worth two (birds) in the bush.

(c) He is opposed to severe measures.

In (a) the preposition on shows the relation between the thing denoted by table and the action denoted by "put." The hand might be held above the table, or under it, or on it. It is the preposition which defines the relation.

<sup>1</sup> Observe that qualify simply means modify. In grammar it means precisely the same thing that it does in ordinary language, and is not by any means limited to adjectives that express some quality or attribute.

In (b) the preposition in shows the relation between the thing denoted by the noun bird and the thing denoted by the noun hand; also between the things denoted by the noun birds and the thing denoted by the noun bush.

In (c) the preposition to shows the relation between the things denoted by severe measures and the quality (opposition) denoted by the word opposed.

Definition.—A preposition is a word used for showing in what relation one thing stands to another thing.

The noun or noun-equivalent that comes after a preposition is called its Object.

Note 1.—Avoid such definitions as the following :—

“A preposition is a word used before a noun or pronoun to show its relation to some other word in the sentence.”

According to this, “a Jack in the box” does not mean that a Jack is in the box, but that the noun “Jack” is in the noun “box.”

Nor is it enough to say that “a preposition connects a noun with a verb, an adjective, or other noun.” In the phrase “time and tide,” we have one noun connected with another noun; and in the sentence “men are mortal,” we have a noun connected with an adjective by the copulative “are.” Yet neither and nor are is a preposition.

Note 2.—When the relation between the two things named is not adequately expressed by a single preposition, two prepositions may be used for the purpose :—

The mouse crept out from under the floor.

The rabbit escaped by running into its hole.

15. Conjunction.—Take such examples as the following :—

(a) He is a humble-minded and contented man.

(b) We admire the character of a poor, but honest, man.

(c) That man is disliked, because he is ill-tempered.

In (a) the notion of humility expressed by humble-minded is connected (in the sense of addition) with the notion of contentment expressed by contented. The one notion is simply added to the other. The conjunction used for this purpose is and.

In (b) the notion of poverty expressed by poor is connected (in the sense of contrast) with the notion of honesty expressed by honest. The one notion is contrasted with the other. The conjunction used for this purpose is but.

In (c) the thought expressed by the sentence “he is ill-tempered” is connected (in the sense of cause or reason) with the thought expressed by the sentence “that man is disliked.”<sup>1</sup> The one thought is given as the reason for the other.

<sup>1</sup> When the mind apprehends a single object, as “father,” “son,” “honesty,” “poverty,” the result is called a notion; and this is expressed

Definition.—A conjunction is a word used for showing in what relation one notion stands (in the mind of the speaker or writer) to another notion, or one thought to another thought.

Note 1.—A detail of the different relations expressed by conjunctions will be given hereafter. Meanwhile it may be pointed out that three different relations have been exemplified already—addition in example (a), contrast in (b), and causality in (c).

Note 2.—In parsing, it is convenient for the sake of brevity to say that “a conjunction joins words to words, and sentences to sentences.” But this is not enough for the purposes of definition. Prepositions also join words, as “a bird in the hand.” Some verbs, too, join words, as “time is money” (in fact, the verb is is called “copulative” for no other reason than that it couples or joins words). Some adverbs, too, like where, when, etc., join sentences, as “We found out where he was.” Relative pronouns also join sentences, as “We have found the house that you were looking for”; and for this reason they are called conjunctive.

Note 3.—Prepositions and conjunctions have been bracketed sometimes as “connective words,” and sometimes as “relational words.” If there is any truth in what we have laid down, there is much more point in bracketing them as “relational” words than as “connective” ones. Both kinds of words express relations—prepositions a relation between one thing and another thing; conjunctions a relation between one notion and another notion, or between one thought and another thought.

16. Adverb.—What an adjective does for a noun or pronoun, an adverb does for any part of speech except a noun or pronoun: it enlarges or extends the meaning of a word and narrows its application. Take such sentences as the following:—

- (a) With verb.—I much admire his industry.
- (b) With adjective.—He is deservedly successful.
- (c) With preposition.—The body floated partly above and partly below the water.
- (d) With conjunction.—He was despised, merely because he was poor.
- (e) With other adverb.—He writes remarkably well.

In (a) the verb “admire” is qualified by the adverb “much.”

In (b) the adjective “successful” is qualified by the adverb “deservedly.”

In (c) the preposition “above” is qualified by the adverb “partly”; and the preposition “below” by the same adverb.

In (d) the conjunction “because” is qualified by the adverb “merely.”

by a single word or phrase. When the mind compares two notions and connects them by a Finite verb, the result is called a thought; and this is expressed by a sentence (Latin, sententia, a thought).

In (e) the adverb "well" is qualified by the adverb "remarkably."

Definition.—An adverb is a word that extends the meaning and narrows the application of any part of speech except a noun or pronoun.<sup>1</sup>

Note.—Example (c). Observe that in extending the meaning of "above" by the addition of "partly," we do not alter the meaning of "above." The phrase "partly above" expresses all that is implied in the preposition "above," and something more. It shows that the relation of above-ness denoted by "above" is not entire, but partial. The same remarks apply to the preposition "below."

Example (d). Here the meaning of the conjunction "because" is extended, not altered, by the adverb "merely." The phrase "merely because" expresses all that is implied in "because," and something more. It shows that the relation of cause denoted by the conjunction "because" is to be understood in a sense that excludes every other cause. If we change the order of the words and say, "He was merely despised, because he was poor," the meaning of the sentence is not the same: this would mean, "He was merely despised (not hated or attacked), because he was poor." Or, if we leave out the adverb "merely," the sense would again be different. The sentence would then imply that there may have been other reasons besides poverty for which he was despised.

17. Interjection.—All Parts of Speech except interjections have some grammatical connection with some other word in the sentence in which they occur. An interjection is the only part of speech that stands alone—isolated. It scarcely deserves to be called a part of speech; for it lies on the borderland of language, halfway between articulate speech and the inarticulate cries of animals. We must give it a name, however, because it is a word; for grammar takes account of every kind of word that occurs in human speech.

My son, alas! died yesterday.

Definition.—An interjection is a word thrown into a sentence to express some feeling of the mind, but forms no part of the construction of the sentence.

"Interjection" is from Latin interjectus, thrown between.

Note.—The meaning of an interjection might be expressed by a parenthetical sentence:—

My son (I am sorry to say) died yesterday.

Observe that a sentence substituted for an interjection is always

---

<sup>1</sup> In § 17 it is shown that an interjection is, properly speaking, not a Part of Speech. Hence no mention is made of interjections in this definition. An interjection, being absolute or isolated, cannot be qualified by any other word.

parenthetical. The sentence "I am sorry to say" is as completely isolated from the sentence "My son died yesterday" by the parenthesis as the interjection "alas!" is isolated from it by its own nature.

18. Double Parts of Speech.—Besides the eight Parts of Speech already described, there are four kinds of words which are double parts of speech, that is, two combined in one:—

(1) A Participle.—This is a verb and adjective combined.

A retired officer lives next door.

"Retired" is a verb, being part of the verb "retire." It is also an adjective, because it qualifies the noun "officer." Hence a participle may be called a verbal adjective.

(2) A Gerund or Verbal Noun.—This is a verb and noun combined.

I think of retiring soon from service.

"Retiring" is a verb, being part of the verb "retire." It is also a noun, because it is object to the preposition "of."

(3) An Infinitive.—This too is a verb and noun combined.

I wish to return that book.

Here "to return" is a verb, in the Infinitive mood. It is also a kind of noun, because it is the object to the Transitive verb "wish."

(4) Relative Adverb.—This is partly an adverb and partly a conjunction. It has hence been called a "Conjunctive adverb."

We shall be glad when the risk is over.

Here "when" is an adverb, because it qualifies the verb "is." It has also the character of a conjunction, because it connects the thought expressed by "we shall be glad" with the thought expressed by "when the risk is over."

Exercise.

In the following sentences point out the Part of Speech in which each italicised word is used, and give your reason for saying that it belongs to one Part of Speech rather than to another:—

1. A square thing does not fit into a round hole. Draw a circle round a given centre. The flies are flying round and round. Men must go their daily round of duty. Vasco da Gama was the first to round the Cape of Good Hope.

2. The earth is very dry, and needs rain. He must needs know the reason of this. Our needs or wants are few.

3. I will wait for you at the next house. He stood next me in the class. Who came next?

4. We must all die some day. We lost our all on that day. The road was all covered with sand.

5. He returned after a week's absence. He returned after he had been absent for a week. The man died of fever, and his son died a few days after.

6. A beggar is standing before the gate. I never saw such a thing before. He took the book, before he had paid for it.
7. My book is a better one than yours. You are working better to-day. Do not despise your bettors.
8. There is but one man present. Who but you would have made such a mistake. He is a man of common sense, but not learned in books.
9. He had enough to do. We have wages enough for three men.
10. Half measures do not succeed. One half of his task is now done. He was half dead with fear.
11. He has eaten more bread to-day than yesterday. More has been done than was expected. I like him more than I like you.
12. Near our house there is a fine tree. He is a near relative of mine. Stand near, while I whisper something into your ear.
13. He has wasted much time. I am much pleased with your conduct. You will not get much from me.
14. We should pity the sorrows of others. Other men besides you deserve pity.
15. You will save him if you try. All the men save one perished.
16. I have not seen him since Monday last. I took this house four weeks since. We shall trust you, since you were always honest.
17. I am not a student in that school. A student that works hard will get promotion. I heard that you were coming.
18. We must stop here a little while. While the cat is away, the mice play.

SECTION 2.—CLASSIFICATION OF PHRASES.

19. Phrase defined.—A phrase is a combination of words in which no Finite verb is either expressed or understood.

A phrase is therefore intermediate between a single word and a sentence.

20. Kinds of Phrases.—Phrases may be classified according to the parts of speech for which they are used as substitutes. There is no phrase which can be substituted for a pronoun, since a pronoun is a substitute word already (§ 11).

(a) Noun-phrase: one which does the work of a noun:—

How to do this is a difficult question.

(b) Adjectival phrase: one which does the work of an adjective:—

A bird in the hand is worth two (birds) in the bush.

(c) Adverbial phrase: one which does the work of an adverb:—

I shall wait a few minutes.

He shouted at the top of his voice.

The sun having set, they all retired.

(d) Prepositional phrase: one which does the work of a preposition:—

He went on board ship.

(e) Conjunctive phrase : one which does the work of a conjunction :—

In case we fail, we must try again.

(f) Interjectional phrase : one which does the work of an interjection :—

What a pity ! For shame ! Good gracious !

The result, then, is that any combination of words which can be substituted for some part of speech may be called a phrase ; and we have seen that nouns, adjectives, adverbs, prepositions, conjunctions, and interjections may all be expressed by phrases.

The one exception is a Finite verb. Nothing but a Finite verb can do the work of a Finite verb,—which corroborates what is said in § 13, that a verb is the most important kind of word in human speech.

Exercise.

Show for what Parts of Speech the italicised phrases are used in the following sentences :—

1. I am sorry that he behaved with so much rudeness.
2. A sharp ride on a spirited horse is the best kind of exercise.
3. The beauties of nature are beyond description.
4. Dinner being over, let us now go into the next room.
5. He will be dismissed in the event of his doing such a thing again.
6. The young have to learn how to profit by experience.
7. He was not often behind time.
8. An English sailor had been shut up for several years, but he was set free at the peace.
9. Bind him hand and foot and take him away.
10. A man in bad health can seldom be happy.
11. He was not a man to tell a lie.
12. The two chief points having been gained, success is now certain.
13. He took medicine in order that he might recover.
14. He still feels tired, notwithstanding that he had ten hours' sleep.

SUMMARY OF CHAPTER II.

Parts of Speech : the different kinds of words that serve different purposes in a sentence (§ 9).

Noun : a word used for naming anything (§ 10).

Pronoun : a word used instead of a noun (§ 11).

Adjective : a word that enlarges the meaning and narrows the application of a noun (§ 12).

Verb : a word used for saying something about something else (§ 13).

Preposition : a word used for showing in what relation one thing stands to another thing (§ 14).

Conjunction : a word used for showing in what relation one notion stands to another notion, or one thought to another thought (§ 15).

Adverb : a word that extends the meaning and narrows the application of any part of speech except a noun or pronoun (§ 16).

Interjection : a word thrown into a sentence to express some feeling of the mind, but forming no part of the construction of the sentence (§ 17).

Double Part of Speech : a word in which the characters of two parts of speech are combined (§ 18).

Phrase : a combination of words in which no Finite verb is either expressed or understood (§ 19).

Noun-phrase : one which does the work of a noun (§ 20).

Adjectival phrase : one which does the work of an adjective (§ 20).

Adverbial phrase : one which does the work of an adverb (§ 20).

Prepositional phrase : one which does the work of a preposition (§ 20).

Conjunctive phrase : one which does the work of a conjunction (§ 20).

Interjectional phrase : one which does the work of an interjection (§ 20).

CHAPTER III.—NOUNS.

SECTION I.—THE KINDS OF NOUNS.

21. Nouns classified.—Nouns are of five different kinds :—

|  |   |  |   |
|--|---|--|---|
| I. Concrete  | { | Proper (one thing at a time) . . . . .       | 1 |
|  |   | Common (any number of things) . . . . .      | 2 |
|  |   | Collective (a group of things) . . . . .     | 3 |
|  |   | Material (what a thing is made of) . . . . . | 4 |
| II. Abstract (quality, state, or action) . . . . . |   |  | 5 |

22. A Proper Noun is a name for one particular thing as distinct from every other; as James (a person), Kenilworth (a book), Paris (a city), France (a country).

Note.—“Proper” (Lat. proprius) means “own.” Thus a Proper name is “own name.” It cannot be given to more than one thing at a time.

23. A Common Noun denotes no one thing in particular, but is common to any number of things of the same kind; as “man,” “book,” “country.”

Thus, man does not point out any particular man, such as James, but can be used for any and every man. Book does not point out any particular book, such as Kenilworth, but can be used for any and every book. Country does not point out any particular country, such as France, but can be used for any country in any part of the world.

Note 1.—“Common” (Lat. communis) means “shared by several.”

Things of the same kind, i.e. possessing some property in common, have an equal right to be called by the same name.

Note 2.—A Proper noun becomes a Common noun, when it is used in a descriptive or general sense :—

The Czar of Russia. The Pharaohs of Egypt.

He is the Newton (greatest astronomer) of the century.

24. A Collective Noun is a name for a group of similar individuals, the group being one complete whole.

For instance, there may be many sheep in a field, but only one flock. Here “sheep” is a Common noun, because it may stand for any and every sheep; but “flock” is a Collective noun, because it stands for all the sheep at once, and not for any one sheep taken separately.

Note 1.—A Collective Noun may be either Common or Proper :—

Thus the term “flock” may stand for many different flocks. But Parliament, the House of Commons, can stand for only one body.

Note 2.—A Collective Noun is not the same as a Noun of Multitude :—

(a) A Collective noun denotes one undivided whole; and hence the verb following is singular :—

The jury consists of twelve persons.

(b) A noun of Multitude denotes the individuals of the group; and hence the verb is plural, although the noun is singular :—

The jury (the men on the jury) were divided in their opinions.

25. A noun of Material is a name for some particular kind of matter or substance.

Thus “sheep” is a Common noun; but “mutton” (or the flesh of sheep) is a Material noun.

Note.—The same word can be a Material noun or a Common noun according to the sense :—

Fish live in water (Com.). Fish is good for food (Mat.).

26. An Abstract Noun denotes some quality, state, or action, apart from anything possessing the quality, etc.

Quality—Cleverness, height, humility, roguery, colour.

State—Poverty, manhood, bondage, pleasure, youth.

Action—Laughter, movement, flight, choice, revenge.

The four kinds of nouns previously described all relate to objects of sense, that is, to things which can be seen, touched, heard, smelt, or tasted; and all such nouns are called Concrete nouns. But an abstract noun relates to qualities, states, etc., which cannot be seen or touched, etc., and which are thought of apart from any object of sense.

For example: We know that a stone is hard. We also know that iron is hard. We also know that a brick is hard. We can therefore speak of hardness apart from stone, or iron, or brick, or any other object having the same quality. “Abstract” (Lat. abstractus) means “drawn off” (abstracted in thought) from the object. Hence hardness is an abstract noun; while stone or brick or iron is a concrete noun.

27. The same word may be an Abstract noun or a Common (i.e. Concrete) noun, according to the purpose for which it is used:—

(a) Examples of Persons.

|                  |   |                 |
|------------------|---|-----------------|
| Justice   | { 1. Justice is a virtue . . . . .            | Abstract |
|                  | { 2. He is a justice of the peace . . . . .   | Concrete |
| Beauty    | { 1. She is admired for her beauty . . . . .  | Abstract |
|                  | { 2. She is the beauty of the town . . . . .  | Concrete |
| Authority | { 1. He has no authority . . . . .            | Abstract |
|                  | { 2. The best authorities differ . . . . .    | Concrete |
| Nobility  | { 1. I admire nobility of character . . . . . | Abstract |
|                  | { 2. He is one of the nobility . . . . .      | Concrete |

(b) Examples of Things.

|                 |  |                 |
|-----------------|--|-----------------|
| Judgment | { 1. He is a man of sound judgment . . . . .           | Abstract |
|                 | { 2. The magistrate passed a severe judgment . . . . . | Concrete |
| Sight    | { 1. Sight is a valuable faculty . . . . .             | Abstract |
|                 | { 2. That was a fine sight . . . . .                   | Concrete |
| Wonder   | { 1. The news fills me with wonder . . . . .           | Abstract |
|                 | { 2. We have seen a wonder to-day . . . . .            | Concrete |
| Kindness | { 1. Kindness is part of his character . . . . .       | Abstract |
|                 | { 2. He did me a great kindness . . . . .              | Concrete |

Note.—Sometimes we find that there is one form of adjective for an Abstract noun used as such, and another for the same Abstract noun used as Concrete or Common.

(1) Industrious, adjective of industry used as an Abstract noun.

(2) Industrial, adjective of industry used as a Common noun.

In (2) “industry” means some special kind of industry, as cotton-spinning. Thus “an industrial training” means a training which will prepare a man for some branch of industry, such as cotton-spinning. “An industrious training” would not express this. We can say “an industrious man,” but not “an industrious training.”

How Abstract Nouns are formed.

28. Abstract Nouns can be formed from Adjectives, or from Common nouns, or from Verbs:—

(a) Abstract Nouns formed from Adjectives.

| Adj. | Abstract Noun. | Adj. | Abstract Noun. | Adj. | Abstract Noun. |
|-------------|-----------------------|-------------|-----------------------|-------------|-----------------------|
| Wise        | wisdom                | Prudent     | prudence              | Bitter      | bitterness            |
| Poor        | poverty               | Sweet       | sweetness             | Wide        | width                 |
| High        | height                | Young       | youth                 | Sole        | solitude              |
| Short       | shortness             | Proud       | pride                 | Broad       | breadth               |
| Honest      | honesty               | Just        | justice               | Deep        | depth                 |
| Dark        | darkness              | Great       | greatness             | True        | truth                 |
| Long        | length                | Hot         | heat                  | Cold        | coldness              |
| Brave       | bravery               | Sleepy      | sleepiness            | Humble      | humility              |

(b) Abstract Nouns formed from Common Nouns.

| Common Noun. | Abstract Noun. | Common Noun. | Abstract Noun. | Common Noun. | Abstract Noun. |
|--------------|----------------|--------------|----------------|--------------|----------------|
| Man          | manhood        | Agent        | agency         | Mother       | motherhood     |
| Child        | childhood      | Regent       | regency        | Rascal       | rascality      |
| Friend       | friendship     | King         | kingship       | Rogue        | roguey         |
| Boy          | boyhood        | Bond         | bondage        | Slave        | slavery        |
| Captain      | captaincy      | Hero         | heroism        | Infant       | infancy        |
| Priest       | priesthood     | Thief        | theft          | Owner        | ownership      |

(c) Abstract Nouns formed from Verbs.

| Verb.  | Abstract Noun. | Verb.   | Abstract Noun. | Verb.   | Abstract Noun. |
|--------|----------------|---------|----------------|---------|----------------|
| Serve  | service        | Relieve | relief         | Seize   | seizure        |
| Live   | life           | Believe | belief         | Laugh   | laughter       |
| Hate   | hatred         | Please  | pleasure       | Free    | freedom        |
| Obey   | obedience      | Advise  | advice         | Expect  | expectation    |
| Choose | choice         | Defend  | defence        | Protect | protection     |
| Move   | motion         | Judge   | judgment       | Think   | thought        |
| See    | sight          | Conceal | concealment    |         |                |

Note.—All Verbal Nouns (§ 3 and § 18) ending in -ing are Abstract nouns:—

The reading of books is good for the mind.

(d) Abstract Nouns of the same form as Verbs.

| Verb.  | Abstract Noun. | Verb. | Abstract Noun. | Verb. | Abstract Noun. |
|--------|----------------|-------|----------------|-------|----------------|
| Fear   | fear           | Fall  | fall           | Sob   | sob            |
| Hope   | hope           | Stay  | stay           | Laugh | laugh          |
| Desire | desire         | Stop  | stop           | Taste | taste          |
| Regret | regret         | Walk  | walk           | Ride  | ride           |
| Order  | order          | Run   | run            | Touch | touch          |
| Move   | move           | Step  | step           | Love  | love           |
| Rise   | rise           | Cry   | cry            |       |                |

29. There are two ways in which a Proper, Material, or Abstract noun can be used as a Common noun—(a) by putting an article (“a” or “the”) before it; (b) by putting it in the plural number.

Proper Noun.

Daniel was a learned Jew.

Material Noun.

Apple is my favourite fruit.

Abstract Noun.

Justice is a noble quality.

Common Nouns.

{ A Daniel come to judgment.
{ There are more Daniels than one.

{ Give me the apple in your hand.
{ Give me one of your apples.

{ He is a justice of the peace.
{ There are four justices present.

SECTION 2.—GENDER.

30. Gender.—Nouns are now classified according to sex or absence of sex, and not, as once, by form or declension :—

- (1) Masculine—male animals : bull, horse, hog.
- (2) Feminine—female animals : cow, mare, sow.
- (3) Common—of either sex : parent, child.
- (4) Neuter—of neither sex : box, flock, pain.

Note 1.—It is only in the pronouns he, she, it, that gender according to form has survived.

Note 2.—When no account is taken of sex, we often speak of animals as neuter :—

The child is asleep : let it sleep on.

Have you a horse : will you let me ride it ?

31. Modes of denoting Gender or Sex.—There are three different ways in which the gender (or sex) of living beings is indicated :—

1. By a Change of Ending.

| Masculine. | Feminine. | Masculine. | Feminine. |
|-------------------|------------------|-------------------|------------------|
| Abbot             | abbess           | Marquis           | marchioness      |
| Actor             | actress          | Master            | mistress         |
| Author            | authoress        | Murderer          | murderess        |
| Duke              | duchess          | Negro             | negress          |
| Emperor           | empress          | Patron            | patroness        |
| Executor          | executrix        | Poet              | poetess          |
| Giant             | giantess         | Priest            | priestess        |
| God               | goddess          | Prince            | princess         |
| Heir              | heiress          | Prophet           | prophetess       |
| Hero              | heroine          | Shepherd          | shepherdess      |
| Host              | hostess          | Songster          | songstress       |
| Hunter            | huntress         | Testator          | testatrix        |
| Lad               | lass             | Tiger             | tigress          |
| Lion              | lioness          | Widower           | widow            |

Note.—There are some Feminines that have no Masculines :—blonde, brunette, dowager, dowdy, drab, prude, shrew, siren, termagant, vixen. (But vixen was originally the Fem. of fox.)

2. By a Change of Word.

| Masculine.  | Feminine. | Masculine. | Feminine. |
|--------------------|------------------|-------------------|------------------|
| Bachelor           | maid, spinster   | Drake             | duck             |
| Boar               | sow              | Earl              | countess         |
| Boy                | girl             | Father            | mother           |
| Brother            | sister           | Friar (or monk)   | nun              |
| Buck               | doe              | Gander            | goose            |
| Bull               | cow              | Gentleman         | lady             |
| Bullock (or steer) | heifer           | Hart              | roe              |
| Cock               | hen              | Horse             | mare             |
| Colt               | filly            | Husband           | wife             |
| Dog                | bitch (or slut)  | King              | queen            |

|                   |                  |                   |                  |
|-------------------|------------------|-------------------|------------------|
| Masculine. | Feminine. | Masculine. | Feminine. |
| Lord              | lady             | Sloven            | slattern, slut   |
| Man               | woman            | Son               | daughter         |
| Milter            | spawner          | Stag              | hind             |
| Nephew            | niece            | Uncle             | aunt             |
| Ram               | ewe              | Wizard            | witch            |
| Sir               | madam            |                   |                  |

3. By placing a Word Before or After.

|                   |                  |                   |                  |
|-------------------|------------------|-------------------|------------------|
| Masculine. | Feminine. | Masculine. | Feminine. |
| Bride-groom       | bride            | He-goat           | she-goat         |
| Cock-sparrow      | hen-sparrow      | Land-lord         | land-lady        |
| Grand-father      | grand-mother     | Man-servant       | maid-servant     |
| Great-uncle       | great-aunt       | Pea-cock          | pea-hen          |

4. Nouns in the Common Gender ; i.e. denoting either Sex.

|                              |                                     |
|------------------------------|-------------------------------------|
| Baby—male or female.         | Orphan—boy or girl without parents. |
| Bird—cock or hen.            | Parent—father or mother.            |
| Calf—bullock or heifer.      | Person—man or woman.                |
| Child—boy or girl.           | Pig—boar or sow.                    |
| Cousin—male or female.       | Pupil—boy or girl.                  |
| Deer—stag or hind.           | Relation—male or female.            |
| Fallow-deer—buck or doe.     | Servant—man or maid.                |
| Foal—colt or filly.          | Sheep—ram or ewe.                   |
| Fowl—cock or hen.            | Student—boy or girl.                |
| Friend—Enemy—male or female. | Teacher—master or mistress.         |
| Monarch—king or queen.       |                                     |

Note.—Some Masculines, as colt, dog, horse, and some Feminines, as duck, goose, are used to denote either sex, provided that no question arises as to whether the animal is male or female :—

A goose is a much bigger bird than a duck.

SECTION 3.—NUMBER.

32. When a Noun denotes one object, it is Singular. When it denotes more than one, it is Plural.

33. Proper, Material, and Abstract nouns have no Plural, unless they can be used as Common nouns :—

|                     |   |
|---------------------|---|
| (a) Proper   | { Egypt is a country in Africa. ( Proper. )Many Egypt s (=countries as large as Egypt ) could be contained in India. ( Common. ) |
| (b) Material | { Tea is a pleasant drink. ( Material. )The best tea s (=kinds of tea). ( Common. )   |
| (c) Abstract | { Kindness is part of his character. ( Abstract. )He did many kindness s (=kind acts). ( Common. )                                      |

34. The general rule for forming the Plural number of a noun is by adding s to the Singular :—

|                  |                |                  |                |
|------------------|----------------|------------------|----------------|
| Singular. | Plural. | Singular. | Plural. |
| Hand             | hand-s         | House            | house-s        |
| Map              | map-s          | Stone            | stone-s        |

But if the Noun ends in s, x, sh, or ch, the Plural is formed by adding es to the Singular :—

| Singular. | Plural.   | Singular. | Plural.   |
|------------------|------------------|------------------|------------------|
| Glass            | glass- es | Gash             | gash- es  |
| Gas              | gas- es   | Brush            | brush- es |
| Tax              | tax- es   | Bench            | bench- es |
| Box              | box- es   | Coach            | coach- es |

35. If the Noun ends in y and the y is preceded by a consonant, the Plural is formed by changing the y into ies :—

| Singular. | Plural.  | Singular. | Plural.  |
|------------------|-----------------|------------------|-----------------|
| Duty             | dut- ies | Army             | arm- ies |
| Fly              | fl- ies  | Lady             | lad- ies |

But if the final y is preceded by a vowel, as in ay, ey, or oy, the Plural is formed by simply adding s to the Singular :—

| Singular. | Plural. | Singular. | Plural.   |
|------------------|----------------|------------------|------------------|
| Day              | day- s  | Monkey           | monkey- s |
| Play             | play- s | Toy              | toy- s    |
| Key              | key- s  | Boy              | boy- s    |

Note.—In colloquy the qu = kw: so y becomes ies.

36. If the Noun ends in o and the o is preceded by a consonant, the Plural is generally (not always) formed by adding es to the Singular :—

| Singular. | Plural.     | Singular. | Plural.     |
|------------------|--------------------|------------------|--------------------|
| Cargo            | cargo- es   | Volcano          | volcano- es |
| Hero             | hero- es    | Potato           | potato- es  |
| Buffalo          | buffalo- es | Echo             | echo- es    |
| Motto            | motto- es   | Negro            | negro- es   |

Note.—The chief exceptions are :—grotto, halo, memento, proviso, tiro, piano, canto, solo.

But if the o is preceded by a vowel, the Plural is formed by simply adding s to the Singular :—

| Singular. | Plural.  | Singular. | Plural.   |
|------------------|-----------------|------------------|------------------|
| Folio            | folio- s | Hindoo           | Hindoo- s |
| Cameo            | cameo- s | Bamboo           | bamboo- s |

37. If the Noun ends in f or fe, the Plural is generally formed by changing f or fe into ves :—

| Singular. | Plural.  | Singular. | Plural.     |
|------------------|-----------------|------------------|--------------------|
| Loaf             | loa- ves | Thief            | thic- ves   |
| Wife             | wi- ves  | Half             | hal- ves    |
| Wolf             | wol- ves | Myself           | oursel- ves |
| Knife            | kni- ves | Shelf            | shel- ves   |
| Life             | liv- es  | Leaf             | lea- ves    |
| Calf             | cal- ves | Sheaf            | shea- ves   |

(a) Some Nouns ending in f form the Plural by adding s :—

| Singular. | Plural. |  | Singular. | Plural. |
|------------------|----------------|--|------------------|----------------|
| Reef             | reef-s         |  | Dwarf            | dwarf-s        |
| Chief            | chief-s        |  | Turf             | turf-s         |
| Roof             | roof-s         |  | Cliff            | cliff-s        |
| Hoof             | hoof-s         |  | Gulf             | gulf-s         |
| Proof            | proof-s        |  | Grief            | grief-s        |

(b) Three Nouns in fe form the Plural by adding s :—

Safe—safe-s ; strife—strife-s ; life—life-s.

38. Peculiar Plurals.—(a) Eight Nouns in common use form the Plural by a change of inside vowel :—

| Singular. | Plural. |  | Singular. | Plural. |
|------------------|----------------|--|------------------|----------------|
| Man              | men            |  | Tooth            | teeth          |
| Woman            | women          |  | Louse            | lice           |
| Foot             | feet           |  | Mouse            | mice           |
| Goose            | geese          |  | Dormouse         | dormice        |

(b) There are three Nouns which form the Plural in en :—

Ox—ox-en ; child—childr-en ; brother—brethr-en.

The word “cow” has two plurals—“cows” or “kine.”

(c) Some Nouns have the same form in both numbers :—

Animals.—Deer, sheep, fish (rarely fishes), swine, grouse, salmon, trout, cod, heathen.

Collective numerals.—Yoke, brace, dozen, score, gross.

Measures of weight.—Stone, hundredweight.

(d) Some Nouns have no Singular :—

|                |          |            |         |
|----------------|----------|------------|---------|
| Arms (weapons) | Entrails | Pincers    | Wages   |
| Ashes          | Fetters  | Scissors   | Tidings |
| Bowels         | Goods    | Spectacles | News    |
| Dregs          | Lungs    | Thanks     | Means   |

Note.—In spite of the Plural form we say, “By this means,” “This news is not true.”

(e) Some Nouns, that take a Plural at ordinary times, use a Singular to express some specific quantity or number :—

A twelve-month. A three-foot rule. An eight-day clock. A six-year old horse. A fort-night (= fourteen nights). Forty head of cattle. Twelve pound weight. Ten sail of the line. A six-penny piece.

Note.—Such a phrase as “A hundred thousand men” does not come under this heading. Here “a hundred thousand” is a Collective noun in the Singular number, and the preposition “of” is understood after it.

(f) A Noun of Multitude, being plural already in sense (§ 24, b), has no need of a plural form :—

The poultry are doing well. These cattle are mine. These vermin do much harm. These people have come. No gentry live here.

(g) We have some plural forms that are merely foreign plurals:—

Latin.—From Sing. in -um:—agenda, addenda, data, effluvia, errata, strata. From Sing. in -us:—alumni, genii, radii. From Sing. in -a: formulae. From other Singular endings:—genera (genus), appendices (appendix), series (series).

Greek.—From Sing. in -is:—analyses, hypotheses, parentheses. From Sing. in -on:—criteria, phenomena.

Italian.—Banditti, dilettanti.

French.—Beaux, bureaux, messieurs, mesdames.

Hebrew.—Cherubim, seraphim.

SECTION 4.—CASE.

39. Case defined.—The relation in which a noun stands to some other word, or the change of form (if any) by which this relation is indicated, is called its Case.<sup>1</sup>

40. Three Cases in modern English.—These are the Nominative, the Possessive, and the Objective.

But the Possessive is the only case that is now indicated by a case-ending or change of form. The other cases have lost their case-endings, and are indicated only by grammatical relation.

Note.—A change of form is called an inflexion. All our noun-inflections except (1) the plural, and (2) the possessive, are lost. The Feminine ending -ess is not an inflexion, but a suffix.

41. When a noun is used as the subject to a verb (§ 3), or for the sake of address, it is said to be in the Nominative case:—

Rain falls. (Nominative of Subject.)

Are you coming, my friend? (Nominative of Address.)

42. When a noun is the object to a verb (§ 6, a), or to a preposition (§ 14), it is said to be in the Objective case:—

The man killed a rat. (Object to Verb.)

The earth is moistened by rain. (Obj. to Prep.)

43. The Possessive case is so called, because it usually denotes the possessor or owner. It is formed by adding 's (called apostrophe s) to Singular nouns, and sometimes to Plural ones:—

Singular—man's. | Plural—men's.

Note 1.—The old inflexion for the Possessive case was es. When the e was omitted, as it now always is, the absence of the e was indicated by the comma or apostrophe; as moon, moons, moon's.

<sup>1</sup> Case lit. means "falling" (Lat. cas-us). The Nom. was considered the upright or perpendicular, and the other cases were said to fall off to one side of it, and were hence called oblique or slanting. Since English nouns have lost every case-ending but one (the Possessive), the term "case" is etymologically inappropriate. We retain it, however, to denote grammatical relation as well as change of form.

Note 2.—There are three different senses in which this case can be used :—

(a) Subjective :—

England's power is very great. (Possession.)

A good son will repay his father's benefits. (Origin.)

Shakspeare's plays are excellent. (Authorship, Agency.)

His friendship (the friendship felt by him) is sincere. (Subject.)

(b) Objective (rather uncommon) :—

His friendship (friendship for him) must be given up.

Cæsar's murderers were conquered at Philippi.

(c) Descriptive (rather uncommon) :—

I'll break your knave's (= knavish) pate.—SHAKSPEARE.

The mother's (motherly) nature of Althæa.—LOWELL.

Her woman's heart, to which love was all, could at first scarcely comprehend the mystery.—MRS. CRAIK, Ogilvies, ch. 1.

44. Omission of "s."—There are three kinds of instances in which the s, but not the apostrophe, is omitted :—

(a) After all plural nouns ending in s; as—

Horses' tails; the birds' nests; the dogs' kennels.

(b) Whenever the last syllable of a Singular noun begins and ends with s; as—

Moses' laws. (But we must say Venus's beauty; James's hat, etc.)

(c) Whenever the last syllable of a Singular noun ends with s or ce, and the noun is followed by "sake"; as—

Conscience' sake; for goodness' sake. (But we must say—a mouse's skin; James's smile.)

45. Rare use of Possessive.—The Possessive case was once used with any kind of noun; but it is now restricted to such examples as those shown below :—

(1) Nouns denoting persons or other kind of living thing; as—

Henry's book; a man's foot. (But we cannot say "a library's book," "the mountain's foot," since "library" and "mountain" are inanimate objects.)

A cat's tail; a horse's head; a bird's feathers.

(2) Nouns denoting personified things; as—

Fortune's favourite; Sorrow's tears; England's heroes.

(3) Nouns denoting time, space, or weight; as—

Time.—A day's journey; a month's holiday; three weeks' leave; a year's absence; at six months' sight; three days' grace.

Space.—A boat's length; a hand's breadth; a hair's breadth; a razor's edge; a stone's throw; a needle's point.

Weight.—A pound's weight; a ton's weight.

(4) Nouns signifying certain dignified objects; as—

The court's decree ; the sun's rays ; the moon's crescent ; nature's works ; the earth's axis ; the soul's delight ; heaven's will ; the law's delays ; truth's triumph ; the mind's eye ; the ocean's roar ; duty's call ; the country's good.

Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's,
Thy God's, and truth's.—Hen. VIII. iii. 2.

Note.—The Possessive is also used in a few familiar phrases, in which it has been retained for the sake of shortness :—

Out of harm's way ; at his wit's end ; for mercy's sake ; he did it to his heart's content ; the ship's passengers ; at his fingers' ends ; he got to his journey's end ; the boat's crew.

CHAPTER IV.—ADJECTIVES.

SECTION 1.—THE KINDS OF ADJECTIVES.

46. There are altogether seven different kinds of Adjectives :—

- (1) Proper : describing a thing by some Proper noun.
- (2) Descriptive : showing of what quality or in what state a thing is.
- (3) Quantitative : showing how much of a thing is meant.
- (4) Numeral : showing how many things or in what order.
- (5) Demonstrative : showing which or what thing is meant.
- (6) Interrogative : asking which or what thing is meant.
- (7) Distributive : showing that things are taken separately or in separate lots.

Proper Adjectives.

47. These restrict the application of a noun to such persons or things as come within the scope of some Proper name :—

A Portuguese sailor = a sailor from Portugal.

The Turkish empire = the empire of the Turks.

The English language = the language of England.

Note.—Proper adjectives, like Proper nouns, may be used in a general sense ; as, French leave (leave like that taken by the French) ; British pluck (pluck like that of a Briton).

Descriptive Adjectives :—Quality or State.

48. These restrict the application of a noun to such persons or things as possess the quality or state denoted by the adjective :—

A brave boy ; a sick lion ; a tame cat ; a large field ; a black horse.

Quantitative Adjectives :—Quantity or Degree.

49. These restrict the application of a noun to such things as are of the quantity or degree denoted by the adjective.

The only adjectives of this class are—Much, little; no or none; some, any; enough or sufficient; all or whole, half.

He ate much (a large quantity of) bread.

He ate little (a small quantity of) bread.

He ate no bread. I had none.

He ate some (a certain quantity of) bread.

He did not eat any (any quantity of) bread.

He ate enough or sufficient bread.

He ate all the (the whole quantity of) bread.

A half holiday is better than none.

Note.—"No" is used when the noun that it qualifies is expressed. "None" is used when no noun is expressed after it.

Numeral Adjectives.

50. These restrict the application of a noun to such persons or things as are of the number or serial order denoted by the adjective.

Numeral Adjectives are subdivided into two main classes :—

I. Definite.

II. Indefinite.

51. Definite numerals denote some exact number.

Those which show how many things there are (as one, two, three, four, etc.) are called Cardinals.

Those which show the serial order are called Ordinals.

Those which show how often a thing is repeated are called Multiplicative.

Cardinals.      Ordinals.

|       |         |
|-------|---------|
| One   | first   |
| Two   | second  |
| Three | third   |
| Four  | fourth  |
| Six   | sixth   |
| Seven | seventh |

Multiplicatives.

|                                      |
|--------------------------------------|
| one only, single                     |
| twofold, double                      |
| threefold, treble, triple            |
| fourfold, quadruple (four times one) |
| sixfold (six times one)              |
| sevenfold (seven times one)          |

52. Indefinite numerals denote number of some kind without saying precisely what the number is :—

All, some, enough, no or none; many, few; several, sundry.

All men are mortal.

Some men die young.

No men were present.

Ten men will be enough.

Many men are poor.

Few men are rich.

Several men came.

Sundry men went away.

A Definite numeral can be made Indefinite by placing the word some or about before it :—

Some twenty men (= about twenty men, twenty men more or less) were present.

53. The words "some," "enough," "all," "no," are adjectives of Number or of Quantity, according to the noun following.

If the noun is Material or Abstract, the adjective is Quantitative. If the noun is Common, the adjective is Numeral :—

Quantitatives.
Much ; he had much bread.
Little ; he had little bread.
Enough ; he had enough bread.
Some ; he had some bread.
No ; he had no bread.
All ; he had all the bread.
Any ; have you had any bread ?

Numerals.
Many ; he had many loaves.
Few ; he had few loaves.
Enough ; he had loaves enough.
Some ; he had some loaves.
No ; he had no loaves.
All ; he had all the loaves.
Any ; did you bring any loaves ?

Demonstrative Adjectives.

54. These restrict the application of a noun to those persons or things that are intended to be pointed out by the adjective.

They are subdivided, like Numerals, into two classes :—

I. Definite.

II. Indefinite.

When a person or thing is pointed out exactly, as “this man,” the adjective is called a Definite Demonstrative.

When it is pointed out in a certain sense, but not exactly, it is called an Indefinite Demonstrative.

| Definite.          |                           | Indefinite.    |                     |
|---------------------------|---------------------------|-----------------------|---------------------|
| Singular.          | Plural.            | Singular.      | Plural.      |
| The                       | the                       | A, an                 | nil.         |
| This                      | these                     | One, any              | any                 |
| That, yon,yonder      | those, yon,yonder     | A certain             | certain             |
| Such                      | such                      | Such and such         | such and such       |
| The same, orself-same | the same, orself-same | Some                  | some                |
| The other                 | the other                 | Another, anyother | other, anyother |

All purely Demonstrative adjectives are given in the above list.

Note.—In some books, however, the Ordinals (§ 51) are classed as Demonstratives, because they point a thing out by showing its place in a list or series. But it is better to call them Numerals, because they cannot show the place of a thing without showing its numerical order.

55. Articles.—“The” (short for this, that) is a Definite Demonstrative. “A” or “an” (short for one) is an Indefinite.

An is used before an open vowel, a silent h, or unaccented h ; as—

An apple ; an heir ; an honest man ; an historical fact.

A is used before a consonant, before u or ew or eu sounded as yoo, and before one sounded as wun :—

A kite ; a cart ; a bottle ; a useful thing ; a one-eyed man ; a European ; a ewer ; an unusual, but a unique case.

Interrogative Adjectives.

56. These restrict the application of a noun by asking a question :—

What book is that ? Which book do you like best ?

Note.—“What” has a general sense, “which” a selective one. “What” can also be used in an exclamatory sense, as “What folly !” It can also be used when no question is asked, as, “I do not know at what time he came.”

Distributive Adjectives.

57. Distributive Adjectives show that the persons or things denoted by the noun are taken singly, or in separate lots. There are only four Adjectives of this class :—

(a) Each.—One of two or of any number exceeding two :—

The two men had each a gun.

The twenty men had each a gun.

(b) Every.—Always used for some number exceeding two :—

Every man (out of the twenty present) had a gun.

“Every six hours” and similar expressions.—This means every space of six hours, six hours being taken collectively as one period :—

He came every five hours (=at the close of every space of five hours).

“Every other.”—This means every second or each alternate ; as—
He was attacked with fever every other day (=on every second day).

(c) Either.—(1) One of two, or (2) each of two,—that is, both.

(1) You can take either side ; that is, one side or the other.

(2) The river overflowed on either side ; that is, on both sides.

(d) Neither.—This is the negative of “either” :—

“You should take neither side” ; neither this nor that.

SECTION 2.—THE TWO USES OF ADJECTIVES.

58. There are two different ways in which an Adjective can be used—(a) the Attributive, and (b) the Predicative.<sup>1</sup>

(a) Attributive use.—An adjective is used attributively, when it qualifies its noun directly, so as to make a kind of compound noun. All true adjectives can be used attributively :—

A lame horse. A noble character. A true tale.

<sup>1</sup> We would not go so far, however, as to say (as Mr. Mason does in English Grammar, p. 37, § 87) “that all true adjectives can be used in both ways.” A Distributive adjective cannot be used predicatively. For instance, we can say “every man,” but we cannot say “man is every.” Again, Quantitatives cannot in all cases be used predicatively. We can say “some bread,” but we cannot say “bread is some.”

Note.—When no noun is expressed, the adjective is used as a noun :—

A noble (=nobleman). The brave (=brave men). The true (=truth).

When an adjective assumes a noun-inflexion, it has become a real noun, and is not merely used as one :—

Nobles (=noblemen). Secrets (= secret things).

(b) Predicative use.—An adjective is used predicatively, when it qualifies its noun indirectly—through some verb going before :—

That horse went lame. His character is noble.

SECTION 3.—COMPARISON OF ADJECTIVES.

59. The degrees of comparison are three in number,—the Positive, the Comparative, and the Superlative.

The Positive denotes the simple quality ; as, “ a beautiful horse.”

The Comparative denotes a higher degree of the quality ; as, “ a more beautiful horse.” This is used when two things are compared.

The Superlative denotes the highest degree of the quality ; as, “ the most beautiful horse.” This is used when one thing is compared with all other things of the same kind.

60. In all adjectives of more than two syllables, and in most adjectives of two syllables, the Comparative is formed by adding “ more ” and the Superlative by adding “ most,” as in § 59.

61. But adjectives of one syllable and some adjectives of two can also form the Comparative by adding er or r, and the Superlative by adding est or st. This is the inflexional method.

(a) If the Positive ends in a consonant, er and est are added :—

|       |         |          |
|-------|---------|----------|
| Small | smaller | smallest |
| Great | greater | greatest |
| Thin  | thinner | thinnest |
| Fat   | fatter  | fattest  |

(b) If the Positive ends in e, only r and st are added, and not er and est :—

|       |        |         |
|-------|--------|---------|
| Brave | braver | bravest |
| True  | truer  | truest  |

(c) If the Positive ends in y, and the y is preceded by a consonant, the y is changed into i, when er and est are added :—

|       |         |          |
|-------|---------|----------|
| Happy | happier | happiest |
| Dry   | drier   | driest   |

(d) If the y is preceded by a vowel, the y is not changed :—

|      |        |         |
|------|--------|---------|
| Gay  | gayer  | gayest  |
| Grey | greyer | greyest |

62. Irregular Comparisons.—In the examples marked *

the Positive has had a Comp. and Superl. allotted to it from some other root :—

|                   |                 |                           |
|-------------------|-----------------|---------------------------|
| Bad, ill, evil *  | worse           | worst                     |
| Fore              | former, further | foremost, first, furthest |
| Good *            | better          | best                      |
| Hind              | hinder          | hindmost                  |
| Late              | later, latter   | latest, last              |
| Little *          | less            | least                     |
| Much (quantity) * | more            | most                      |
| Many (number) *   | more            | most                      |
| Nigh              | nigher          | nighest, next             |
| Old               | older, elder    | oldest, eldest            |

63. There are five words which are adverbs in the Positive degree, but adjectives in the Comparative and Superlative :—

|          |              |                   |
|----------|--------------|-------------------|
| Far      | farther      | farthest          |
| In       | inner        | innermost, inmost |
| Out      | outer, utter | outermost, utmost |
| Be-neath | nether       | nethermost        |
| Up       | upper        | uppermost         |

64. Latin Comparatives.—All of these end in or, and not in er; and all are followed by to instead of than :—

Superior to, inferior to, anterior to, prior to, posterior to, senior to.

CHAPTER V.—PRONOUNS.

65. There are four different kinds of Pronouns :<sup>1</sup>—

- (1) Personal; as, I, thou, he, she, etc.
- (2) Demonstrative; as, this, that, such, one, etc.
- (3) Relative or Conjunctive; as, which, who, that, as, etc.
- (4) Interrogative; as, who? which? what?

<sup>1</sup> A different classification of Pronouns is given in Mason's English Grammar, p. 48, ed. 1891. After giving eight classes of Pronouns, he subdivides each class, wherever this is possible, into two columns, one for Substantive pronouns and the other for Adjective pronouns. Under adjective pronouns he includes Distributive and Demonstrative adjectives, which in this book have already been disposed of in the chapter on Adjectives. It is difficult to see how such adjectives as "every," "each," "some," "other," "any," etc., or, in fact, any adjective, can be correctly called a Pronoun. A Pronoun is a substitute word,—a word used for another word. But "every," "each," "some," "other," "any" are simply qualifying words. They are not substitute words. There are no other words for which they are used as substitutes, and therefore they are not pronouns. The same author has a class of pronouns which he calls Indefinite, and subdivides into Substantives (one, aught, naught) and Adjectives (any, other, some, no). We have already shown that the last four are not pronouns at all. Aught and naught are not pronouns either, because they are not substitutes for any other words. One is a pronoun in certain contexts, as shown below in § 73.

This classification excludes all words that are adjectives, and all words that are not substitutes for other words. It is shown in § 72 that this, that, such are not here adjectives, but substitutes for nouns.

SECTION 1.—PERSONAL PRONOUNS.

66. The Personal Pronouns are so called, because they stand for the three persons, viz.—

(a) The First, which stands for the person speaking:—

I (the person now speaking) hope to win a prize this term.

(b) The Second, which stands for the person spoken to:—

You (the person now spoken to) should leave off this habit of idleness.

(c) The Third, which denotes the person or thing spoken of:—

He (the person already mentioned) did good work with his tutor.

67. Forms of Personal Pronouns.—Personal Pronouns have the same differences of gender, number, and case that nouns have.

I. The First Person, Masculine or Feminine.

| Case.                   | Singular. | Plural.   |
|-------------------------|-----------|-----------|
| Nominative . . . | I         | We        |
| Possessive . . . | My, mine  | Our, ours |
| Objective . . .  | Me        | Us        |

II. The Second Person, Masculine or Feminine.

| Case.                   | Singular.  | Plural.     |
|-------------------------|------------|-------------|
| Nominative . . . | Thou       | Ye or you   |
| Possessive . . . | Thy, thine | Your, yours |
| Objective . . .  | Thee       | You         |

III. The Third Person, of all Genders.

| Case.               | Singular.  |             |         | Plural.         |
|---------------------|------------|-------------|---------|-----------------|
|                     | Masculine. | Feminine.   | Neuter. | All Genders.    |
| Nominative . | He         | She         | It      | They            |
| Possessive . | His        | Her or hers | Its     | Their or theirs |
| Objective .  | Him        | Her         | It      | Them            |

68. Two Forms of Possessive.—Most of the Personal Pronouns have two forms for the Possessive :—

| Singular.                          | Plural. |       |        |
|------------------------------------|---------|-------|--------|
| First Form . My Thy Her     | Our     | Your  | Their  |
| Second ,, . Mine Thine Hers | Ours    | Yours | Theirs |

The first is used, when the Possessive is placed before its noun. It qualifies the noun like an adjective :—

This is my book.

That is their house.

The second is used—(a) when it is separated from the qualified noun by a verb coming between ; (b) when the noun is not expressed ; (c) when the Possessive is preceded by “of” :—

(a) This book is mine. That house is theirs.

(b) My horse and yours (your horse) are both tired.

(c) That horse of yours is tired.

69. Reflexive or Emphatic Forms.—These are made by adding “self” in the Nom. or Obj. and “own” in the Possessive.

I. The First Person.

| Case.                     | Singular.      | Plural.   |
|---------------------------|----------------|-----------|
| Nom. or Obj. . . . | Myself         | Ourselves |
| Possessive . . .   | My or mine own | Our own   |

II. The Second Person.

| Case.                     | Singular.        | Plural.    |
|---------------------------|------------------|------------|
| Nom. or Obj. . . . | Thyself          | Yourselves |
| Possessive . . .   | Thy or thine own | Your own   |

III. The Third Person.

| Case.               | Singular.  |           |         | Plural.      |
|---------------------|------------|-----------|---------|--------------|
|                     | Masculine. | Feminine. | Neuter. | All Genders. |
| Nom. or Obj. | Himself    | Herself   | Itself  | Themselves   |
| Possessive . | His own    | Her own   | Its own | Their own    |

I hid myself (Reflexive).

I myself saw it (Emphatic).

SECTION 2.—DEMONSTRATIVE PRONOUNS.

70. A Demonstrative Pronoun is one that points to some noun going before, and is used instead of it. This noun is called the Antecedent.

71. The chief pronouns of this class are :—this, that, these, those; one, ones, none; such.

The student will have observed that these words have appeared already in the list of Demonstrative Adjectives. Where, then, is the difference? This depends entirely on their use.

When they qualify some noun expressed or understood, they are Adjectives.

When they are substitutes for some noun expressed or understood, they are Pronouns.

(a) He came to my house one day.

Here one is an adjective (Indefinite Demonstrative) qualifying its noun "day."

(b) Your coat is black; mine is a white one.

Here one is a pronoun, because it is a substitute for the previously mentioned noun "coat," and is qualified by the adjective "white."

72. This, that, these, those.—The uses of these words as pronouns, and not as adjectives, are as follows :—

(a) When two nouns have been mentioned in a previous sentence or clause, "this" is a substitute for the latter, and "that" for the former :—

(1) Work and play are both necessary to health; this (=play) gives us rest, and that (=work) gives us energy.

(2) Dogs are more faithful animals than cats; these (=cats) attach themselves to places, and those (=dogs) to persons.

Observe that in the first of these sentences "this" does not specify which or what play is meant, and therefore it is not a Demonstrative Adjective. It is simply put as a substitute for the noun "play," and therefore it is a Demonstrative Pronoun.

A similar explanation holds good for the other example.

(b) The word "that," together with its plural form "those," is used as substitute for a single noun previously mentioned :—

(1) The air of hills is cooler than that (=the air) of plains.

(2) The houses of the rich are larger than those (=the houses) of the poor.

Observe the word "that" in the first example does not qualify the noun "air" by saying which air or what air, and therefore it is not an Adjective. It stands for "air" in general, and is a substitute for the noun "air"; and therefore it is a Pronoun.

(c) The words "this" or "that" can be used as substitutes for a clause or sentence previously mentioned :—

(1) I studied Greek and Latin when I was young, and that (= I studied Greek and Latin) at Oxford.

Here by using the pronoun "that" as a substitute for the sentence "I studied Greek and Latin," we not only avoid repeating this sentence a second time, but we give some emphasis to the words "at Oxford."

(2) Make the best use of your time at school ; that's a wise boy.

Here "that" = "one who makes the best use of his time at school." All this repetition is avoided by using the pronoun "that" as a substitute for the implied sentence.

(3) You paid your debts ; and this (=the payment of your debts) is quite sufficient to prove your honesty.

73. One, ones, none.—When the antecedent noun is in the Singular number, we use "one"; but when the antecedent noun is Plural, we use "ones" :—

(1) He gained a prize last year ; but he did not gain one (= a prize) this term. (Singular.)

(2) There were six lazy boys and four industrious ones (= boys) in our class. (Plural.)

None (= no one) was originally used only as a Singular :—

None but the brave deserves the fair.—DRYDEN.

But "none" has also acquired a Plural meaning :—

None have gone away yet.

74. Such.—"Such" can be substituted for a noun in either number :—

(1) He is the judge appointed to hear this case, and as such (= as the appointed judge) you must not speak to him before the trial. (Singular.)

(2) Kings are constituted such (= kings) by law, and should be obeyed. (Plural.)

Examples for Practice.

Show whether the words printed in italics are Demonstrative Adjectives or Demonstrative Pronouns :—

This horse is stronger than that.

Health is of more value than money ; this cannot give such true happiness as that.

I prefer a white horse to a black one.

You will repent of this one day, when it is too late.

You have kept your promise ; this was all that I asked for.

The faithfulness of a dog is greater than that of a cat.

One Mr. B. helped his friend in need ; that was a true friend.

Return to your work, and that immediately.

Bring me that book, and leave this where it is.

The step you have taken is one of much risk.

Such a book as yours deserves to be well read.

Prosperous men are much exposed to flattery; for such alone can be made to pay for it.

Prosperous men are not always more happy than unlucky ones.

A pale light, like that of the rising moon, begins to fringe the horizon.

Will you ride this horse or that?

A stranger could not be received twice as such in the same house.

The plan you have chosen does not seem to me to be a wise one.

One man says this, another that; whom should I believe?

75. Indefinite Demonstrative Pronouns. — Sometimes Demonstrative Pronouns are used as substitutes, not for some noun previously mentioned, but for some noun understood or implied. These are Indefinite, because they have no antecedent.

All Indefinite pronouns are in the Third person. I and you cannot be indefinite, because we know who is speaking or who is spoken to.

(a) They.—This pronoun is sometimes used for men in general, or some person whose name is purposely concealed:—

They say that truth and honesty is the best policy.

(b) One.—Used in the sense of any person or every person:—

One should take care of one's health.

= A man (any and every man) should take care of his health.

Note 1.—Whenever “one” is the subject to a verb, it must be followed by “one” and not by “he.” Thus we cannot say, “one must take care of his health.”

Note 2.—When they and one are used as above, they are not true pronouns, because strictly speaking they are not substitute words. They are pronouns used as Common nouns.

(c) It.—In such sentences as the following, “it” is the subject to the verb, and the noun or other pronoun is the complement:—

Who is it? It is I. Is it you? No; it is he.

“It” gives emphasis to the noun or pronoun following:—

It was I who told you that. It is the men who work hardest, not the women. It was the queen who died yesterday. It is little things that chiefly disturb the mind.

SECTION 3.—RELATIVE OR CONJUNCTIVE PRONOUNS.

76. A Relative Pronoun not only refers to some noun going before (as a Demonstrative pronoun does), but it also joins two sentences together (which a Demonstrative pronoun does not do).

This is a good house; I live in it. (Demonstrative Pronoun.)

The house in which I live is a good one. (Relative Pronoun.)

77. Who, which.—These are declined as follows for Singular and Plural alike :—

Nom. Who, . . . which.
Poss. Whose, . . . (of which).
Obj. Whom, . . . which.

The forms who, whose, whom are used for persons only. The form which is used for things without life and for animals of any kind except men and women.

In poetry, and occasionally in prose, whose can be used as the Possessive form of which :—

The tree, under whose shade we are sitting.

78. Forms of Antecedent.—The antecedent may have the form of a noun, or any kind of noun-equivalent (§ 3 and § 204).

You have paid your debts, which (=the fact that you have paid your debts) is a clear proof of your honesty. (Clause.)

79. Antecedent understood.—When no antecedent is expressed, the neuter Relative takes the form of “what,” while the Masculine and Feminine retain the form of “who.”

(a) Who = he who, or she who, or they who.

Who (=he who) steals my purse, steals trash.—SHAKSPEARE.

Whom (=those persons whom) the gods love, die young.—Proverb.

(b) What = the thing which, or the things which.

I cannot tell you now what (=the thing which) then happened.

The laws are what (=the things which) you say they are.

(c) So, ever, or soever added to a Relative pronoun or to a Relative adverb gives the meaning of totality :—

Whosoever (=any and every person who) breaks this law will be punished, wherever (in any and every place where) he may live.

Note 1.—“What” has been called a “Compound Relative,” because the antecedent is said to be contained in it. But this is not correct: for the antecedent is sometimes expressed, either (a) in a subsequent clause, or (b) immediately after the Relative itself :—

(a) What I tell you in darkness, that speak ye in the light.

(b) Take what (or whatever) help you can get.

Note 2.—Whenever the antecedent is placed after what or which, as in example (b), the what or which is not a substitute word, and therefore not a true pronoun, but an adjective (see § 56, Note):

Take whichever book (=that book of all others which) you prefer.

80. That.—The word “that” is often used for “who,” “whom,” or “which,” but never for “whose” :—

This is the house that (=which) Jack built.

The man that (=whom) we were looking for has come.

Note.—Whenever “that” is the object to a preposition, the preposition is invariably placed after the verb of its sentence, and never before its own object:—

The house that we live in.

81. As.—The word “as” can be used for a Relative pronoun, provided it is preceded by “such,” or “as,” or “the same.” It may be in the Nominative or the Objective case, but not in the Possessive.

This is not such a good book as I expected.

As many men as came were caught.

Yours is not the same book as mine (is).

82. But.—The conjunction “but,” when some Demonstrative pronoun is understood after it, is used in the sense of “who not” or “which not.”

There was no one present, but saw (=but he saw = who did not see) the deed.

There is no vice so simple, but may (=but it may = which may not) become serious in time.

Note.—The student must avoid the common mistake of saying that but is a “negative relative.” It is simply an Adversative conjunction with some Demonstrative pronoun understood after it. This pronoun is sometimes expressed, as in the common saying—

It never rains, but it pours.

The uses of Who and Which.

83. Restrictive, Continutive.—These words denote two distinct uses of “who” or “which”:—

(a) Restrict.—The man who lived there died yesterday.

(b) Contin.—I have seen my friend, who recognised me at once.

In (a) the Relative clause does the work of an adjective to the noun “man,” because it restricts the application of this noun to that particular man who is said to have “lived there” (see § 4).

In (b) the Relative clause “who recognised me at once” has no restrictive force on the noun “friend.” It simply continues what was said in the previous clause:—“I found my friend, and he (= who) recognised me at once.”

Note.—“Who,” “which” in a restrictive sense are less commonly used than “that,” which is invariably restrictive.

SECTION 4.—INTERROGATIVE PRONOUNS.

84. An Interrogative Pronoun is one that asks a question. It has been well called a pronoun in search of an antecedent.

Who spoke? (Nominative to the verb.)

Of whom did he speak? (Objective after preposition.)

What did he say? (Objective after verb “say.”)

Whose book is that? (Possessive Case.)

Which of these boys will win the prize?

CHAPTER VI.—VERBS.

SECTION 1.—THE KINDS OF VERBS.

85. Verbs are subdivided into three main classes :—

|                     |                    |                      |
|---------------------|--------------------|----------------------|
| Notional or         | } Transitive . . . | Class I.             |
| Principal           |                    | } Intransitive . . . |
| Auxiliary . . . . . |                    |                      |

An explanation of "Notional" is given in § 88, Note.

86. A verb is Transitive, if the action does not stop with the doer, but passes from the doer to something else (see § 6) :—

(1) The man killed a snake.

(2) I do not know whether he has come.

The word or words denoting that person or thing, to which the action of the verb is directed, are called the Object.

87. A verb is Intransitive, when the action stops with the doer, and does not pass from the doer to anything else (§ 6) :—

Men sleep to preserve life.

Sleep what? This is nonsense. No word or words can be placed as object to such a verb as "sleep."

88. An Auxiliary verb is one which (a) helps to form a tense, or a mood, of some Principal verb, and (b) forgoes its own signification as a Principal verb for that purpose :—

A merchant buys that he may sell.

Here may is not used either in its early sense of "power" or in its present sense of "permission." It helps to form a subjunctive.

I have come from home to-day.

Here have forgoes its proper signification—"possession," and helps the verb "come" to form a Present Perfect tense.

Note.—Principal verbs are called "Notional," because (unlike Auxiliaries) they express a notion or full meaning of their own.

SECTION 2.—TRANSITIVE VERBS.

89. Forms of Object.—There are seven forms at least.

(a) Noun :—The man killed a snake with his stick.

(b) Pronoun :—The man lifted me up out of the water.

(c) Adj. used as Noun :—He helped the needy.

(d) Infinitive :—He desires to leave us to-morrow.

(e) Gerund :—He disliked sleeping in the daytime.

(f) Phrase :—No one knew how to make a beginning.

(g) Clause :—We do not know who has come.

Note.—The Relative pronoun as object is often left out :—

The books (that) I bought have been lost.

90. The Double Object.—Some Transitive verbs take two objects, one denoting a thing, and the other a person.

The thing named is called the Direct object; the person or other animal named is called the Indirect (§ 6):—

I forgave him (Indirect) his faults (Direct).

The Indirect always stands first. If it is placed after the Direct, it is preceded by the preposition “for” or “to” :—

He taught Euclid (Direct) to his sons (Indirect).

91. Factitive Verbs.<sup>1</sup>—Those Transitive verbs which take one object only, but still require some other word or words to make the predication complete, are called Factitive (§ 6).

The word or words so added are called the Complement (§ 6).

92. Forms of Complement.—There are at least eight.

|                                      | Subject. | Verb. | Object. | Complement. |
|--------------------------------------|-----------------|--------------|----------------|--------------------|
| Noun . . .                    | They            | made         | him            | king.              |
| Possessive .                  | She             | made         | A.'s quarrel   | her own.           |
| Adjective .                   | The judge       | set          | the prisoner   | free.              |
| Participle .                  | They            | found        | her            | still weeping.     |
| Prep. withObject } | This plot       | filled       | us all         | with terror.       |
| Infinitive .                  | I               | like         | a rascal       | to be punished.    |
| Adverb .                      | They            | found        | the man        | asleep.            |
| Clause .                      | We              | have made    | him            | what he is.        |

Note.—The necessity of adding a Complement to certain verbs, to make the predication complete, can be seen at once from the example, “I like a rascal to be punished.” If you merely say, “I like a rascal,” you are saying the opposite to what you intended: for you do not like a rascal, but a rascal to be punished, or the punishment of a rascal.

93. Transitive Verbs used Intransitively.—There are two ways in which Transitives can become Intransitive :—

(a) When the verb is used in such a general sense that no object or objects are thought of in connection with it :—

Men eat to preserve life (Intr.). He never eats meat (Trans.).

A new-born child sees, but a kitten is born blind.

He writes well (Intr.). He writes a good letter (Trans.).

(b) When the Reflexive pronoun is omitted :—

He drew (himself) near me. He made (himself) merry.

<sup>1</sup> In books on Latin grammar the term “Factitive” is usually limited to those Transitive verbs that are followed by an adjective agreeing with the object, or by a noun in apposition with the object. In English grammar it is more convenient to extend the name to all Transitive verbs that require a complement in any form whatever.

The following are common examples of Transitive verbs which have acquired an Intransitive force by omitting the Reflexive pronoun :—

Transitive Verb.

Get you (yourself) gone.

Give him a penny.

He obtained a place.

The fire burnt up the house.

Do not stop me.

They open the doors at nine.

A man breaks stones with a hammer.

The ox drew this cart.

Move away this stone.

He broke up the meeting.

The mouse steals food.

They bathed the child.

He rolls a ball down the hill.

He burst the door open.

Bad men hide their faults.

He turned me out of the room.

They drop the boat into the water.

They keep the boat on the left bank.

He sets the school in order.

He feeds the horse on grain.

He rested his horse.

He lengthened his journey.

He spread his garment.

The shepherd gathered the sheep.

The wind dispersed the clouds.

He closed the business.

The sun melts the snow.

He dashed down the cup.

We must widen the road.

Lift the box.

Intransitive Counterpart.

Get out of my way.

The shoe gives.

This doctrine obtained (maintained itself) for a long time.

He burnt with rage.

Let us stop here a little.

School opens at ten o'clock.

The day breaks at six.

He drew near to me.

Move on a little faster.

School broke up at three.

The mouse steals into its hole.

Let us bathe here.

The ball rolls down the hill.

The monsoon has burst.

Bats hide during the day.

He turned to me and spoke.

Rain drops from the sky.

The boat keeps on the left bank.

The sun sets at six P.M.

Many men feed on rice.

The horse rested in the stable.

The days begin to lengthen.

The mist spreads over the earth.

The sheep gathered round their shepherd.

The clouds have dispersed from the sky.

The day closed at six P.M.

The snow melts in the sun.

He dashed out of the room.

The road widens at this point.

The fog has lifted.

SECTION 3.—INTRANSITIVE VERBS.

94. Of Complete Predication.—This is the name given to any Intransitive verb, which makes a complete sense by itself, and does not require a Complement :—

Rivers flow. Winds blow. Horses run, or walk, or graze, or lie down. Birds fly. All animals sleep. All animals die.

95. Of Incomplete Predication.—This is the name given to those Intransitive verbs, which do not make a complete sense by themselves, but require a Complement to supply what the verb left unsaid (§ 6). Such verbs are more briefly called Copulative, because they couple one idea with another.

The Complement to Copulative verbs can be in the same eight forms as that to Factitive ones.

|                                      | Subject. | Verb. | Complement.           |
|--------------------------------------|-----------------|--------------|------------------------------|
| Noun . .                      | That beggar     | turned out   | a thief.                     |
| Possessive                    | This book       | is           | mine (§ 68, a), not James's. |
| Adjective .                   | The man         | has fallen   | sick.                        |
| Participle                    | The stag        | continued    | running and jumping.         |
| Prep. withObject } | That book       | proved       | of no use.                   |
| Infinitive                    | The flower      | seems        | to be fading.                |
| Adverb .                      | The man         | has fallen   | asleep.                      |
| Clause .                      | The results     | are          | what we expected.            |

Note 1.—When the Complement comes after a Copulative verb, it is called a Subjective Complement, because it relates to the Subject.

But when it comes after a Factitive verb in the Active voice, it is called an Objective Complement, because it relates to the Object.

Note 2.—The same verb, whether Trans. or Intrans., may in different connections be either complete or incomplete predicates:—

|   |  |         |           |
|---|--|---------|-----------|
| { | The world is (exists)           | . . . . | (Comp.)   |
| { | The world is round              | . . . . | (Incomp.) |
| { | They made a snow-man            | . . . . | (Comp.)   |
| { | They made him king              | . . . . | (Incomp.) |
| { | The tree is growing             | . . . . | (Comp.)   |
| { | He is growing strong            | . . . . | (Incomp.) |
| { | The water filled the pipe       | . . . . | (Comp.)   |
| { | They filled the pipe with water | . . . . | (Incomp.) |

96. The Cognate Object.—An Intransitive verb, though it is never followed by a noun denoting an outside or foreign object, may sometimes be followed by a noun already implied more or less in the verb itself. (“Cognate” means “kindred.”)

There are five different forms of Cognate object:—

(a) Cognate noun formed directly from the verb.

|                                    |  |                                      |
|------------------------------------|--|--------------------------------------|
| He laughed a hearty laugh . |  | He slept a sound sleep .      |
| He died a sad death .       |  | He prayed an earnest prayer . |
| He lived a long life .      |  | He sighed a deep sigh .       |

(b) Cognate noun of similar meaning.

|                                  |  |                                      |
|----------------------------------|--|--------------------------------------|
| He went a long way .      |  | He ran his own course .       |
| He fought a hard battle . |  | It blows a brisk gale .       |
| He struck a deadly blow . |  | The bells ring a merry peal . |

(c) A noun descriptive of the Cognate noun understood.

|  |
|--|
| They shouted applause = they shouted a shout of applause.              |
| He served his apprenticeship = he served his service as an apprentice. |
| He ran a great risk = he ran a course of great risk.                   |

He played the fool = he played the part of a fool.
 He looked daggers at me = he looked me a look of daggers.

(d) An adjective qualifying the Cognate noun understood.

He shouted his loudest (shout). He ran his fastest (run or pace).
 He fought his best (fight). She sang her sweetest (song). He breathed his last (breath). He tried his hardest (trial or attempt).

(e) Cognate noun expressed by "it."

We must fight it (= the fight) out to the end.
 Lord Angelo dukes it (= acts the part of a duke) well.—SHAKESPEARE.

97. Reflexive Object.—In older English, Intrans. verbs were often followed by a Personal pronoun, either reflexive or used reflexively, in the objective case. Examples still occur:—

Hie thee home. Fare thee well. Haste thee away. They sat them down. He over-ate himself. To over-sleep oneself. Vaulting ambition which o'erleaps itself.—SHAKESPEARE.

98. Intransitive Verbs in Causal sense.—An Intrans. verb, used in a causal sense, becomes Transitive.

Intransitive.

The horse trotted out.

Water boils.

The prisoners walk out.

A thorn ran into his hand.

That horse will starve.

The bell rang twice.

The kite flew into the air.

The soldiers march out.

Wheat grows in the field.

The boat floated.

He talks hoarsely.

Causal.

They trotted out the horse (= caused it to trot out).

He boils the water.

He walks out the prisoners.

He ran a thorn into his hand.

Do not starve the horse.

Ring the bell.

He flew the kite.

He marches out the soldiers.

He sows wheat in the field.

He floated the boat.

He talks himself hoarse (= he makes himself hoarse by talking).

99. There are a few Intransitive verbs, in which the causal sense is indicated by some change of vowel.

Intransitive.

The tree falls.

The sun will rise at six.

The cow lies on the grass.

We must not sit here.

He will fare well.

The enemy quails.

Transitive or Causal.

He falls the tree with an axe.

I cannot raise this box.

The man lays down his coat.

He sets the books in order.

He will ferry me over.

He quells the enemy.

100. Prepositional Verbs.—An Intransitive verb can be made Transitive by adding a preposition to it. Such verbs are real Transitives, if they can be used in the Passive voice.

- { We act on this rule. (Active.)
 { This rule is acted on by us. (Passive.)
 { No one relies on his word. (Active.)
 { His word cannot be relied on. (Passive.)

Observe that when the verb is in the Passive voice, the on cannot be parsed as a preposition, since there is no object to it. It must therefore be parsed as part of the verb itself.

Note 1.—In prepositional verbs, the preposition is almost always placed after the verb; but “with” and “over” are often placed before it:—

- He withstood (stood against, endured) the attack.
 He was overcome (defeated) by the enemy.
 The banks were overflowed (inundated) with water.
 The field is overgrown (covered) with weeds.
 The boundary has been overstepped (transgressed).

All these verbs, when they are used apart from the preposition, are Intransitive. It is the preposition which makes them Transitive.

Note 2.—It sometimes happens that the preposition after the Intransitive verb is not expressed, but the verb is none the less followed by an object:—

- They laughed (at) him to scorn. He looked (at) me in the face.
 Leonidas fought (against) the Persians at Thermopylæ.
 I cannot sit (on) that horse.
 I cannot stand (with-stand) your impertinence.

101. Summary.—There are thus two ways in which an Intransitive verb can become Transitive—(1) when it is used in a Causal sense (§ 98); (2) when it is connected with a preposition so closely that the verb, compounded with the preposition, can be made Passive (§ 100).

Similarly, there are two kinds of objects that can come after an Intransitive verb, although the verb itself continues to be Intransitive—(1) the Cognate object (§ 96); (2) the Reflexive or Personal object (§ 97).

SECTION 4.—AUXILIARY VERBS.

102. List of Auxiliary Verbs.—The Auxiliary verbs make up a very small class:—have, be, shall, will, may, do—only six, all told.

But their fewness is compensated by their usefulness; for no Transitive or Intransitive verb can be conjugated without them, except in two tenses, the Present and Past Indefinite.

Note 1.—Have, be are always followed by Participles. The other Auxiliaries are always followed by Infinitives.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> The Infinitive that follows all the Auxiliaries except be and have might be parsed (if we wish to parse it separately) as the object to the Auxiliary verb going before: thus in “I shall go,” go is object to the

Note 2.—Auxiliary verbs help not only Principal verbs, but one another. “I shall have been going”; here three Auxiliaries combine to form a single tense. Shall is followed by an Infinitive have; have is followed by a Participle been. The last Auxiliary “been” is then followed, as per rule in Note 1, by a Participle, “going.”

Note 3.—Can, ought, and must, though Defective, are Principal verbs. Lct is also a Principal verb. They are not Auxiliary—(a) because they do not help to form any tense, mood, or voice; and (b) because they do not discard their meanings as Notional verbs for auxiliary purposes. The Infinitive that follows is their object, as in the case of shall, will, may, do.

103. Auxiliary and Principal.—The same verb may be an Auxiliary at one time and a Principal at another:—

|       |   |   |              |
|-------|---|---|--------------|
| Have  | { | I had a fine horse . . . . .                        | (Principal.) |
|       |   | I had gone away . . . . .                           | (Auxiliary.) |
| Be    | { | The earth is (exists). A horse is a quadruped       | (Principal.) |
|       |   | He was going. He is loved . . . . .                 | (Auxiliary.) |
| Shall | { | You shall leave the house (Command, Authority)      | (Principal.) |
|       |   | I shall leave the house (Simple Futurity) . . . . . | (Auxiliary.) |
| Will  | { | I will go to-day (Determination) . . . . .          | (Principal.) |
|       |   | You will go to-day (Simple Futurity) . . . . .      | (Auxiliary.) |
| May   | { | I may go (=am permitted to go) . . . . .            | (Principal.) |
|       |   | He works that he may live (Purpose) . . . . .       | (Auxiliary.) |
| Do    | { | You did that work well . . . . .                    | (Principal.) |
|       |   | You did indeed work hard . . . . .                  | (Auxiliary.) |

Note.—Be as a Principal verb has two uses, as below:—

- (a) There are some who deny this . . . . . (Complete predication.)
- (b) This coat is of many colours . . . . . (Incomplete predication.)

As an Auxiliary, it helps to form all tenses in Passive verbs, and all continuous tenses in Active ones.

Have as a Principal verb denotes possession:—“I have a watch.” As an Auxiliary it helps to form all the Perfect tenses, in all the Moods, Active and Passive; of all verbs, Transitive and Intransitive.

Shall as a Principal verb denotes command; should denotes duty.

Thou shalt not steal. He should do it at once.

As an Auxiliary, “shall” helps to form the first person, Future, Indicative (§ 115), and “should” to form any person in the Subjunctive mood (§ 122):—“He worked hard lest he should fail.”

Will as a Principal verb denotes intention, and would denotes habit.

- I will never do such a thing again . . . . . (Intention.)
- The dog would come every day to the door . . . . . (Habit.)

verb shall. This, at all events, is the way in which the Future tense came into existence. Nevertheless, we cannot consider the verb shall to be an ordinary Transitive. We must still call it an Auxiliary for two reasons—(1) because it helps to form a tense; (2) because it foregoes its own meaning for an auxiliary purpose. Has, when it is not an Auxiliary, is a full Transitive verb signifying “possesses.” We cannot, however, parse it as a Transitive in “He has gone,” Pres. Perf. tense.

As an Auxiliary, “will” helps to form the second and third persons Future (§ 115), Indicative, and “would” to form the same persons of the Subjunctive (§ 122).

May, might, as a Principal verb denotes permission or possibility.

You may now go. (Permission.) It may be true. (Possibility.)

As an Auxiliary, “may” expresses a wish, and “may” and “might” express a purpose;—both in the Subjunctive mood (§ 122).

Do, did.—On the Auxiliary uses, see below (§ 114 and § 119).

“Do” is also used as a Pro-verb, i.e. a substitute verb, and in this capacity it saves the repetition of some Principal verb going before; as, “I awoke at six A.M., and so did (=awoke) you”; “He worked more industriously than his brother does (=works).”

SECTION 5.—ACTIVE AND PASSIVE VOICES.

104. A Transitive verb has two voices, the Active and the Passive.

In the Active voice the person or thing denoted by the Subject is said to do something to something else:—

Tom kills a snake. (Here Tom does something to a snake.)

In the Passive voice the person or thing is said to suffer something from something else:—

A snake is killed by Tom. (Here a snake suffers something from Tom.)

Note.—Active (from Latin “activus”) means “doing.” Passive (from Latin “passivus”) means “suffering.”

105. An Intransitive verb is not used in the Passive voice, unless it takes a Cognate object in the Active:—

The Athenians fought a hard battle at Marathon. (Active.)

A hard battle was fought by the Athenians at Marathon. (Passive.)

Here the subject “battle” does not really suffer anything. Nevertheless, the verb “fight,” although it is Intransitive, can be conjugated all through the Passive voice in the third Person. It has no Passive forms, however, in the first and second Persons. In the third person it is conjugated throughout.

106. Retained Object.—Verbs that take two objects in the Active can still retain one in the Passive.

(a) The Indirect object of the Active verb; as—

|                                   |   |
|-----------------------------------|---|
| Active Verb.               | Passive Verb.                      |
| I forgave him his fault.   | The fault was forgiven him by me.  |
| We allowed him two pounds. | Two pounds were allowed him by us. |

Or (b) the Direct object of the Active verb; as—

|                                    |   |
|------------------------------------|---|
| Active Verb.                | Passive Verb.                    |
| I forgave him his fault .   | He was forgiven his fault by me. |
| We allowed him two pounds . | He was allowed two pounds by us. |

Note 1.—It has now been shown that there are five different kinds of objects which can be used with verbs :—

- (1) Direct (with Trans. verbs).—He taught Euclid (§ 90).
- (2) Indirect (with Trans. verbs).—He taught his sons Euclid (§ 90).
- (3) Retained (with Pass. verbs).—His sons were taught Euclid (§ 106).
- (4) Cognate (with Intrans. verbs).—The fever must run its course (§ 96).
- (5) Reflexive (with Intrans. verbs).—He sat himself down (§ 97).

In (1), (3), and (4) the verbs are followed by a Direct object ; in (2) and (5) by an Indirect. It should be also noted that in (3) the verb is Transitive without being Active, while in (4) it is Active without being Transitive.

Note 2.—Whenever a Factitive verb is changed from the Active voice to the Passive, the Objective Complement becomes Subjective.

Active : Comp. to Object.

They proclaimed him king.
They did not crown him king.

Passive : Comp. to Subject.

He was proclaimed king by them.
He was not crowned king by them.

107. Verbs Active in form, but Passive in sense.—

Transitive verbs, Active, are sometimes used in a Passive sense.

(a) Verbs with a Complement :—

- The stone feels rough (is rough when it is felt).
Honey tastes sweet (is sweet when it is tasted).
The milk smells sour (is sour when it is smelt).
Your blame counts for nothing (is worth nothing when it is counted).
Your composition reads well (sounds well when it is read).
The house does not let (is not taken when it is meant to be let).
The horse does not sell (is not taken when it is meant to be sold).
That cloth will wear thin (will become thin when it is worn).

(b) Verbs without a Complement :—

- The house is building (= is in a state of being built).
The trumpets are sounding (= are being sounded).
The cannons are firing (= are being fired).
The drums are beating (= are being beaten).
The house is finishing (= is being finished).
The book is printing (= is being printed).
The cows are milking (= are being milked).

Note.—The generally received and best supported opinion regarding this construction is that what looks like a present participle is in reality a gerund, with the preposition on or in omitted.

This house was three years in building (Ger. or Verbal noun).

Others, however, think that it is a real Active participle used in a Passive sense, like the verbs in examples (a).<sup>1</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> The word ending in -ing must certainly be a participle in such colloquialisms as "I want a button sewing on." In such a sentence as "The wall is rapidly building," building must certainly be parsed as a participle, as otherwise the adverb rapidly could not be parsed.

SECTION 6.—MOODS AND TENSES, ACTIVE AND PASSIVE.

108. Moods.—Mood means the mode or manner in which an action is spoken of. There are three Finite moods (i.e. limited by number and person), and one Infinitive (not so limited).

(a) Three Finite moods :—

1. Indicative, the mood of Assertion or Inquiry.—He comes.
2. Imperative, the mood of Command or Advice.—Come.
3. Subjunctive, the mood of Supposition.—If he come.

(b) Infinitive mood . . . . . To come.

109. Number and Person.—The number and person of a Finite verb depend upon the nature of its Subject.

|        |   |  |
|--------|---|--|
| Number | { | If the subject is Singular, the verb must be Singular ; as,Rain is falling.                                   |
|        |   | If the subject is Plural, the verb must be Plural ; as,Raindrops are falling.                                 |
| Person | { | If the subject is in the First person, the verb must be in the First person ; as, I love. We come.                       |
|        |   | If the subject is in the Second person, the verb must be in the Second person ; as, Thou lovest. You come.               |
|        |   | If the subject is in the Third person, the verb must be in the Third person ; as, He loves. The teacher has come. |

Hence arises the following rule (which is called a Concord or Agreement) :—A Finite verb must be in the same number and person as its Subject.

110. Tense defined.—Tense is the form assumed by a verb (by means of inflexion or with the help of Auxiliaries) for indicating either (a) the time in which an event occurred, or (b) the degree of completeness ascribed to an event at the time of its occurrence

The verb may tell you :—

- (1) That an action is done in Present time ; as, “ he comes.”
- (2) That it was done in Past time ; as, “ he came.”
- (3) That it will be done in Future time ; as, “ he will come.”

111. To each tense there are four different forms :—

I. Indefinite ; which denotes Present, Past, or Future time in its simplest form ; the degree of completeness is left indefinite ; as, “ I see,” “ I saw,” “ I shall see.”

II. Continuous ; which denotes that the event (in Present, Past, or Future time) is still continuing, and is not yet completed ; as, “ I am seeing,” “ I was seeing,” “ I shall be seeing.”

Note.—This tense is sometimes called the Imperfect, because it denotes an event which is imperfect or not completed.

III. Perfect ; which denotes that the event (in Present, Past, or Future time) is in a completed or perfect state ; as, “I have seen,” “I had seen,” “I shall have seen.”

IV. Perfect Continuous ; which combines the meanings of the two preceding forms ; as, “I have been seeing,” “I had been seeing,” “I shall have been seeing.”

COMPLETE CONJUGATION OF A VERB IN THE FINITE MOODS.

In this scheme 1 stands for First person (I, we) ; 2 for Second person (thou, you) ; 3 for Third person (he, she, it, they). The non-Finite parts of a verb are shown in sections 10, 11, 12.

From the following scheme it will be seen that the only tenses formed by inflexion are two in number, viz. the Present Indefinite and the Past Indefinite, Active voice, in the Indicative and Subjunctive moods.

All the other tenses in the Active voice, and all the tenses in the Passive voice without any exception, are formed by means of Auxiliary verbs (§ 102).

A. ACTIVE VOICE OF Do.

I.—Indicative Mood.

| Tense.  | Singular.     |                       |                            | Plural.              |                   |       |
|---------|---------------|-----------------------|----------------------------|----------------------|-------------------|-------|
|         | 1             | 2                     | 3                          | 1                    | 2                 | 3     |
| Present | Indefinite .  | do                    | doest or dost <sup>1</sup> | does                 | do                |       |
|         | Continuous .  | am doing              | art doing                  | is doing             | are doing         |       |
|         | Perfect .     | have done             | hast done                  | has done             | have done         |       |
|         | Perf. Cont. . | have been doing       | hast been doing            | has been doing       | have been doing   |       |
| Past    | Indefinite .  | did                   | didst                      | did                  | did               |       |
|         | Continuous .  | was doing             | wast doing                 | was doing            | were doing        |       |
|         | Perfect .     | had done              | hadst done                 | had done             | had done          |       |
|         | Perf. Cont. . | had been doing        | hadst been doing           | had been doing       | had been doing    |       |
| Future  | Indefinite .  | shall do              | wilt do                    | will do              | 1. shall } do     |       |
|         | Continuous .  | shall be doing        | wilt be doing              | will be doing        | 2, 3. will } be   |       |
|         | Perfect .     | shall have done       | wilt have done             | will have done       | 1. shall } doing  |       |
|         | Perf. Cont. . | shall have been doing | wilt have been doing       | will have been doing | 2, 3. will } have |       |
|         |               |                       |                            |                      | 1. shall } done   |       |
|         |               |                       |                            |                      | 2, 3. will } have |       |
|         |               |                       |                            |                      | 2, 3. will } been |       |
|         |               |                       |                            |                      |                   | doing |

<sup>1</sup> When “do” is used as an Auxiliary (§ 103), the form is dost ; when it is used as a Notional or Principal verb (§ 85), or as a Pro-verb (§ 103), the form is doest. In all other respects the Auxiliary and the Principal forms are identical.

II.—Subjunctive Mood.

| Tense.        | Singular.                 |                        |                         | Plural.1 2 3      |   |
|---------------|---------------------------|------------------------|-------------------------|-----------------------|---|
|               | 1                         | 2                      | 3                       |                       |   |
| Present       | Indefinite .              | do                     | do                      | do                    | dobe doinghave donehave been doing  |
|               | Continuous .              | be doing               | be doing                | be doing              |   |
|               | Perfect . .               | have done              | have done               | have done             |   |
|               | Perf. Cont. .             | have been doing        | have been doing         | have been doing       |   |
| Simple Past   | Indefinite .              | were doing             | (Same as Indicative)    | were doing            | were doing  |
|               | Continuous .              |                        | wert doing              |                       |   |
|               | Perfect . .               |                        | (Same as Indicative)    |                       |   |
|               | Perf. Cont. .             |                        | (Same as Indicative)    |                       |   |
| Compound Past | Indefinite <sup>1</sup> . | should do              | wouldst do              | would do              | 1. should } do2, 3. would }1. should } be2, 3. would } doing1. should } have2, 3. would } done1. should } have2, 3. would } beendoing |
|               | Continuous .              | should be doing        | wouldst be doing        | would be doing        |   |
|               | Perfect <sup>2</sup> . .  | should have done       | wouldst have done       | would have done       |   |
|               | Perf. Cont. .             | should have been doing | wouldst have been doing | would have been doing |   |

III.—Imperative Mood.

Present Singular 2. do (thou).

Plural 2. do (ye or you).

B. PASSIVE VOICE OF See.

This, if we omit the Past Participle “seen,” gives a complete conjugation of the Finite moods of the verb “to be.”

I.—Indicative Mood.

| Tense.  | Singular.     |                      |                     | Plural.1 2 3    |  |
|---------|---------------|----------------------|---------------------|---------------------|--|
|         | 1             | 2                    | 3                   |                     |  |
| Present | Indefinite .  | am seen              | art seen            | is seen             | are seenare being seenhave been seen                                       |
|         | Continuous .  | am being seen        | art being seen      | is being seen       |  |
|         | Perfect . .   | have been seen       | hast been seen      | has been seen       |  |
|         | Perf. Cont. . |                      | (None)              |                     |  |
| Past    | Indefinite .  | was seen             | wast seen           | was seen            | were seenwere being seenhad been seen                                      |
|         | Continuous .  | was being seen       | wast being seen     | was being seen      |  |
|         | Perfect . .   | had been seen        | hadst been seen     | had been seen       |  |
|         | Perf. Cont. . |                      | (None)              |                     |  |
| Future  | Indefinite .  | shall be seen        | wilt be seen        | will be seen        | 1. shall } be2, 3. will } seen1. shall } have2, 3. will } beenseen |
|         | Continuous .  |                      | (None)              |                     |  |
|         | Perfect . .   | shall have been seen | wilt have been seen | will have been seen |  |
|         | Perf. Cont. . |                      | (None)              |                     |  |

<sup>1</sup> This tense, though it has the Past forms should, would, can be used to denote a conditional or contingent futurity, and hence it is sometimes called the Subjunctive future, answering to the Indicative future shall, will, “should” being substituted for “shall,” and “would” for “will” —

I shall do this, if you will let me—Indic. Future.

I should do this, if you would let me—Subjunct. Future.

<sup>2</sup> On the other hand, the Perfect forms denote a conditional past, as is shown below in § 122 (3). The Perfect forms cannot be used in a future sense, but only in a past sense.

II.—Subjunctive Mood.

| Tense.          | Singular.              |                       |                        | Plural.              |  |   |
|-----------------|------------------------|-----------------------|------------------------|----------------------|--|---|
|                 | 1                      | 2                     | 3                      | 1                    | 2  | 3 |
| Present {       | Indefinite . .  | be seen               | be seen                | be seen              | be seen  |   |
|                 | Continuous .    |                       | (None)                 |                      |  |   |
|                 | Perfect . . .   | have been seen        | have been seen         | have been seen       | have been seen                                 |   |
|                 | Perf. Cont. . . |                       | (None)                 |                      |  |   |
| Simple Past {   | Indefinite . .  | were seen             | were seen              | were seen            | were seen                                      |   |
|                 | Continuous .    | were being seen       | were being seen        | were being seen      | were being seen                                |   |
|                 | Perfect . . .   |                       | (Same as Indicative)   |                      |  |   |
|                 | Perf. Cont. . . |                       | (None)                 |                      |  |   |
| Compound Past { | Indefinite . .  | should be seen        | wouldst be seen        | would be seen        | 1. should } be2, 3. would } seen           |   |
|                 | Continuous .    |                       | (None)                 |                      |  |   |
|                 | Perfect . . .   | should have been seen | wouldst have been seen | would have been seen | 1. should } have2, 3. would } beenseen |   |
|                 | Perf. Cont. . . |                       | (None)                 |                      |  |   |

III.—Imperative Mood.

Present Singular 2. be (thou) seen.

Plural 2. be (ye or you) seen.

SECTION 7.—INDICATIVE MOOD.

112. The Present Indefinite can be used to denote :—

(a) What is always and necessarily true :—

The sun shines by day and the moon by night.

(b) What is habitual in life or character :—

He keeps his promises. He has good health.

(c) What is present, if this is helped by the context :—

I understand what you say. The door is open.

(d) What is future, if this is helped by the context :—

When do you (=will you) start for Edinburgh ?

(e) What is past, provided that the event is known to be past. (This is called the Historic Present.)

Baber now leads (=then led) his men through the Khyber Pass, and enters (=entered) the plains of India.

113. The Perfect tenses are used as follows :—

(1) The Present Perfect connects a past event in some sense or other with present time :—

The British Empire in India has succeeded to the Mogul.

The series of events by which the British Empire superseded the Mogul took place more than a century ago. The events are therefore long past. But the state of things arising out of these past events is still present. The British Empire still exists. Hence it is right to say "has succeeded."

Some Intransitive verbs (Transitive ones never), and especially those Intransitive verbs that signify going, coming, becoming, changing, etc., may use the Auxiliary is instead of has, and was instead of had :—

(a) The flower is faded. (b) The flower has faded.

In (a), however, the state of the flower (faded) is more prominently indicated; in (b) the time of the fading. So the two sentences are not quite equivalent.

(2) The Past Perfect (called also the Pluperfect) is never used, except when we wish to say that some action was either (a) completed, or (b) supposed to be completed, before another was commenced :—

(a) He had been ill two days, when the doctor was sent for. (Fact.)

(b) If I had seen him, I should have known him. (Supposition.)

(3) The Future Perfect denotes the completion of some event (a) in future time, (b) in past time :—

(a) He will have reached home before the rain sets in.

(b) You will have heard this news already; so I need not repeat it.

It seems like a contradiction to make a Future tense have reference to Past tense. But the future here implies an inference regarding something which is believed to have passed rather than past time itself. "You will have heard" means "I infer or believe that you have heard."

114. Do and Did.—The Present and Past Indefinite in the Active voice can also be formed by the Auxiliary "do" (§ 103).

Present Tense.

|            | Singular. | Plural.    |
|------------|------------------|-------------------|
| 1st Person | I do love        | We do love        |
| 2nd ,,     | Thou dost love   | Ye or you do love |
| 3rd ,,     | He does love     | They do love      |

Past Tense.

|            | Singular. | Plural.     |
|------------|------------------|--------------------|
| 1st Person | I did love       | We did love        |
| 2nd ,,     | Thou didst love  | Ye or you did love |
| 3rd ,,     | He did love      | They did love      |

This form is used for three different purposes :—

(a) For the sake of emphasis; as, "I do love," "I did love."

(b) For the sake of bringing in the word "not"; as, "I do not love" (which is better than saying "I love not"), "I did not love" (which is better than saying "I loved not").

(c) For the sake of asking a question; as, "Does he love?" "Why did he love?" "Did he not love?"

115. Shall and Will.—Beginners are sometimes puzzled to know when to use “shall” and when to use “will.”

It should be understood that there are three senses in which the future tense can be used :—

- (a) To express merely future time, and nothing more.
- (b) To combine future time with an implied command.
- (c) To combine future time with an implied intention.

(a) Merely future time.

When nothing but future time is intended—mere futurity, without any idea of command or intention being mixed up with it—shall must be used for the First person, and will for the Second and Third persons, as below :—

|            | Singular.    | Plural.        |
|------------|---------------------|-----------------------|
| 1st Person | I shall go   | We shall go    |
| 2nd „      | Thou will go | You will go    |
| 3rd „      | He will go   | * They will go |

In these persons shall and will are strictly tense-forming, that is, Auxiliary verbs (see §§ 102, 103).

(b) An Implied Command, Promise, or Threat.

Whenever we desire to express, not merely future time, but some command, or promise, or threat in addition, shall is put for will in the Second and Third persons ;<sup>1</sup> as—

- You shall be hanged (by some one’s command).
- You shall receive your prize to-morrow (promise).
- If you do this, you shall be hanged (threat).

In these examples, the shall is not a tense-forming or Auxiliary verb, but a Principal or Notional one (see §§ 102, 103).

(c) An Implied Intention.

When the speaker wishes to express some intention of his own, then will is put for shall in the First person :<sup>1</sup>—

I will call on you to-day, and I shall then say good-bye.

Here will denotes the intention of calling, while shall denotes merely future time. Therefore will is a Principal verb, and shall is an Auxiliary.

Note.—In a command, promise, threat, or intention there is necessarily some sense of futurity. Nevertheless, the verb shall in all such contexts as (b) and will in such a context as (c) are in the

---

<sup>1</sup> In Old Eng. sceal (shall) means “I must,” “I owe,” “I am liable for” ; and this sense is maintained, wherever this verb is used in the Second and Third persons. Will in Old Eng. means to intend or desire ; and this sense is maintained, whenever this verb is used in the First person. But these senses are not maintained, when shall is used in the First person, and will in the Second and Third. The verbs have then become Auxiliary, that is, they have discarded their original meanings in order to help other verbs to express future time (§ 88).

Present tense, not in the Future. They are simply Notional verbs (Transitive) in the Present tense, and the Infinitive following is their object.

SECTION 8.—IMPERATIVE MOOD.

116. The Imperative mood is used only in the Present tense, Second person : the Subject is seldom expressed.

|                  |                |
|------------------|----------------|
| Singular. | Plural. |
| Speak.           | Speak.         |

117. To express our will in connection with the First or Third person we either (a) use the Transitive verb let, which is itself the Second person of the Imperative mood of the verb “to let,” or (b) we employ the Subjunctive mood :—

|                       |                  |                |
|-----------------------|------------------|----------------|
|                       | Singular. | Plural. |
| (a) 1st Person | Let me speak     | Let us speak   |
| 3rd „          | Let him speak    | Let them speak |

(b) Every soldier kill his prisoner.—SHAKESPEARE.

Thither our path lies ; wind we up the height.—BROWNING.

The Third person of the Subjunctive occurs in the common phrase suffice it, which means “let it suffice,” “let it be sufficient” :—

Suffice it to say that all the prisoners were acquitted.

Note.—In such a construction as Let me speak, “speak” (Inf.) is the direct object to “let,” and “me” the indirect.

118. The chief uses of the Imperative mood are to express (a) command, (b) precept, or (c) entreaty :—

(a) Command :—

Awake, arise, or be for ever fallen.—MILTON.

(b) Precept or Invitation :—

Go to the ant, thou sluggard ; consider her ways and be wise.
—Old Testament.

(c) Entreaty or Prayer :—

Give us this day our daily bread.—Lord's Prayer.

119. When the verb is negative, that is, prohibitive, the Imperative is now formed by the Auxiliary “do.” See § 114 (b).

|                      |                                |
|----------------------|--------------------------------|
| Older Form.   | Present Form.           |
| Fear not.            | Do not fear.            |
| Taste not that food. | Do not taste that food. |

Note.—Sometimes, even when the verb is affirmative, the Imperative is formed by “do,” in order to give more emphasis to an entreaty. This, however, occurs only in colloquial English :—

Do help me to lift this box.

120. The Imperative mood is sometimes used to express a Supposition :—

Take care of the pence, and the pounds will take care of themselves
(= If you take care of the pence, the pounds will, etc.).

121. Sometimes an Imperative is used absolutely; i.e. in isolation from the rest of the sentence :—

A large number of men, say a hundred, are working on the railroad.

SECTION 9.—SUBJUNCTIVE MOOD.

122. The Subjunctive mood expresses a purpose, a wish, a condition, or a doubt, anything rather than a fact.

(1) A Purpose.

In this case the verb in the Subjunctive mood is preceded by the conjunction that or lest (lest = that not). The Auxiliary verbs "may" and "might" are used after "that," and "should" after "lest."

|                         | Indicative.                               |   | Subjunctive: Purpose.  |
|-------------------------|--|---|---|
| PresentorFuture | { I give you a prize,I shall keep your book, | . | { that you may work well again.lest you should lose it.that you may not lose it. |
|                         |  |   |   |

Note.—In the Tudor Period, and somewhat beyond it, the Subjunctive of purpose was commonly expressed in the Present Indefinite tense, without the help of the Auxiliary "may":—

Love not sleep, lest thou come to poverty.—Old Test.

Speak to my brother, that he divide the inheritance with me.

—New Test.

(2) A Wish or Order.

To express a wish or order, there are two forms of the Subjunctive that may be used: either (a) the simple form, without an Auxiliary; or (b) the compound form, with the Auxiliary "may":—

Thy kingdom come, thy will be done.

May he live long and see not the grave!

I wish that he were as clever as his sister.

Far be it from me to say anything false.

My sentence is that the prisoner be hanged.

(3) Condition and its Consequence.

When the verb expresses a condition, it is generally preceded by the conjunction "if." The verb denoting the consequence is expressed by the Auxiliary "would" in the Second and Third persons, and by "should" in the First:—

First Sentence: Condition.

Second Sentence: Consequence.

|                         |  |   |  |   |  |
|-------------------------|--|---|--|---|--|
| PresentorFuture | { If he should meet me,If I were in his place, | { | If he had met me,If I had been in his place, | { | he would know me at once.I should pay the money.he would have known me.I should have paid the money. |
|                         |  |   |  |   |  |

Sometimes the if is left out. In this case the should, or the had, or the were must be placed before its subject :—

|         |    |                                 |   |                                      |                                  |
|---------|----|---------------------------------|---|--------------------------------------|----------------------------------|
| Present | or | Future                          | { | Should he meet me,            | he would know me at once. |
|         |    |                                 |   | Were I in his place,          | I should pay the money.   |
| Past    | {  | Had he met me,           |   | he would have known me.       |                                  |
|         |    | Had I been in his place, |   | I should have paid the money. |                                  |

Sometimes the Conditional sentence is left out or understood, and only the Consequent sentence is expressed :—

He would never agree to that (“if you asked him,” understood).

He would be very thankful to you for this kindness (“if you were to do him the kindness,” understood).

(4) A Doubt or Supposition.

A verb in the Subjunctive mood, preceded by some conjunction or conjunctive pronoun, implies some doubt or supposition :—

I will not let thee go, except thou bless me.—Old Test.

Murder, though it have no tongue, will speak.

Whoever he be, he shall not go unpunished.

The conjunction is not always expressed :—

“Come weal, come woe, by Bruce’s side,”

Replied the chief, “will Donald bide.”—SCOTT.

Note.—The Subjunctive mood in some form or other is always used to express (1), (2), and (3). But to express (4) the Indicative is now often used instead of it. The Subjunctive, however, ought still to be used, whenever we express something that we know or believe to be either doubtful or contrary to the fact :—

If he were guilty (which I know he is not), I should never get over it.

SECTION 10.—INFINITIVE MOOD.

123. The Infinitive may denote either Present or Past time :—

|         | Form.         | Active.       | Passive.    |
|---------|----------------------|----------------------|--------------------|
| Present | Indefinite    | To send              | To be sent         |
|         | Continuous    | To be sending        | ( Wanting ) |
| Past    | Perfect       | To have sent         | To have been sent  |
|         | Perf. Contin. | To have been sending | ( Wanting ) |

Future time can be expressed only by some phrase ; as, “to be about to send” ; “to be going to send.”

124. The Perfect form of Infinitive.—After verbs expressing wish, intention, duty, etc., the Perfect form of the Infinitive is used, to show that the wish, etc., was not carried out :—

He intended to have gone (but something stopped him).

He would have gone (but he was not able).

He ought to have gone (but he neglected to do so).

It is a mistake, however, to use the Perfect Infinitive in any other connection. Thus we cannot say—

It was unkind of him to have gone without saying good-bye.

Here to have gone should be changed to “to go.”

His going (= to go) without saying good-bye was unkind.

Note.—After the verb “said” the Perfect Infinitive is used to denote past time:—

He is said to have gone = It is said that he went.

125. Infinitive without “to.”—The word “to” is usually, but not always, the sign of the Infinitive mood.

(a) Most of the verbs not followed by “to” occur in the following examples:—

I hear thee speak (to speak) of a better land.

I saw him take (to take) aim with his bow.

You need not send (to send) those books to me.

I feel the cold air strike (to strike) against my face.

He dared not say (to say) this in open day.

He made me come (to come) and sit (to sit) beside him.

I let him go (to go) back to his own house.

They bade me tell (to tell) them the right road.

We watched him go (to go) and come (to come).

We beheld the fish rise (to rise).

I have known him laugh (to laugh) for nothing.

(b) The “to” is also left out after Auxiliary and Defective verbs, as may be seen below:—

I shall go; I will go; I can go; I may go; I do go; I must go.

(But “I ought to go” is an exception.)

(c) The “to” is left out after than and but:—

He did nothing but laugh.

He did nothing else than laugh.

(d) The “to” is left out after certain phrases:—

You had better not remain here.

I had rather take this than that.

The Uses of the Infinitive Mood.

126. There are two main uses of the Infinitive mood:—

I. The Noun-Infinitive (also called Simple).

II. The Qualifying Infinitive (also called Gerundial).<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> The name Gerundial, though unfortunately it is now well established, is misleading. It implies that the Qualifying Infinitive has some connection with what we now call the Gerund or Verbal noun. In point of fact, it has no connection with it whatever, either historically or syntactically. They are as distinct in origin as they are in use. The one does

127. I. The Noun-Infinitive may be used in any way in which Nouns are used ; i.e. (a) as the Subject to a verb, (b) as the Object to a Transitive verb or to a Preposition, (c) as the Complement to a verb, or (d) as a form of exclamation :—

(a) Subject to a verb :—

To err is human ; to forgive, divine.

(b) Object to a Transitive verb or to a Preposition :—

A good man does not fear to die.

He was about (=near) to die (=death).

(c) Complement to a verb :—

He appears to be a wise man. (Intrans.)

We considered him to be the best in the class. (Factit.)

(d) As a form of exclamation :—

To think that he told so many lies !

II. The Qualifying Infinitive may be used in any way in which an adjective or adverb is used ; and sometimes it is used absolutely :—

(a) After a verb (here its use is adverbial) :—

He came to see (=for the purpose of seeing) the sport.

He wept to see (=at seeing) that shocking sight.

(b) After a noun (here its use is adjectival) :—

He hopes to be rewarded in the world to come.

Give him a chair to sit on.

Note.—The Qualifying Infin., when used with a noun, can be either attributive or predicative (§ 58) :—

A house to let (Attrib.). This house is to let (Predic.).

(c) After an adjective (here its use is adverbial) :—

He is quick to hear and slow to speak.

(d) Absolutely, for bringing in a Parenthesis :—

I am,—to tell you the truth,—quite tired of this work.

They were thunderstruck,—so to speak,—on hearing this news.

SECTION 11.—PARTICIPLES.

128. The forms of the different Participles are as follows :—

Transitive Verbs.

|                              | Active Voice. | Passive Voice. |
|------------------------------|----------------------|-----------------------|
| Present or Continuous | Loving               | Being loved           |
| Past Indefinite . . . | ( Wanting )   | Loved                 |
| Past Perfect . . .    | Having loved         | Having been loved     | the work of an adjective or adverb, the other of a noun ; and so they have nothing at all in common. The Gerund so-called in -ing was never an Infinitive, and it is a great mistake to call it so.

Intransitive Verbs.

|                              |   |   |              |
|------------------------------|---|---|--------------|
| Present or Continuous | . | . | Fading       |
| Past Indefinite       | . | . | Faded        |
| Past Perfect          | . | . | Having faded |

Note 1.—The form loving stands for both Present and Continuous participles. These are not the same in meaning:—

- (a) Hearing this he was much surprised. (Pres.)
 (b) He went away sorrowing. (Cont.)

In (a) the action is completed. In (b) it is continuous.

Note 2.—There is no Future Participle in English. Futurity can be expressed by the Qualifying Infinitive, as “the world to come,” or by a periphrasis, as “about (prep.) to fall” (Noun Infin.), “going to see” (Qual. Infin.), “going to be beaten” (Qual. Infin.).

129. Double Character of Participles.—A Participle has two distinct functions, and can be defined as that part of a verb which may be used either (a) for helping to form a tense, or (b) as an adjective for qualifying some noun or noun-equivalent.

I. As part of a tense.

130. Many of the tenses of English verbs are formed with the help of the Past or Present Participle.

Thus all the tenses of the Passive voice are formed out of the verb “to be,” followed by the Past Participle; as, “I am loved,” “I was loved,” “I shall be loved.”

Again, all the Continuous tenses in the Active voice are formed out of the verb “to be,” followed by the Present Participle; as, “I am loving,” “I was loving,” “I shall be loving.”

Again, the Perfect tenses in the Active voice are formed out of the verb “to have,” followed by the Past Participle; as, “I have loved,” “I had loved,” “I shall have loved.”

II. As an Adjective.<sup>1</sup>

131. A Participle, when it is not part of a tense, belongs to the class of Descriptive adjective (§ 48). Like other adjectives, it can (a) qualify a noun, (b) be qualified by an adverb, (c) admit of degrees of comparison, (d) be used as a noun:—

<sup>1</sup> To show how completely a Participle can assume the function of an adjective, there are instances in which it forgoes its verb-character altogether:—

Astonishing to any one. Disturbing to any one. Surprising to any one.

When the words italicised are used as verbs, they are Transitive, and do not allow the prep. to to come between them and their object. We could not say, “This astonishes to me, or disturbs to me, or surprises to me.”

- (a) Being tired of work, the men went home.
 (b) The man was picked up in an almost dying state.
 (c) This flower is more faded than that.
 (d) Let bygones be bygones. (This kind of use is rare.)

132. Since a Participle is a verb as well as an adjective, it can take an Object, which may be of five different kinds (§ 106):—

- Having shot the tiger, he returned home. (Direct Obj.)
 He is busy, teaching his sons Greek. (Indirect Obj.)
 Having been taught Greek, he was a good scholar. (Retained Obj.)
 We saw him fighting a hard battle. (Cognate Obj.)
 Having sat himself down, he began to eat. (Reflexive Obj.)

133. Past Indefinite.—The use of such participles depends upon whether the verb is Transitive or Intransitive:—

(a) If the verb is Transitive, the Past Indefinite Participle is never used in the Active voice, but only in the Passive:—

- This much-praised man proved to be a rogue.
 Gold is a metal dug out of the earth.

(b) If the verb is Intransitive, the Past Indefinite is not used at all in most verbs. But whenever it is used (which depends entirely on custom), it must precede its noun, and not follow it:—

- The faded rose. A retired officer. The returned soldier. The fallen city. The risen sun. A withered flower. A departed guest.

If the speaker or writer desires to place the Past Participle of an Intransitive verb after its noun, he must insert the Relative pronoun and change the participle into a Finite verb; as—

- The horse of Mr. A., gone to America, is for sale. (This is wrong.
 The sentence should be—"The horse of Mr. A., who has gone to America, is for sale.")

But the Past Participle of an Intransitive verb is sometimes put after its noun in poetry:—

- A Daniel come to judgment.—SHAKESPEARE, Mer. Venice.
 Mourn for the brave—the brave that are no more,
 All sunk beneath the wave, hard by their native shore.—COWPER.

Even in prose the Past Participle of an Intransitive verb is sometimes, but very rarely, placed after its noun:—

- In times past = in times which have passed.
 He is a man descended from a high family.

134. The Past Participle of verbs is sometimes used to express some permanent habit, state, or character:—

- A well-read man = a man who has read much and read well.
 A well-behaved man = a man whose habitual behaviour is good.
 An out-spoken man = a man who habitually speaks out his mind.
 A retired man = a man who dislikes appearing in public.
 A mistaken man = one who errs by habit or in some specific case.

From this use of the Past Participle has arisen a large class of Adjectives, which are formed from nouns by adding "ed" to the end of the noun :—

An evil-heart-ed man. A talent-ed man. A land-ed proprietor. A long-tail-ed ape. A smooth-skin-ned cat. His saint-ed mother. A red-colour-ed rose. A rough-face-d youth. A hood-ed snake. A long-leg-ged spider. A purple-crest-ed helmet. A many-page-d book. A long-arm-ed monkey. A thickly-wood-ed hill. A noble-mind-ed man. A warm-blood-ed animal.

SECTION 12.—GERUNDS AND VERBAL NOUNS.

135. A Gerund has four forms—two for the Active voice and two for the Passive.

|                              | Active. | Passive.   |
|------------------------------|----------------|-------------------|
| Present or Continuous | Loving         | Being loved       |
| Perfect               | Having loved   | Having been loved |

136. The forms of a Gerund, then, are the same as those of a Participle, and both are parts of a verb. What, then, is the difference? A Gerund is a kind of Noun; but a Participle is a kind of Adjective. So, in spite of the resemblance in form, they are quite distinct in nature.<sup>1</sup>

The reason of the resemblance in form is a matter of history. In Old English the forms of the Verbal Adjective and Verbal Noun were quite distinct. The suffix -ing originally belonged to the latter only.

|             |       |   |
|-------------|-------|---|
| Participle  | . . . | Writ-ende, or -inde, or -and.                            |
| Verbal noun | . . . | Writ-ung, or writ-ing (both forms occur in Anglo-Saxon). |

In later English the suffix -inde took the form of -ing, while -ende and -and died out; and -ung became obsolete. Hence we have now only one form instead of two for the two parts of speech :—

|             |       |                 |
|-------------|-------|-----------------|
| Participle  | . . . | Writing. |
| Verbal noun | . . . | Writing. |

137. Gerund defined.—A Gerund is that part of a verb which, if the verb is Intransitive, has the function of a noun only, but if the verb is Transitive, retains the function of a verb also, and can be followed by an object in the same way as if it were a Finite verb :—

|                              |       |  |
|------------------------------|-------|--|
| Fond of sleeping      | . . . | ( Noun-function only. )               |
| Fond of hunting foxes | . . . | ( Noun- and verb-function combined. ) |

In point of function there is no difference between a Gerund and an Infinitive. Either may be correctly defined as "that part of a verb which names the action, without naming the doer." Both are Abstract nouns. The difference between them is not in function, but in form; observe the suffix -ing. They differ also in syntactical usage; for a Gerund has case, and can be preceded or followed by any kind of preposition, and it can be preceded by the Def. art. the; the same cannot be said of Infinitives.

---

<sup>1</sup> In some books the Gerund is called a Participial noun. This name should be avoided, since a Noun is one part of speech and a Participle is another.

Subsequently the other forms of Gerund (sometimes called Compound), being loved, having loved, having been loved, were formed in modern English, on the analogy of corresponding participles.

138. Gerund as Noun.—Since a Gerund is a kind of noun, it may be the subject to some verb, or object to some verb, or complement to some verb, or object to some preposition; as—

Subject to a verb.—Sleeping is necessary to life.

Object to a verb.—He enjoyed sleeping in the open air.

Complement to a verb.—His almost constant habit was sleeping.

Object to a preposition.—He was fond of sleeping.

In the following sentences say whether the words noted below are Gerunds or Participles:—

The rice will grow well in the coming rains. We heard of his coming back to-day. Did you hear of his having won a prize? The boy having won a prize was much praised. She was fond of being admired. Being admired by all she was much pleased. The cow having been killed by a tiger yesterday could not be found. The boy was ashamed of having been beaten in class by his sister. I am tired of doing this work. Doing this work every day you will soon improve. Spelling is more difficult than writing. He was in the habit of boasting of his cleverness. A boasting man is much despised.

Note.—In such phrases as "a hunting whip," "a drinking fountain," the words hunting and drinking are Gerunds, not participles: "a whip for hunting," "a fountain for drinking." The Gerund or Verbal noun is here used as a substitute for an adjective; see § 180.

139. Gerund as a Verb.—Since the Gerund of a Transitive verb retains its verb-character (§ 137), the object by which it is followed may be of any of the five kinds shown in § 106, Note.

Direct (with Trans.).—He is clever at teaching Euclid.

Indirect (with Trans.).—He is clever at teaching his sons Euclid.

Retained (with Passive).—He is pleased at being taught Euclid.

Cognate (with Intrans.).—He is proud of having fought a good fight.

Reflexive (with Intrans.).—He is in the habit of oversleeping himself.

140. Gerund with Possessives.—A noun, provided it denotes a person or other animal, is usually in the Possessive case, when it is placed before a Gerund:—

He was displeased at the barber's not coming.

Note 1.—The following use of a Gerund preceded by a Possessive noun or pronoun sometimes occurs:—

This is a work of my doing (=done by me).

Note 2.—Sometimes the letter “a” (an abbreviation of “on”) is placed before a Gerund in a prepositional sense:—

This set him a (=on) thinking.

141. Gerundive use of Participles.—Such participles are not Gerunds, but participles used in a Gerundive sense:—

I depend on the wall being built immediately.

How are we to parse “being built” in such a connection? We must parse it as a participle; but it is not used as such in the ordinary way; for it does more than qualify the noun “wall.” The sentence does not mean “I depend on the wall that was being built,” or “the wall when it was being built”; but “I depend on the wall-being-built immediately,” that is, “on the immediate building of the wall.” There is therefore a Gerund or Verbal noun implied in the participle “being built,” and hence it may be said that such participles are used Gerundively.

142. A Verbal noun is the same thing at bottom as a Gerund, but a distinction has been drawn between them.<sup>1</sup>

A Verbal noun is preceded by the Definite article and followed by the preposition “of”; whereas a Gerund has no article preceding it and no preposition following it. The former construction is the original one. The latter is modern, and arose simply out of the omission of the preposition “of.”<sup>2</sup>

(a) I am engaged in the careful reading of a book (Verbal noun.)

(b) I am engaged in carefully reading a book . (Gerund.)

In (a) “reading” is a single part of speech,—a noun and nothing more. In (b) “reading” is a double part of speech,—a noun and verb combined. Observe, too, that a Verbal noun is qualified by an Adjective, a gerund by an Adverb.

Note 1.—Sometimes the “of” is left out, even when there is a Definite article going before:—

<sup>1</sup> It has been said that “a word ending in -ing may be a participle, or an adjective, or a noun, or a verb in the Infinitive mood.” For the last see Professor Earle’s Simple Grammar of English, p. 241, where he calls it a “Flexional Infinitive,” derived from the old Infinitive ending in -en; as “build-en,” “build-ing.” I cannot find any evidence for this theory, which he has borrowed, as he says, from Carlyle! The inflexion -en was dead by about 1500 A.D., and it died without leaving anything behind it. The noun-suffix -ing is as old as Anglo-Saxon. What we now call the Gerund has not sprung out of any Infinitive, but is simply the Verbal noun itself with the “of” omitted. See my English Grammar, Past and Present, § 523, or Historical English and Derivation, § 148. That a word ending in -ing may be a participle or an adjective has been shown already; see § 131 and footnote. It never is and it never was an Infinitive of any kind whatever.

<sup>2</sup> Compare the omission of “of” in such phrases as “on board (of) ship,” “inside or outside (of) the door,” “a thousand (of) men.”

The giving to the courts the power to review hard and unconscionable bargains will control the rest.—Review of Reviews, August 1898, p. 165.

Here there is no “of” after the word “giving.” In such a construction we cannot distinguish between a Verbal noun and a Gerund.

Note 2.—The Abstract noun, which we call a Verbal noun or Gerund, can be used in a Concrete sense :—

I am pleased with my surroundings.

He went away with all his belongings.

SECTION 13.—THE STRONG AND WEAK CONJUGATIONS.

143. Strong and Weak.—Verbs are distinguished according to function into Transitive, Intransitive, and Auxiliary (§ 85). According to form or Conjugation, they are distinguished into Strong and Weak. (All our borrowed verbs are Weak.)

Note.—The names “Irregular” and “Regular” for Strong and Weak are misleading ; for in point of fact the Strong conjugation is, in its own way, not less regular than the Weak, besides being the older of the two. The name Irregular is reserved in this book for certain verbs mentioned below in § 147.

Tests of a Weak verb :—

(a) All verbs, whose Past tense ends in a -d or -t, which is not in the Present tense, are Weak :—

Live, live-d. Fan, fann-ed. Think, though-t. Sell, sol-d.

(b) All verbs, whose Past tense is formed by shortening (not changing) the vowel of the Present tense, are Weak :—

Bleed, bled. Shoot, shot. Lead, led. Light, lit or light-ed.

(c) All verbs, whose Past tense is the same as the Present, are Weak :—

Cut, cut. Hurt, hurt. Put, put. Rid, rid. Spread, spread.

Tests of a Strong verb :—

(a) All verbs, which form the Past tense by changing (not merely shortening) the inside vowel, and do not add on a final -d or -t, are Strong :—

Fight, fought (but “buy, bough-t” is Weak, because, after changing the inside vowel, it adds a final -t). Hold, held. Stand, stood.

(b) All verbs, which form the Past participle in -en or -n, are either wholly or partly Strong :—

Wholly.—Draw, drew, draw-n.

Shake, shook, shake-n.

Partly.—Saw, saw-ed, saw-n.

Cleave, clef-t, clov-en.

144. Lists of Strong Verbs.—The list of Mixed verbs given under Group III. exemplifies the tendency of Strong verbs to become Weak.

Group I. (50 verbs).—Final -n or -en retained in Past Participle.

| Present Tense. | Past Tense. | Past Part. | Present Tense. | Past Tense. | Past Part. |
|-----------------------|--------------------|-------------------|-----------------------|--------------------|-------------------|
| Arise                 | arose              | arisen            | Hide                  | hid                | *hidden, hid      |
| Bear (produce)        | bore               | born              | Know                  | knew               | known             |
| Bear (carry)          | bore               | borne             | Lie                   | lay                | lain              |
| Beget                 | begot              | begotten          | Ride                  | rode               | ridden            |
|                       | begat              | begot             | Rise                  | rose               | risen             |
| Bid                   | bade, bid          | bidden, bid       | See                   | saw                | seen              |
| Bind                  | bound              | *bounden, bound   | Shake                 | shook              | shaken            |
| Bite                  | bit                | bitten, bit       | Shrink                | shrank             | *shrunken, shrunk |
| Blow                  | blew               | blown             | Sink                  | sank               | *sunken, sunk     |
| Break                 | broke              | broken            | Slay                  | slew               | slain             |
| Chide                 | chid               | chidden, chid     | Slide                 | slid               | slidden, slid     |
| Choose                | chose              | chosen            | Smite                 | smote              | smitten, smit     |
| Draw                  | drew               | drawn             | Speak                 | spoke              | spoken            |
| Drink                 | drank              | *drunken, drunk   | Steal                 | stole              | stolen            |
| Drive                 | drove, drave       | driven            | Stride                | strode             | stridden          |
| Eat                   | ate                | eaten             | Strike                | struck             | *stricken, struck |
| Fall                  | fell               | fallen            | Strive                | strove             | striven           |
| Fly                   | flew               | flown             | Swear                 | swore              | sworn             |
| Forbear               | forbore            | forborne          | Take                  | took               | taken             |
| Forget                | forgot             | forgotten         | Tear                  | tore               | torn              |
| Forsake               | forsook            | forsaken          | Throw                 | threw              | thrown            |
| Freeze                | froze              | frozen            | Tread                 | trod               | trodden, trod     |
| Get                   | got                | *gotten, got      | Wear                  | wore               | worn              |
| Give                  | gave               | given             | Weave                 | wove               | woven             |
| Go, wend              | went               | gone              | Write                 | wrote              | written           |
| Grow                  | grew               | grown             |                       |                    |                   |

Note.—The seven participles marked * are now chiefly used as Verbal adjectives only, and not as parts of some tense:—

Verbal Adjective.

Our bounden duty.

A drunken man.

A sunken ship.

A stricken deer.

The shrunken stream.

Ill-gotten wealth.

A hidden meaning.

Part of some Tense.

He was bound by his promise.

He had drunk much wine.

The ship had sunk under the water

The deer was struck with an arrow.

The stream has shrunken in its bed.

He got his wealth by ill means.

The meaning is hid or hidden.

Group II. (32 verbs).—Final -n or -en lost in Past Participle.

| Present Tense. | Past Tense. | Past Part.                | Present Tense. | Past Tense. | Past Part. |
|-----------------------|--------------------|----------------------------------|-----------------------|--------------------|-------------------|
| Abide                 | abode              | abode                            | Sing                  | sang               | sung              |
| Awake                 | awoke              | awoke                            | Sit                   | sat                | sat               |
| Become                | became             | become                           | Sling                 | slung              | slung             |
| Begin                 | began              | begun                            | Slink                 | slunk              | slunk             |
| Behold                | beheld,            | beheld,beholden <sup>1</sup> | Spin                  | spun               | spun              |
| Cling                 | clung              | clung                            | Spring                | sprang             | sprung            |
| Come                  | came               | come                             | Stand                 | stood              | stood             |
| Dig                   | dug                | dug                              | Stick                 | stuck              | stuck             |
| Fight                 | fought             | fought                           | Sting                 | stung              | stung             |
| Find                  | found              | found                            | Stink                 | stank              | stunk             |
| Fling                 | flung              | flung                            | String                | strung             | strung            |
| Grind                 | ground             | ground                           | Swim                  | swam               | swum              |
| Hold                  | held               | held                             | Swing                 | swung              | swung             |
| Ring                  | rang               | rung                             | Win                   | won                | won               |
| Run                   | ran                | run                              | Wind                  | wound              | wound             |
| Shine                 | shone              | shone                            | Wring                 | wrung              | wrung             |

Group III.—Mixed or Strong-Weak Verbs (28 in number).

| Present Tense. | Past Tense. | Past Participle. |
|-----------------------|--------------------|-------------------------|
| Beat                  | beat               | beaten                  |
| Cleave (split)        | clave, cleft       | *cloven, cleft          |
| Climb                 | clomb, climbed     | climbed                 |
| Crow                  | crew, crowed       | crowed, crown (rare)    |
| Do                    | did                | done                    |
| Grave                 | graved             | *graven, graved         |
| Hang <sup>2</sup>     | hung, hanged       | lung, hanged            |
| Hew                   | hewed              | *hewn, hewed            |
| Lade                  | laded              | laden                   |
| Melt                  | melted             | *molten, melted         |
| Mow                   | mowed              | mown                    |
| Prove                 | proved             | †proven, proved         |
| Rive                  | rived              | riven                   |
| Rot                   | rotted             | *rotten, rotted         |
| Saw                   | sawed              | sawn                    |
| Seethe                | seethed            | *sodden, seethed        |
| Sew                   | sewed              | *sewn, sewed            |
| Shape                 | shaped             | †shapen, shaped         |
| Shave                 | shaved             | shaven                  |
| Shear                 | sheared            | *shorn, sheared         |
| Show                  | showed             | shown                   |
| Sow                   | sowed              | sown                    |

<sup>1</sup> "Beholden" means "indebted."

<sup>2</sup> The Intransitive verb is conjugated in the Strong form only. The Transitive verb is conjugated in both forms. Hanged means "killed by hanging"; as, "The man was hanged." Hung is used in a general sense; as, "He hung up his coat."

| Present Tense. | Past Tense. | Past Participle. |
|-----------------------|--------------------|-------------------------|
| Stave                 | stove, staved      | stove, staved           |
| Strew                 | strewed            | strewn or strown        |
| Swell                 | swelled            | swollen                 |
| Thrive                | throve, thrived    | thriven, thrived        |
| Wash                  | washed             | *washen, washed         |
| Writhe                | writhed            | †writhen, writhed       |

Note 1.—The participles marked * are now chiefly used as Verbal adjectives, and not as parts of some tense :—

| Verbal Adjective.  | Part of some Tense.                  |
|---------------------------|---|
| A graven image.    | The image was engraved with letters. |
| A molten image.    | The image was melted with heat.      |
| A rotten plank.    | The plank was rotted by water.       |
| The sodden flesh.  | The flesh was scalded in hot water.  |
| A well-sewn cloth. | I have sewed or sewn it.      |
| Un-washen hands.   | I have washed my hands.              |
| A shorn lamb.      | The lamb was sheared to-day.         |
| A hewn log.        | The log is hewed or hewn .    |

Note 2.—The participles marked † are now seldom seen except in poetry.

145. Lists of Weak Verbs.—The mode of adding the suffix of the Past tense is not uniform ; and the two rules given below should be observed :—

(1) If the verb ends in e, then d only is added ; as—

Live, lived (not liveed).
Clothe, clothed (not clotheed).

To this rule there is no exception.

(2) The final consonant is doubled before ed, provided (a) that the final consonant is single, (b) that it is accented or mono-syllabic, (c) that it is preceded by a single vowel ; as—

Fan, fanned (not faned) ; drop, dropped (not dropped).
Compel, compelled ; control, controlled.

But in a verb like lengthen, where the accent is not on the last syllable, the Past tense is lengthened ; in a verb like boil, where the vowel is not single, the Past sense is boiled ; and in a verb like fold, where the last consonant is not single, the Past tense is folded.

To this rule there are very few exceptions. One exception occurs in the final l. The final l is doubled, even when it is not accented ; as, travel, travelled (not traveled). But the final l is not doubled, if it has two vowels going before it ; as, travail, travailed (not travailed).

Group I.—Shortening of Inside Vowel : Past tense in t.

| Present Tense. | Past Tense. | Past Part. | Present Tense. | Past Tense. | Past Part. |
|-----------------------|--------------------|-------------------|-----------------------|--------------------|-------------------|
| Creep                 | crept              | crept             | Sweep                 | swept              | swept             |
| Sleep                 | slept              | slept             | Keep                  | kept               | kept              |

| Present Tense. | Past Tense.   | Past Part.    | Present Tense. | Past Tense.   | Past Part.    |
|-----------------------|----------------------|----------------------|-----------------------|----------------------|----------------------|
| Weep                  | wept                 | wept                 | Smell                 | smelt                | smelt                |
| Burn                  | burnt                | burnt                | Spell                 | spelt                | spelt                |
| Deal (dēl)            | dēalt                | dēalt                | Lean (lēn)            | lēant orleaned   | lēant orleaned   |
| Dream(drēm)       | drēamt ordreamed | drēamt ordreamed | Mean(mēm)             | mēant                | mēant                |
| Dwell                 | dwelt                | dwelt                | Spill                 | spilt                | spilt                |
| Feel                  | felt                 | felt                 | Spoil                 | spoilt orspoiled | spoilt orspoiled |
| Kneel                 | knelt                | knelt                |                       |                      |                      |

Exceptional Verbs.—Make, made, made. Have, had, had. Hear, heard, heard. Leave, left, left. Cleave, cleft, cleft. Lose, lost, lost. Shoe, shod, shod. Flee, fled, fled. Say, said, said. Lay, laid, laid. Pay, paid, paid.

Group II.—Changing of Inside Vowel.

| Present Tense. | Past Tense. | Past Part. | Present Tense. | Past Tense. | Past Part. |
|-----------------------|--------------------|-------------------|-----------------------|--------------------|-------------------|
| Beseech               | besought           | besought          | Work                  | wrought, 'worked   | wrought, worked   |
| Bring                 | brought            | brought           | Owe                   | ought, owed        | owed              |
| Buy                   | bought             | bought            | Dare                  | durst ordared      | dared             |
| Catch                 | caught             | caught            | Can                   | could              | (Wanting)         |
| Seek                  | sought             | sought            | Shall                 | should             | (Wanting)         |
| Sell                  | sold               | sold              | Will                  | would              | (Wanting)         |
| Teach                 | taught             | taught            | May                   | might              | (Wanting)         |
| Tell                  | told               | told              |                       |                    |                   |
| Think                 | thought            | thought           |                       |                    |                   |

Group III.—Verbs ending in d or t.

Verbs ending in d or t in the Present tense have discarded the suffix of the Past tense, to avoid the repetition of d or t.

(a) Some verbs in this group have the three forms (Present tense, Past tense, and Past Participle) all exactly alike :—

| Present Tense. | Past Tense. | Past Part. | Present Tense. | Past Tense. | Past Part.  |
|-----------------------|--------------------|-------------------|-----------------------|--------------------|--------------------|
| Burst                 | burst              | burst             | Slit                  | slit               | slit               |
| Cast                  | cast               | cast              | Spit                  | spit or spat       | spit               |
| Cost                  | cost               | cost              | Split                 | split              | split              |
| Cut                   | cut                | cut               | Spread                | spread             | spread             |
| Hit                   | hit                | hit               | Sweat                 | sweat              | sweat              |
| Hurt                  | hurt               | hurt              | Thrust                | thrust             | thrust             |
| Let                   | let                | let               | Bet                   | bet                | bet                |
| Put                   | put                | put               | Quit                  | quit orquitted | quit orquitted |
| Rid                   | rid                | rid               | Knit                  | knit orknitted | knit orknitted |
| Set                   | set                | set               |                       |                    |                    |
| Shed                  | shed               | shed              |                       |                    |                    |
| Shred                 | shred              | shred             |                       |                    |                    |
| Shut                  | shut               | shut              |                       |                    |                    |

Note.—"Spit" is a Weak verb, although it has a form spat for the Past tense. In Anglo-Saxon the Present had two forms also.

(b) Other verbs in this group end in d in the Present tense, but form the Past tense and Past Participle by changing d into t. (There are at least nine such verbs in English.)

| Present Tense. | Past Tense. | Past Part. | Present Tense. | Past Tense. | Past Part.  |
|-----------------------|--------------------|-------------------|-----------------------|--------------------|--------------------|
| Bend                  | bent               | bent              | Rend                  | rent               | rent               |
| Build                 | built              | built             | Send                  | sent               | sent               |
| Gild                  | gilt, gilded       | gilt              | Spend                 | spent              | spent              |
| Gird                  | girt, girded       | girt              | Wend                  | went               | ( Wanting ) |
| Lend                  | lent               | lent              |                       |                    |                    |

Exceptions:—end-ed, mend-ed, blend-ed or blent, defend-ed.

(c) Other verbs of this group have the three forms all alike, except that they shorten the vowel in the Past forms:—

| Present Tense. | Past Tense. | Past Part. | Present Tense. | Past Tense. | Past Part. |
|-----------------------|--------------------|-------------------|-----------------------|--------------------|-------------------|
| Bleed                 | bled               | bled              | Lead                  | led                | led               |
| Breed                 | bred               | bred              | Read                  | read               | read              |
| Feed                  | fed                | fed               | Light                 | lit, lighted       | lit, lighted      |
| Speed                 | sped               | sped              | Shoot                 | shot               | shot              |
| Meet                  | met                | met               |                       |                    |                   |

SECTION 14.—DEFECTIVE, IRREGULAR, AND IMPERSONAL VERBS.

146. Defective Verbs.—It has been shown that verbs can be classified (1) according to function into Notional (Trans. or Intrans.) and Auxiliary, see § 85; and (2) according to Conjugation or form into Strong and Weak, see § 143.

“Defective” does not constitute a separate class. This word merely means that a verb, whether Weak or Strong, is not conjugated in all its parts.

The verbs shall, will, may, can are defective, because they have no other forms besides that of the Past tense, viz. should, would, might, could.

The verbs quoth, must, ought are defective, because these are the only forms of tense in which they are now seen; and quoth is further defective, because it is never used in the Second person.

The verb wit is defective, because it is seen chiefly in the Infinitive mood, “to wit” (used only in legal documents.) (The Present wot and Past wist are almost obsolete.) The verb worth is defective, because it is seen only in the Subjunctive mood, as in the phrase “Woe worth (= become) the day.” The verbs wont, hight, yclept are defective, because these are now seen only as participles.

Anomalous is the name given to those verbs that are pieced together from parts of two or more Defective verbs; as,

am, was, been; go, went, gone. The verb "to be" is a patchwork of three distinct roots, es (cf. Latin es, est), béo (cf. Latin fi-o), and wes.

147. Irregular Verbs.—The verbs shall, will, may, can, wot, quoth are irregular, because in the Third person Singular they do not take a final s.

For the same reason dare and need are irregular, whenever they are followed by an Infinitive without "to"; as, "He dare not go," "He need not go."

The Past tense could is irregular, because it has taken an intrusive l, in imitation of should, would. Did is an irregular Past tense of do, made of make, and have of had. Made has lost the medial k, and had the medial v.

148. Impersonal Verbs.—These take "it" for their Subject, and are followed by some Personal pronoun in the Objective case, which in Personal verbs would be the Subject in the Nom. case:—

It shames me to hear this = I am ashamed to hear this.

It repents me of my folly = I repent of my folly.

It behoves me to do this = I ought to do this.

There are three instances in which the it is omitted, and the pronoun is placed before the verb instead of after it:—

Methinks = it seems to me.

Meseems = it seems to me.

Melists = it seems to me, or it pleases me.

Note.—In Modern English there is no difference of spelling between thinks Impersonal and think Transitive. But in Old Eng. the former was thync-an (to seem) and the latter thenc-an (to think).

CHAPTER VII.—ADVERBS.

SECTION I.—THE FUNCTIONS OF ADVERBS.

149. It has been shown already (§ 16) that an Adverb can qualify Prepositions and Conjunctions, as well as verbs, adjectives, and other adverbs.

(a) Prepositions:—

The bird flew exactly over the sleeper's head.

He paid the money quite up to date.

His abilities are decidedly above the average.

He was sitting almost outside the door.

He arrived long before the time.

He held his hand partly on and partly off the table.

(b) Conjunctions:—

A man is truly happy only when he is in sound health.

I dislike this weather simply because the air is too hot.

I wish to know precisely how it happened.

They locked the door shortly before the thieves came.

The watch was found long after the thieves had been caught.

He has been ill ever since he left us.

Note.—If for an adverb proper we substitute an adverbial phrase, we find that such a phrase can qualify a preposition or a conjunction in the same way as an adverb proper does :—

Preposition.—He arrived a few hours after midnight.

Conjunction.—He recovered ten days after he had been taken ill.

150. An Adverb can also qualify an entire sentence. In this case it must stand first :—

Unfortunately the thief was not caught.

Evidently you were much distressed at the news.

We could rewrite these sentences in the following form :—

It is unfortunate that the thief was not caught.

It was evident that you were much distressed.

151. Adverbs do not qualify Nouns or Pronouns. This is the work of adjectives.

The apparent exceptions to the above rule can all be explained :—

(a) I am sincerely yours. That book is certainly mine.

Here the words “yours” and “mine” are the Possessive forms of “you” and “I,” and are therefore equivalent to adjectives.

(b) A by-path ; a fore-taste ; an out-house.

Here the adverbs do not qualify the several nouns, but are compounded with them, so that each compound makes a single word.

(c) In the following examples the adverb that precedes the noun does not qualify the noun, but some participle or adjective understood :—

The then king = the king then reigning.

The late king = the king lately reigning.

The above account = the account given above.

A far country = a country far distant.

An up mail = an up-going mail.

(d) In the following example the adverb “almost” does not qualify the noun “drunkard,” but the verb “is” :—

He is almost a drunkard.

To say, “He is an almost drunkard,” would be incorrect.

Note.—A slovenly practice is springing up, however, by which the adverb “quite” is made to qualify nouns :—

Quite a panic (= a serious panic) was caused.

This is quite an item (= a considerable item).

SECTION 2.—THE KINDS OF ADVERBS.

152. Adverbs are subdivided into three distinct classes :—

I. Simple. II. Interrogative. III. Conjunctive.

153. Simple Adverbs.—These can be distinguished from one another according to their meaning :—

(1) Time.—He did this before, and you have done it since.

The chief adverbs of this class are :—Now, then, before, since, ago, already, soon, presently, immediately, instantly, early, late, etc.

(2) Place.—We must rest here, and not there.

The chief adverbs of this class are :—Here, there; hence, thence; hither, thither; in, out; within, without; above, below; far, near.

Note.—Sometimes there is merely introductory, and has no meaning of place :—

There is some one knocking at the door.

(3) Number.—He did this once, but he will not do it again.

The chief adverbs of this class are :—Once, twice, thrice, again, seldom, never, sometimes, always, often, firstly, secondly, thirdly, etc.

(4) Description (§ 46, 2).—He did his work slowly, but surely.

This class is very numerous. Most of them are formed by adding -ly to some adjective. But some do not end in -ly; cf. thus, so, well, ill, amiss, asleep.

(5) Quantity, Extent, or Degree.—He is almost, but not quite, the cleverest boy in the class.

To this class of adverb belong :—Very, much, the, too, quite, almost, little, a little, rather, somewhat, half, partly, wholly, so, etc.

Note.—The adverb “the” is quite distinct from the Definite article. It is an Adverb of Degree, derived from the Instrumental case (thi) of the Demonstrative, and is never used except before an adjective or adverb in the Comparative degree: “the more, the merrier.”

(6) Affirming or Denying.—He did not come after all.

Yes, no, not, perhaps, probably, certainly, not at all, etc.

Note.—Yes and no are pro-sentence or substitute adverbs :—

(1) Did he come? Yes (= He did come). Affirm.

(2) Did he come? No (= He did not come). Negat.

In (1) yes is substitute for an affirmative sentence, and in (2) no is substitute for a negative sentence. As pro-nouns save the repetition of a noun, so these adverbs save the repetition of a sentence.

Note 1.—In some books a 7th class is added, viz. adverbs of Cause or Consequence :—Therefore, then, consequently, because, for. It appears, however, that these words do not exactly modify any word or words in a sentence, but are rather conjunctions combining the sense of one sentence with that of another by way of inference. They have therefore been included amongst Conjunctions in this book.

Note 2.—Phrase-adverbs.—Adverbs can be expressed by phrases (§ 19) as well as single words :—now and then, to and fro, at present, by all means, up and down, how long? how far? now-a-days, etc.

154. Interrogative Adverbs.—Used for asking questions:—

- (a) Time.—When did he come? How long will he remain here?
 (b) Place.—Where did he stop? Whence has he come? Whither is he going?
 (c) Number.—How often did the dog bark?
 (d) Description (manner, quality, or state).—How did he do this? How (in what state of health) is he to-day?
 (e) Quantity or Degree.—How far (to what extent) was that report true?
 (f) Cause or Reason.—Why did he do this? Wherefore did he go?

155. The adverbs “how” and “what” are sometimes used in an exclamatory sense:—

How kind of you to do that!
What a foolish fellow you are!

156. Conjunctive Adverbs.—These are the same in form as Interrogative adverbs; but instead of asking questions, they join sentences, being partly adverbs and partly conjunctions (§ 18).

(a) The antecedent understood.

This is where (= the place in which) we dwell.
 Let me know when (= the time by which) you will come.

(b) The antecedent expressed.

This is the place where we dwell.
 Let me know the time when you will come.

SECTION 3.—COMPARISON OF ADVERBS.

157. Adverbs of Quality have degrees of comparison, which are formed in the same way as those of adjectives:—

(a) If the Adverb is a word of one syllable, the Comparative is formed by adding er and the Superlative by adding est:—

|      |        |         |       |         |                |
|------|--------|---------|-------|---------|----------------|
| Fast | faster | fastest | Loud  | louder  | loudest        |
| Hard | harder | hardest | Late  | later   | latest or last |
| Near | nearer | nearest | Far   | farther | farthest       |
| Long | longer | longest | Rathe | rather  | ...            |

Till rathe (= early) she rose, half cheated in the thought.—TENNYSON.

(b) Some Adverbs have had a Comparative and Superlative allotted to them from another root:—

|              |        |       |        |      |       |
|--------------|--------|-------|--------|------|-------|
| Well         | better | best  | Much   | more | most  |
| Ill or badly | worse  | worst | Little | less | least |

(c) Adverbs ending in ly form the Comparative by adding more and the Superlative by adding most:—

|             |                  |                  |
|-------------|------------------|------------------|
| Wisely      | more wisely      | most wisely      |
| Beautifully | more beautifully | most beautifully |

Note.—The Adverb “early,” however, has “earlier” for its Comparative.

SECTION 4.—VERBS COMPOUNDED WITH ADVERBS.

158. A Verb is said to be compounded with an Adverb, when the two words are so habitually used together, that one is considered to be a part of the other.

Such Adverbs are almost always (except in poetry) placed after the verb; as “speak out,” “rise up.” Here the out should be parsed as part of the verb “speak”; and up as part of the verb “rise.”

But in forming the corresponding noun, the adverb is put first :—

| Verb.                         | Noun.                             |
|--------------------------------------|--|
| The crops will come out well. | The outcome was a good crop.      |
| No profits will come in .     | His income is small.              |
| Cholera did not break out .   | There was no outbreak of cholera. |
| He set out on his journey.    | He had no trouble at the outset . |

Similar instances are :—Set off (verb), offset (noun); put out (verb), output (noun); fit out (verb), outfit (noun); shoot off (verb), offshoot (noun); spring off (verb), offspring (noun); shoot up (verb), upshot (noun); turn out (verb), outturn (noun); east out (verb), outcast (noun); set on (verb), onset (noun); lay out (verb), outlay (noun); look out (verb), outlook (noun); draw in (verb), indraught (noun); let out (verb), outlet (noun); let in (verb), inlet (noun).

Note.—“Set-off,” “turn-out,” and a few more are also used as nouns.

SECTION 5.—THE TWO USES OF ADVERBS.

159. Adverbs, like Adjectives (see § 58), have two different uses, viz. (a) the Attributive, (b) the Predicative.

(a) Attributive use.—An Adverb is used attributively, when it qualifies in the ordinary way the word associated with it :—

He is entirely wrong. He shouted loudly. He did his work very badly. Half through the door. I dislike him only because he is lazy.

(b) Predicative use.—An Adverb is used predicatively, when it is made part of the Predicate of a sentence, or in other words, when it is used as the Complement of the verb going before it :<sup>1</sup>—

| Subject. | Verb. | Complement, etc.                   |
|-----------------|--------------|---|
| My son          | is           | well (in good health) to-day.      |
| He              | will be      | better (in better health) soon.    |
| He              | was turned   | adrift (to go where he could).     |
| The two boys    | are          | much alike (like to each other).   |
| The bear        | was caught   | alive (in a living state).         |
| Those men       | are          | aware (conscious) of their faults. |

<sup>1</sup> We cannot endorse what is said in Mason’s English Grammar, p. 157, ed. 1891 : “An Adverb or adverbial phrase never forms the complement of a predicate.” The examples given in the text show how very common the predicative or complementary use of Adverbs is.

| Subject.   | Verb. | Complement, etc.                 |
|-------------------|--------------|---|
| The game          | is           | over (finished).                 |
| Some money        | was          | still over (remaining).          |
| The results       | are          | out (published).                 |
| The stars         | are          | out (visible).                   |
| He                | was heard    | out (to the very end).           |
| The bargain       | is           | off (cancelled).                 |
| The train         | is           | off (started).                   |
| He                | is           | well off (in good circumstances) |
| Our side          | is           | in (having their innings).       |
| The late minister | is           | in (holding office) again.       |

CHAPTER VIII.—PREPOSITIONS.

160. Kinds of Objects.—Besides nouns and pronouns, we sometimes have adverbs, Infinitives, phrases, and clauses as objects to a preposition:—

(a) Adverbs:—

We must be ready by then (=that time). By far the best.

He has worked hard from then to now.

He walks about from here to there.

I have heard of worse things being done before now.

Until now it has not ceased raining.

Many strange things may happen between now and then.

You must go at once. This will last for ever.

(b) Infinitives; see § 127 (b): (this construction is rare).

He was about to die.

He desired nothing but to succeed.

(c) Phrases:—

The day-spring from on-high hath visited us.

He has come from beyond-the-seas.

He did not return till about-ten-days-afterwards.

He did not see her till within-a-few-weeks-of-his-death.

These books are sold at over-one-shilling each.

I bought this for under-half-its-value.

He will not return till after-the-holidays.

The question of how-to-do-this is difficult.

(d) Clauses:—

This depends upon | whether-he-will-consent-or-not.

He told every one of | what-he-had-heard.

Go whenever you like except | that-you-must-not-go-in-the-rain.

In | that-he-died | he died unto sin once.—New Testament.

161. (a) Omission of Object.—There are two cases of this:—

Relative Pronoun.—The man (whom or that) we were looking for.

Demons. Pronoun.—A chair to sit on (it).

(b) Omission of Preposition.—This occurs chiefly with the prepositions of and at:—

(1) Of:—

On board (of) ship. A hundred (of) pounds. A many (=a multitude, of) tears (§ 38 (e), Note).

What we now call the Gerund in -ing, as “telling lies,” has come into existence solely through the omission of “of” after the Verbal noun in -ing; as “telling of lies.” (See § 142.)

(2) At: see § 100, Note 2:—

They laughed (at) him to scorn. He stared (at) me in the face.
He looked (at) me in the face.

162. Disguised Prepositions.—“On” is changed into “a” in such phrases as “to go a fishing.”

Similarly “of” can be changed into “o,” as in “four o’clock,” “Jack o’ lantern,” etc.

To the same class belong such phrases as the following:—

Flour sells at tenpence a pound.

He called to see me once a week.

He gave the men four shillings a piece.

The “a” looks so much like the Indefinite Article, that by a false analogy “the” is sometimes used in its place; as—

Flour sells at tenpence the pound.

163. Than.—This word has been used as a Preposition by the best English writers:—

|   |                        |
|---|------------------------|
| No mightier than thyself or me . . . . .   | SHAKSPEARE.            |
| A stone is heavy, and the sand weighty; but a fool’s wrath is heavier than them both . . . . . | Old Testament . |
| She suffers hourly more than me . . . . .  | SWIFT.                 |
| You are a much greater loser than me . . . . .   | Ibid.           |
| Lined with giants deadlier than them all . . . . .   | POPE.                  |
| For thou art a girl as much brighter than her . . . . .  |                        |
| As he was a poet sublimer than me . . . . .  | PRIOR.                 |
| Thou hast been wiser all the while than me . . . . .   | SOUTHEY.               |

The prepositional use of than is common in current journalism:—

She should look worse than him.—Time, July 1883, p. 83.

It struck me then that God knew better than me.—Review of Reviews, Aug. 1898, p. 126.

Even so far back as Caxton, the first English printer, we find than used as a preposition, followed by an objective case:—

For ther is nothyng more suspecte to evyl people than them, whom they know to be wyse and trewe.—The Curial, 4, 18.

These are not errors or solecisms of the illiterate. But in current books on Grammar the prepositional character of than is denied.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> For example, in Mason’s English Grammar, p. 177, ed. 1891, we are told that “no syntactical explanation can be given of the relative whom after than.” The syntax, however, is very simple, if we parse than as a

Originally "than" was not a conjunction, but an adverb (another form of then). In modern English it has been further developed into a preposition, and has been used as such by good authors, and is still used. The best course to take is to parse it as a Conjunction, whenever it is possible to supply a Finite verb understood:—

No animal is larger than a whale.

No animal is larger than a whale (is large).

But in such constructions as the following "than" must still be parsed as a Preposition, because there is no Finite verb understood which could make it a Conjunction:—

|   |                      |
|---|----------------------|
| I will not take less than ten shillings . . . . .              | } Kind of Object.    |
| No one other than a graduate need apply <sup>1</sup> . . . . . | } Noun.              |
| Here is my son, than whom a better does not exist              | } Rel. Pron.         |
| He did nothing else than laugh . . . . .                       | } Noun-Infinitive.   |
| I will suffer myself rather than (that) he should              | } Noun-clause.       |
| suffer . . . . .   |                      |
| He got more than (what) he asked for . . . . .                 | } Adverb (§ 160, a). |
| He has said so more than once . . . . .                        |                      |

164. But.—In such examples as the following "but" must be parsed as a Preposition. Otherwise it is a Conjunction:—

All but (except) one fulfilled their promises.

He was all but (=everything except) ruined. (Here "ruined" is an elliptical form of the Gerund "being ruined"; and this Gerund is the object of the preposition "but.") preposition. There is ample analogy for the use of "than" as a preposition, besides ample authority. "Superior to mine" = "better than mine." If to is a preposition, why not than? The Scotch say, "He is taller be (=by) onie o' thaim." If by is a preposition, why not than? Again, there is the analogy of the French que (=than) followed by lui (Objective case) = "than him."

<sup>1</sup> "No other than he need apply" is an exceptional phrase that proves nothing; cf. "but he" in "Whence all but he had fled" (Mrs. Hemans). In the sentence given, "No other than a graduate need apply," the phrase "other than" = different from, except, but. We cannot expand "than a graduate" into a clause containing a Finite verb, and hence than is a preposition. In some editions of Shakspeare we have the phrase "no other than him":—

That you elect no other king than him.—1 Hen. VI. iv. 1, 4.

The editor who makes Shakspeare say "than him," evidently regards "than" as a preposition.

Sometimes the preposition from is used instead of than after "other":—

This is a far other tone from that

In which the Duke spoke eight, nine years ago.

COLERIDGE, Piccolomini, i. 12.

Mrs. Craik, in The Ogilvies, ch. x., uses but after other, where but, though undoubtedly a preposition, is followed by he:—

How could I hear such words from any other man but he?

But for your help (=except on account of your help=if you had not helped me) I should have been ruined. (Here the phrase "for your help" is object to the preposition.)

I cannot but fear (=I cannot do anything except fear) that you are ill. (Here the Noun-Infinitive "fear" is the object.)

CHAPTER IX.—CONJUNCTIONS.

165. According to the definition given in § 15, "a conjunction is a word used for showing in what relation one notion stands to another notion, or one thought to another thought."

As notions are expressed by single words or phrases, and thoughts by sentences or clauses, we can substitute a shorter, though less accurate, definition, which is more convenient for parsing and analysis,—“a conjunction joins one word to another word, or one sentence to another sentence.” Conjunctions are subdivided into two main classes:—

I. Co-ordinative, which join sentences of co-ordinate (that is, of equal) rank, or words that stand in the same relation to some other word in the sentence.<sup>1</sup>

II. Subordinative, which join a subordinate or dependent sentence to a principal sentence (that is, to a sentence of higher rank).

SECTION I.—CO-ORDINATIVE CONJUNCTIONS.

166. Sentences are of Co-ordinate or equal rank, when one is not dependent on the other, nor enters at all into its construction.

167. Sentences of equal rank can be related to one another in four different senses, and this gives rise to four different kinds of Co-ordinative Conjunctions:—

---

<sup>1</sup> Conjunctions for the most part join sentences, not words. We cannot, however, accept Mr. Mason's statement that "and is the single exception," the only instance of a conjunction which may join words; for in point of fact, all the Co-ordinative conjunctions can join adjectives.

- (1) A captious and conceited man is not fit to review a book (Cumulative.)
- (2) We admire the character of a poor, but honest man . (Adversative.)
- (3) A drunk or mad Malay ran amuck yesterday . . (Alternative.)
- (4) An iron (and) therefore durable box was procured . (Illative.)

In (1) the notion of self-conceit is added to that of captiousness. In (2) the notion of honesty is contrasted with that of poverty. In (3) the notion of madness is given as an alternative to that of drunkenness. In (4) the notion of durability is inferred from that of iron.

The Conjunction "and" will join nouns as well as adjectives. In this respect, and this only, it is unique:—

Youth and experience cannot exist together.

(a) Cumulative.—By these one thought is simply added to another :—and, both . . . and, not only, but also, as well as :—

He was both degraded and expelled.

He as well as you is guilty.

(b) Alternative.—By these a choice is offered between one thought and another :—either . . . or, else, or, otherwise :—

Leave the room, or take the consequences.

He was neither an idler nor a gambler.

(c) Adversative.—By these conjunctions one thought is contrasted with or set against another :—but, still, yet, nevertheless, however :—

He is very rich, still or yet or but he is not contented.

(d) Illative.—By these conjunctions one thought is inferred or proved from another :—for, therefore, then, so then :—

He was found guilty, and therefore he was hanged.

It is time to go ; let us start then.

SECTION 2.—SUBORDINATIVE CONJUNCTIONS.

168. One sentence is said to be subordinate to another, when it depends upon the other, that is, forms part of its construction, doing the work of a noun, adjective, or adverb.

That sentence on which the subordinate sentence depends is called the Principal sentence.

| Principal.      | Conj. | Dependent. |                           |
|------------------------|--------------|-------------------|---------------------------|
| I will read that book, | if           | you advise me.    | ( Adverb-clause. ) |
| We still hope          | that         | you may get well. | ( Noun-clause. )   |

169. The chief modes of dependence are nine in number :—

(a) Apposition, (b) Causation, (c) Effect, (d) Purpose, (e) Condition, (f) Concession or Contrast, (g) Comparison, (h) Extent or Manner, (i) Time.

Apposition.—He made a promise, that he would soon return.

Causation.—I will do this, because or as or since you desire it.

Effect.—He talked so much that he made himself hoarse.

Purpose.—Men work that they may earn a living.

Condition.—I will do this, if I am allowed (= unless I am prevented).

Concession.—He was a contented man, although he was poor.

Comparison.—He is quite as clever as I am.

He is more clever than I am.

Extent, Manner.—Men will reap as they sow.

Time.—He returned home after he had finished work.

170. As well as.—This conjunctive phrase is Co-ordinative in one sense and Subordinative in another :—

(a) Co-ordinative.—In adding one co-ordinate sentence to another, it gives emphasis to the first :—

He as well as you is guilty =
Not only you, but he also is guilty.

(b) Subordinative :—

|  |                   |
|--|-------------------|
| Principal.                      | Dependent. |
| He does not write                      | as well as you do |
| = His writing is not as good as yours. |                   |

171. Though, but.—Both of these conjunctions (the first Subordinative, the second Co-ordinative) denote concession or contrast :—

(a) He is honest, though poor.

(b) He is poor, but honest.

These two sentences mean precisely the same thing, because in (a) "He is honest" is the Principal clause, and in (b) the Co-ordinate clause, "but he is honest," is more emphatic than the clause preceding it. Thus the Principal clause and the Emphatic clause are the same.

If, however, we rewrite the two sentences thus :—

(a) He is honest, though poor ;

(b) He is honest, but poor, the two sentences are not equivalent. The first emphasises the fact that he is honest in spite of his poverty. The second emphasises the fact that he is poor in spite of his honesty.

Conjunctive and Interrogative Adverbs.

172. It was explained in § 18 that a Conjunctive adverb is a double part of speech,—a conjunction and adverb combined in one :—when, why, where, whence, how, whether.

The same is true of Interrogative adverbs, when they are used as conjunctions :—

Let me ask you how you did this.

There is no difference in form between a Conjunctive and an Interrogative adverb. The former qualifies some noun expressed or understood in the Principal sentence. The latter is preceded by some verb that signifies asking or inquiring.

CHAPTER X.—INTERJECTIONS.

173. An Interjection is unlike every other Part of Speech, since it does not enter into the construction of a sentence.

It is merely an exclamatory sound, thrown into a sentence to denote some strong feeling or emotion (see § 17) :—

Joy.—Hurrah! huzza!
Grief.—Oh! ah! alas! alack!
Amusement.—Ha! ha!
Approval.—Bravo!
Weariness.—Heigh-ho!
Attention.—Lo! hark! hush! hist!

Reproof.—Fie! fie!
Contempt or ridicule { Stuff! bosh! tut-tut!
                                   { pool! pish! pshaw!
                                   { tush!
To call some one.—Ho! holloa!

174. There are certain moods of verbs and parts of speech which can be used for an exclamatory or Interjectional purpose:—

- (a) Noun-Infinitive.—To think that he should have died! (§ 127, d).
 (b) Subjunctive.—Would that I had gained that prize! (Wish.)
 (c) Imperative.—Hear! hear! (Applause.)
 (d) Noun.—Dreadful sight! Foolish fellow! Fool! Dunce!
 (e) Adjective (with some noun understood).—Strange! Shocking!
 (f) Adverb.—How very kind of you! How wonderful!
 (g) Pronoun.—What a sad thing it is!
 (h) Conjunction.—If I could only see him once more!

175. Sometimes in a rapid or exclamatory sentence an Auxiliary verb with its subject is left out, and only the main verb is expressed:—

Why dream and wait for him longer?—LONGFELLOW.
 (= Why dost thou or why do we wait for him longer?)

CHAPTER XI.

THE SAME WORD USED AS DIFFERENT PARTS OF SPEECH.

- A. Indef. Article. The sportsman shot a tiger.
Prep. He has gone a-hunting. They had three meals a day.
- All. Adj. of Quantity. He ate all the bread.
Indef. Num. Adj. We must all die some day.
Adj. used as Noun. We lost our all on that day.
Adv. All bloodless lay the untrodden snow.
- Any. Adj. of Quantity. Have you any bread?
Adv. of Qu. We must stop and rest before going any farther.
Indef. Num. Adjective. Did you bring any loaves?
Indef. Dem. Adjective. Take any book that you like best.
- As. (a) Conjunctive pronoun:—
 He is not such a fool as he looks.
 As many men as came were caught.
 Yours is not the same book as mine.
- (b) Conjunctive adverb (or subordinative conjunction):—
Time. He trembled as (at what time) he spoke.
Manner. Do not act as (in what manner) he did.
State. He took it just as (in what state) it was.
- Extent.* { He is not as (to that extent) clever as (to what extent) you are.
 { Hot as (to whatever extent) the sun is (= however hot the sun is), we must go out in it.
- Reason.* The air is now cool, as (for what reason or for the reason that) the rain has fallen.

- (c) In Elliptical Phrases :—all of these imply “ extent.”
 I condemn you as a judge (to what extent or so far as I am a judge), but as a man (to what extent I am a man) I pity you.
 I will inquire again as to (to what extent the question relates to) that matter.
As regards this journey (to what extent the question regards this journey), we can now decide nothing.
- Better. Comp. Adj. My book is a better one than yours.
Comp. Adv. You are working better to-day.
Adj. used as Noun. Do not despise your bettors.
- Both. Def. Num. Adj. Both the men have arrived.
Conj. Co-ord. He is both a fool and a knave.
- But. Adv. There is but (only) one man present.
Prep. Who could have done this but (except) him ?
 I cannot but believe that you are lost. (I cannot believe anything except that, etc.)
Conj. Co-ord. He is a man of common sense, but not learned in books.
Conj. Subord. There was no one present, but (he) pitied (= who did not pity) the lame horse.
 Perdition catch my soul, but I love thee.—
 SHAKESPEARE. (May perdition catch my soul, if I do not love thee.)
- Either. Distrib. Adj. He is ruined in either case.
Conj. Co-ord. He is either a fool or a knave.
- Else. Adv. We could not catch any one else.
Conj. Co-ord. He has some real sorrow ; else he would not weep as he does.
- Enough. Adj. of Quantity. He has eaten enough bread.
Adj. of Number. We have enough loaves.
Adj. used as Noun. He had enough to do.
- Half. Adj. of Quantity. Half measures do not succeed.
Adj. used as Noun. One half of his task is now done.
Adv. of Quantity. He was half dead with fear.
- Little. Adj. of Quality. A little blow may give much pain.
Adj. of Quantity. He has eaten a little bread.
Adv. of Quantity. Let us wait here a little.
Adj. used as Noun. Man wants but little here below.
- More. Adj. of Quantity. He eats more bread than you.
Adj. used as Noun. More is done than was expected.
Adv. of Quantity. I like him more than (I like) you.
Adj. of Number. More men came to-day than yesterday.
Adv. of Number. I saw him once more.
- Much. Adj. of Quantity. He has wasted much time.
Adv. of Quantity. I am much pleased with your son.
Adj. used as Noun. You will not get much from me.
- Neither. Adj. Distrib. I agree with neither side.
Conj. Co-ord. Neither you nor I can do that.
- Near. Adv. Stand near, while I speak to you.
Prep. There is a fine tree near our house.
Adj. He is a near relative of mine.

- Needs. Verb. The earth is very dry and needs rain.
Adv. He must needs know the reason of this.
Noun. Our needs or wants are few.
- One. Def. Num. Adj. There is but one shilling left.
Indef. Dem. Adj. He came here one day.
Indef. Dem. Pron. One is apt to waste one's time.
Def. Dem. Pron. Your horse is white; mine is a black one.
- Only. Adj. The only dog I had was stolen.
Adv. I heard of this only yesterday.
Conj. Co-ord. Do what you like; only (=but whatever else you may do) keep silence.
- Round. Adj. A square thing does not fit into a round hole.
Prep. Draw a circle round a given centre.
Adv. The flies are flying round and round.
Verb. Gama was the first to round the Cape of Good Hope.
Noun. Men must go their daily round of duty.
- Since. Prep. I have not seen him since Monday last.
Adv. I took this house four weeks since.
Conj. Subord. We must trust you, since you are in earnest.
- Single. Verb. Single out the best.
Adj. He is a single (unmarried) man.
- Such. Def. Dem. Adj. He is not such a man as I expected.
Indef. Dem. Adj. He came to me on such a day.
Def. Dem. Pron. You are a coward; I am not such.
- That. Def. Dem. Adj. I am no admirer of that book.
Def. Dem. Pron. The light of the sun is brighter than that of the moon.
Relat. Pron. The book that you gave me is lost.
- That. Conj. { Effect. He aimed so well that he hit the mark.
Apposit. He heard that you had come.
Purpose. We must eat that we may live.
- Than. Conj. Subord. I like this more than (I like) that.
Prep. { These workmen, than whom I have never seen men more industrious, have left me.
He was fond of any drink other than wine.
- Then. Adv. of Time. He was better then than he is now.
Conj. Co-ord. I see, then, we ought to start at once.
- The. Def. Article. The ass is a dull animal.
Adv. of Quantity. The more, the merrier.
- Too. Adv. of Quantity. He is too fond of play.
Conj. Co-ord. We too must expect to die some day.
- Well. Adv. of Quality. He has done the work very well.
Adv. used as Noun. Leave well alone.
Conj. Co-ord. He has finished his work in time; well, I did not expect it of such a lazy man.
- What. Inter. Pron. What did you say?
Rel. Pron. I do not know what you mean; § 79.
Indef. Demons. I tell you what (=something).
Adverb. What (=partly) with illness and what with losses, the poor man is almost ruined.
- Yet. Conj. Co-ord. I have called; yet no one answers.
Adv. of Time. You may yet (=even now, still) find him.

CHAPTER XII.—SYNTAX AND PARSING.

PARSING CHART.

I. Nouns.

| Kind of Noun.  | Gender.                                   | Number.            | Case.                                 |
|--|---|--------------------|---------------------------------------|
| ProperCommonCollectiveMaterialAbstract | MasculineFeminineCommonNeuter | SingularPlural | NominativePossessiveObjective |

II. Pronouns.

| Kind of Pronoun.   | Gender.  | Number.            | Person.           | Case.                                 |
|--|--|--------------------|-------------------|---------------------------------------|
| Personal { Simple{ ReflexiveDemons. { Definite{ Indefinite | MasculineFeminineCommonNeuter                      | SingularPlural | 1st2nd3rd | NominativePossessiveObjective |
| ConjunctiveInterrogative   | Agreeing in Gender, Number, and Personwith its antecedent. |                    |                   |                                       |

III. The Cases of Nouns or Pronouns.

|                     |                            |                           |
|---------------------|----------------------------|---------------------------|
| Nom. to Verb | Obj. to Verb Direct | Obj. in Apposition |
| „ as Compl. to Verb | „ „ Indirect               | „ to Preposition          |
| „ in Apposition     | „ „ Retained               | „ Adverbial               |
| „ of Address        | „ „ Cognate                | „ after certain Ad-       |
| „ Absolute          | „ „ Reflexive              | jectives                  |
| Possessive   | „ as Compl. to Verb        | „ Interjectional          |

IV. Adjectives.

| The Kind of Adjective.   | Degree.   | Use.                                   |                            |
|--|---|--|----------------------------|
| ProperDescriptiveQuantitativeInterrogativeDistributive | Numer. { Def.{ Indef.Demons. { Def.{ Indef. | PositiveComparativeSuperlative | AttributivePredicative |

V. Adverbs.

| Kind.                                  | Degree.                                | Use.                       | Attributive Uses.  |
|--|--|----------------------------|--|
| SimpleConjunctiveInterrogative | PositiveComparativeSuperlative | AttributivePredicative | To qualify Verb" " Adjective" " Adverb" " Preposition" " Conjunction" " Sentence |

VI. Finite Verbs.

| Kind of Verb.                           | Conjug.                 | Person.           | Number.            | Tense.                    | Form of each Tense.                                    |
|---|-------------------------|-------------------|--------------------|---------------------------|--|
| TransitiveIntransitiveAuxiliary | StrongWeakMixed | 1st2nd3rd | SingularPlural | PresentPastFuture | { IndefiniteContinuousPerfectPerf. Contin. |

| Mood.                                   | Voice.            |  |
|---|-------------------|--|
| IndicativeImperativeSubjunctive | ActivePassive | Agreeing with its subject or subjects, expressed or understood.Governing its object or objects, expressed or understood. |

VII. Infinitive.

| Form.  | (a) Use as Noun-Inf.  | (b) Use as Qualifying Inf.   |
|--|---|--|
| IndefiniteContinuousPerfectPerf. Contin. | Subject to VerbObject to VerbComplement to VerbObject to PrepositionExclamatory | To qualify—" a Verb" a Noun { AttributivelyPredicatively" an AdjectiveTo introduce a Parenthesis |

VIII. Gerund.

| Form.              | Voice.            | Kind of Verb.              |
|--------------------|-------------------|----------------------------|
| PresentPerfect | ActivePassive | TransitiveIntransitive |

IX. Participle or Verbal Adjective.

| Form.                      | Voice.            | Kind of Verb.              | Use.  |
|----------------------------|-------------------|----------------------------|---|
| PresentPastPerfect | ActivePassive | TransitiveIntransitive | AttributivePredicativeGerundiveComplementAbsolute |

X. Conjunctions.

|                |                |
|----------------|----------------|
| Co-ordinative. | Subordinative. |
|----------------|----------------|

Some of the following rules have been incidentally given already in different places. They are here collected and summarised; and others not given before have been added, so as to make the account more complete.

176. Nominative case.—See No. III. of Parsing Chart.

(1) As Subject to a verb (see § 3 and § 41):—

I did this. Rain is falling. You are tired.

(2) As Subjective Complement to a verb (see § 95):—

I am the man. Caesar was declared emperor.

Note.—An Infinitive can come between the verb and the noun:—

He appeared to be a wise man.

(3) In Apposition with a noun or pronoun (§ 4):—

John, the carpenter, has succeeded well in business.

(4) For purposes of Address (see § 41):—

How art thou fallen, O Cæsar!

(5) In the Absolute construction:—

(a) With Participle, in past or present sense:—

Off we start, he remaining behind.

Off we started, he having given the signal.

Note.—Without altering the sense, we could substitute the clause “while he remains behind” for the phrase “he remaining behind.” In the absolute construction the noun or pronoun is in the Nominative case, because (as we see from this) it is the Subject to the Finite verb that is implied in the Participle.

(b) With the Qualifying Infinitive, in future sense:—

The caul was put up in a raffle, the winner to pay five shillings.—
DICKENS, David Copperfield.

The estate has been divided between us, you to have two-thirds of it, and I one-third.

177. Possessive case.—See No. III. of Parsing Chart.

(a) A noun or pronoun in the Possessive case qualifies Nouns and Gerunds as an adjective would do :—

My son. The barber's shop. The tiger's claw.—Noun.
 I was displeas'd at his going away without leave. } Gerund
 This was a plan of your contriving. } (§ 140).

(b) When two Possessive nouns are in apposition with each other, the apostrophe s is added either to the first or last, but not to both :—

Herod married his brother Philip's wife.
 For the queen's sake, his sister.—BYRON.

(c) When two nouns are connected by “and,” the apostrophe s is added to both to denote separate possession, and to the last only to denote joint possession :—

A.'s and B.'s horses were sold yesterday.
A. and B.'s horses were sold yesterday.

(d) A noun or pronoun in the Possessive case can be the Complement to a verb (see §§ 92, 95) :—

That book is mine, not James's.

178. Objective case.—See No. III. of Parsing Chart.

(1) As Object to a verb, or in connection with some verb (§ 106, Note) :—

(a) The master teaches Euclid. (Direct.)
 (b) He teaches his sons Euclid. (Indirect.)
 (c) His sons were taught Euclid. (Retained.)
 (d) The fever will run its course. (Cognate.)<sup>1</sup>
 (e) He sat himself down. (Reflexive.)

(2) As Objective Complement to a verb (§ 95) :—

The citizens made him their king.

Note.—An Infinitive can come between the verb and the noun :—

The people considered him to be a wise man.

(3) In Apposition with a noun or pronoun :—

The people of England beheaded Charles I., their king.

(4) As Object to a preposition (§ 42) :—

He fought against me. A house built on sand.

(5) Adverbial Objective :—called “Adverbial,” because such phrases qualify words as an adverb would do :—

<sup>1</sup> It is maintained in Mason's English Grammar, p. 150, ed. 1891, that “the cognate objective should more properly be classed among the Adverbial Adjuncts,” that is, as an Adverbial objective, see § 178 (5). This we cannot admit, because when the verb of the sentence is changed from Active to Passive, as “He fought a good fight,” “A good fight was fought by him,” the cognate object becomes the Subject ; whereas, if the cognate object were adverbial, it would remain adverbial.

He lived ten years (Time). He walked ten miles (Space). This cost ten shillings (Price). That box weighs ten pounds (Weight). The air is a trifle hotter to-day (Degree). Bind him hand and foot (Attendant circumstance).

(6) Objective after the adjectives "like" or "unlike," "near," "next." (This has arisen from the omission of the preposition "to," which is still sometimes used after these adjectives):—

No man could bend the bow like him.

The house nearest the grove is the one that I prefer.

(7) Objective after Interjections or in exclamatory phrases:—

Oh unhappy man! Oh dear me!

Foolish fellow! to have wasted his time as he has done!

179. Two uses of Adjectives.—See No. IV. of Parsing Chart.

(a) Attributive use (§ 58):—

An industrious student will generally succeed.

(b) Predicative use (§ 58):—

He was industrious, and therefore he succeeded.

180. Noun or Gerund used as an Adjective.—It can be used attributively for an adjective, but not predicatively:—

A village watchman. Drinking water. A bathing place.

181. Adjective substituted for Adverb.—An adverb qualifying a verb can be changed into an adjective qualifying the subject to the verb. (More common in poetry than in prose.)

And furious every charger neighed.—CAMPBELL.

They neither toil nor spin, but careless grow.—THOMSON.

First they praised him soft and low.—TENNYSON.

Note 1.—When the adverb qualifies any part of speech except a verb, we cannot substitute an adjective for it. Thus we cannot say, "He is immense clever" for "He is immensely clever."

Note 2.—In poetry an adjective and adverb are sometimes coupled together by and.

Very carefully and slow.—TENNYSON.

Good gentlemen, look fresh and merrily.—SHAKSPEARE.

Here either one -ly is made to do duty for both adjectives; or the construction is mixed, the adjective qualifying the subject, and the adverb the verb.

182. Pronoun and Antecedent.—See Nos. II. and III. of Parsing Chart.

(a) A Pronoun must be in the same case, number, and gender as the noun it stands for; but in case it depends upon its own sentence. (This is called a Concord or Agreement.)

After Cæsar was declared emperor (Nom.), they slew him (Obj.).

You must return the book (Objective), which (Nominative) was lent.

(b) A Conjunctive Pronoun, if it has two Antecedents not of the same person, agrees in person with the Antecedent nearest to it:—

You are the man who is (not are) chosen.

183. Two uses of Adverbs.—See No. V. of Parsing Chart.

(a) Attributive use (§ 159).

(1) Adjective.—He is remarkably clever.

(2) Verb.—Act decisively, if you act at all.

(3) Other Adverb.—He explained his views remarkably well.

(4) Preposition.—The sun stood exactly over our heads.

(5) Conjunction.—You may go only if you promise to return.

(6) Sentence.—Fortunately, all the thieves were caught (§ 150).

(b) Predicative use (§ 159).

(1) Intrans. verb.—The results will soon be out (= published).

(2) Trans. verb.—We have found him out (= in his true character).

184. Verb and Subject.—See No. VI. of Parsing Chart.

A Finite Verb must be in the same number and person as its Subject (§ 109). (This is another Concord or Agreement.)

Note.—Avoid such a mistake as “The man with his dog have just come.” Such a mistake arises from confounding “with” with “and.”

185. Subjects not of the same Person.—(a) When two or more Subjects, not of the same Person, are joined by “and,” the verb is in the First person rather than the Second, and in the Second rather than the Third; and the First person should be mentioned last:—

James and I are (= we are) great friends.

(b) When two Subjects are joined by “or” or “nor,” the verb agrees in person with the Subject nearest to it:—

Either James or I am at the top of the class.

Either you or James has done it.

Neither James nor you were present.

It would be better, however, to repeat the verb for each Subject. The sentences would then be re-written as follows:—

Either James is at the top of the class, or I am.

Either you have done it, or James has.

Neither James was present, nor you were.

(c) When two Subjects are joined by “as well as,” the verb agrees in number and person with the first one:—

My comrades as well as I myself were caught.

The reason of this rule is that “My comrades were caught” is the Principal clause, to which the other clause introduced by “as well as” is Co-ordinate (see § 170).

186. Two Singular Subjects with Plural Verb.—Two or more Singular nouns, when they are joined by “and,” require a verb in the Plural.

A man and his wife have come here asking for work.

Your horse and mine (=my horse) are both at the door.

To this rule there are a few exceptions:—

(a) If the two nouns joined by “and” refer to the same person or thing, the verb is Singular, and not Plural; as—

The great scholar and poet is dead.

Here “scholar” and “poet” refer to the same man, and the sentence might have been written:—

The man, who was a great scholar and a great poet, is dead.

Note.—When the article is mentioned only once, as in the sentence “the great scholar and poet,” it stands for both the nouns. This shows that only one person (and not two) is intended, and that hence the verb must be singular.

But if the article is mentioned twice, as in the sentence “the scholar and the poet,” then two distinct persons are intended, and the verb following must be in the plural number; as—

The scholar and the poet are dead.

(b) If the two nouns joined by “and” are regarded as denoting a single object or notion, the verb is Singular; as—

Truth and honesty (=the practice of truth and honesty) is the best policy. Slow and steady wins the race.

(c) If the two nouns joined by “and” are qualified by a Distributive adjective (§ 57), the verb is Singular; as—

Every man and woman is gone. (This is really a condensed form of two sentences:—“Every man (is gone) and every woman is gone.”)

(d) If the two Singular nouns are connected by as well as, the verb is Singular:—

James as well as John has been promoted. (This is really a condensed form of two sentences: “James has been promoted, as well as John has been promoted.” See above, § 185, c.)

187. One Singular Subject with Plural Verb.—A noun of Multitude (see § 24, Note 2), since it implies plurality, is followed by a Plural verb:—

The jury (i.e. the individual jurors) were divided in their opinions. The jury (as one body) selected its speaker.

188. Noun-Infinitive.—See No. VII. of Chart.

The Noun-Infinitive may be (a) the Subject to a verb, (b) the Object to a verb, (c) the Complement to a verb, (d) the Object to a preposition (although this is very uncommon), (e) a form of exclamation (see § 127, I.):—

- (a) Subj. to Verb.—To sleep is necessary to health.
 (b) Obj. to Verb.—We desire to improve.
 (c) Compl. to Verb.—He appears to be clever.
 (d) Obj. to Prepos.—Your cow is about (=near) to die (=death).
 (e) Form of Exclam.—To think that he should have deceived me !

189. Qualifying Infinitive.

—See No. VII. of Chart.

The Qualifying Infinitive may be used—(a) to qualify a verb, in which case it does the work of an adverb; (b) to qualify a noun, in which case it does the work of an adjective; (c) to qualify an adjective, in which case it does the work of an adverb; (d) to introduce a parenthesis, in which case it is absolute (see § 127, II.) :—

- (a) Verb.—They went out to see the sport.
 (b) Noun { A house to let. (Attributive.)
           { This house is to let. (Predicative.)
 (c) Adjective.—Be quick to hear and slow to speak.
 (d) Parenthesis.—He is, —to speak plainly, —a thief.

Note.—In qualifying a noun, the Infinitive is sometimes used in the Passive voice. No rule, however, can be given as to when the Active voice is the more idiomatic and when the Passive :—

- A man to be admired. (Attributive.)
 That man is to be admired. (Predicative.)

190. Three uses of Participles.

—See No. IX. of Chart.

(a) Attributive use (see § 58 for Adjectives) :—

A willing horse.      A fallen tree.      A withered flower.

(b) Predicative use.—This may occur either (1) when the Participle is Complement to some verb (see § 58 again), or (2) when the Participle is used absolutely with some noun going before (see § 176, 5).

- (1) { We found him sleeping. (Object. Compl.)
       { He became alarmed. (Subject. Compl.)
 (2) Our pace was slow, the horse being tired. (Absolute.)

Note 1.—That the Participle is predicative in the Absolute construction is clear from the fact that an absolute phrase can be easily rewritten in the form of a clause, in which a Finite verb is substituted for the Participle :—

- { Our pace was slow, the horse being tired.
 { Our pace was slow, because the horse was tired.

Note 2.—When no noun or pronoun is expressed, the Participle is called an Impersonal Absolute.

Supposing this to be true, you are certainly guilty.

(c) Gerundive use (§ 141).—Here the Participle denotes something that could be as well or better expressed by a Gerund or Verbal noun :—

{ This prevented the letter being sent ; =
 { This prevented the sending of the letter.

Note.—If we insert the preposition “from,” “This prevented the letter from being sent,” the form being sent is not a participle at all, but a Gerund or Verbal noun in the Passive voice. On this form see § 135.

191. Sequence of Tenses.—There are two main rules :—

I. A Past tense in the Principal sentence must be followed by a Past tense in the Dependent sentence :—

He would come, if you wished it.
 He succeeded, because he worked hard.
 He worked hard, that he might succeed.

Exceptions.—(1) If the verb in the Dependent sentence expresses some universal or habitual fact, it is in the Present tense :—

They did not know, that the earth moves round the sun.

(2) After “than” the verb can be in the Present or Future tense ; in fact, in any tense that expresses the sense intended :—

He liked you better than he likes me.
 He liked you better than he will like me.

II. A Present or Future tense in the Principal sentence can be followed by any tense whatever in the Dependent sentence :—

I know that he was angry.
 I shall soon get the letter that he posted yesterday.

NOTE ON CONCORD AND GOVERNMENT.

Syntax is sometimes subdivided under two main headings :—

I. Concord or Agreement. II. Government.

But this division is not of much use in our Syntax.

Concord or Agreement.

(1) The verb agrees with its subject in Number and Person (§ 184).

(2) The Demonstrative adjective “this” or “that” must be of the same number as the noun it qualifies. (These are the only two adjectives to which this Concord now applies.)

(3) A pronoun must be of the same Number, Gender, and Person as the noun it stands for. This is dealt with in § 182.

(4) A noun in apposition with a pronoun or other noun must be in the same case. This is shown in § 176 (3), § 177 (b), and § 178 (3).

Government.

Certain Verbs, two or three Adjectives, and all Prepositions govern a noun or pronoun in the Objective case.

CHAPTER XIII.—ANALYSIS IN DETAIL.

SECTION I.—SENTENCES SIMPLE, COMPOUND, AND COMPLEX.

192. Simple Sentence.—A Simple sentence (Lat. simplex, single-fold) is one that has only one Finite verb expressed or understood.

|   |   |
|---|---|
| Subject.                             | Predicate.   |
| The merchant, having much property to sell, | caused all his goods to be conveyed on camels, there being no railway in that country. |

In this sentence there are five different verbs, "having," "to sell," "caused," "to be conveyed," "being." Of these only one, viz. "caused," is finite. The sentence is therefore Simple.

193. Compound Sentence.—A compound sentence is one made up of two or more Co-ordinate clauses.

Co-ordinate clauses are joined together by the Co-ordinative conjunctions (§ 167).

- (1) The sun rose with power, and the fog dispersed . (Cumulative.)
- (2) He called at my house, but I was not at home . (Adversative.)
- (3) Either he must go or I (must go) . (Alternative.)
- (4) He came back tired; for he had been out all day . (Illative.)

In (1) one clause is simply added to another. In (2) one clause is contrasted with another. In (3) one clause is offered as an alternative to another. In (4) one clause is inferred from another.

Note.—When sentences are connected, not by any Co-ordinative conjunction, but merely by co-ordination of sense and by unity of construction, they are said to be collateral :—

The way was long ; the night was cold ;
 The minstrel was infirm and old ;
 The harp, his sole remaining joy,
 Was carried by an orphan boy.—SCOTT.

194. The Conjunctive pronoun who or which, or a Conjunctive adverb, such as where, when, etc., provided its sense is continuative, and not restrictive (§ 83), may be used to connect Co-ordinate clauses :—

He went to London, where (=and there) he stayed ten days.

195. Complex Sentence.—A Complex sentence consists of a Principal clause (i.e. the clause containing the main Finite verb of the sentence) with one or more Subordinate clauses.

|                |   |   |
|----------------|---|---|
| Complex | { | A merchant, who had much property to sell, caused all his goods to be conveyed on camels, as there was no railway in that country. |
| Simple  |   | A merchant, having much property to sell, caused all his goods to be conveyed on camels, there being no railway in that country.   |

The two sentences mean precisely the same thing, and both have a Finite verb in common, "caused." But in other respects they are very different. In the latter there is but one Finite verb, "caused," and therefore the sentence is Simple. In the former, besides the Finite verb "caused," there are two more Finite verbs, "had" and "was," and therefore the sentence must be either Complex or Compound. Which is it?

It is not Compound, but Complex, because—(1) the sense of the clause "who had much property to sell" depends upon the noun merchant, which it qualifies as an adjective would do; and (2) the sense of the clause "as there was no railway in that country" depends upon the verb caused, which it qualifies as an adverb would do. Neither of these clauses makes any sense without reference to some outside word, and therefore the sentence in which they occur is not Compound. So there is one Principal clause and two Subordinate clauses.

"It must never be forgotten that a dependent or subordinate clause is an integral part of the principal sentence to which it belongs, just as though it were an ordinary substantive, adjective, or adverb" (Mason).

196. There are three kinds of Subordinate clauses—the Noun-clause, the Adjective-clause, and the Adverb-clause; and these are defined as follows:—

I. A Noun-clause is one which does the work of a noun in relation to some word in some other clause.

II. An Adjective-clause is one which does the work of an adjective in relation to some word in some other clause.

III. An Adverb-clause is one which does the work of an adverb in relation to some word in some other clause.<sup>1</sup>

Note.—The same clause may be a Noun-clause in one context, an Adjective-clause in another, an Adverb-clause in another.

Where Moses was buried is still unknown.

—Noun-clause, subject to the verb "is."

No one has seen the place where Moses was buried.

—Adj.-clause, qualifying the noun "place."

Without knowing it the Arabs encamped where Moses was buried.

—Adverb-clause qualifying the verb "encamped."

---

<sup>1</sup> In these three definitions word has been printed in black type, because, in stating the kind of clause, it is necessary to state the word to which it relates. Mason's three definitions (Eng. Grammar, p. 160) merely say "in relation to the rest of the sentence." This is rather too vague for purposes of guidance.

I. The Noun-clause.

197. A Noun-clause is subject to all the liabilities and duties of a noun proper. It may therefore be the subject to a verb, the object to a verb, the object to a preposition, the complement to a verb, or in apposition to a noun:—

|   |                       |
|---|-----------------------|
| That he will come back soon is certain . . . .       | Subject.       |
| I shall be glad to know when you will return . . . . | Obj. to verb.  |
| This will sell for what it is worth . . . .          | Obj. to prep.  |
| This is exactly what I expected . . . .              | Comp. to verb. |
| The rumour that he is sick is false . . . .          | App. to noun.  |

Note 1.—From the above examples it will be seen that a Noun-clause can be introduced either by the conjunction “that” or by a Conjunctive pronoun or by a Conjunctive adverb. Sometimes, however, the conjunction that is left out:—

It seems (that) he is not clever.

Note. 2.—A clause containing the very words used by a speaker is another form of Noun-clause:—

All that he said was, “I have seen you before.”

Here the italicised clause is the complement to the verb “was.”

Examples of the Noun-clause.

I. Pick out the Noun-clause in each of the following Examples and say whether it is the Subject to some Verb, or the Object to some Verb, or the Object to some Preposition, or the Complement to some Verb, or in Apposition to some noun expressed. Supply the Conjunction “that” wherever it has been left out:—

1. No one knows when he will come, or whether he will come at all, or whether he is even alive.
2. How this came to pass is not known to any one.
3. What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander.
4. It is quite evident rain will fall to-day.
5. The Equator shows where days and nights are of equal length.
6. What is one man's meat is another man's poison.
7. You must know that the air is never quite at rest.
8. I think I shall never clearly understand this.
9. We heard the school would open in ten days' time.
10. The name “Volcano” indicates the belief of the ancient Greeks, that the burning hills of the Mediterranean were the work-shops of the divine blacksmith, Vulcan.
11. Even a feather shows which way the wind is blowing.
12. Whatever faculty man has is improved by use.
13. The fool hath said in his heart, “There is no God.”
14. “Know thyself,” was the advice given us by a Greek sage.
15. He did not know that his father had been shot.
16. The fact that you have not signed your name to a letter shows that you lack moral courage.
17. It will be easily understood how useful even the simplest weapons were to the first dwellers on the earth.

18. The question first occurring to the mind of a savage is how is fire to be made.

19. Common-sense soon taught him that fire could be produced by rubbing two sticks together.

20. In chipping their flint weapons men must have seen that fire occasionally flashed out.

21. We learn from travellers that savages can produce fire in a few seconds.

22. He shouted out to the thief, "Leave this house."

23. We cannot rely on what he says.

24. It is quite evident you have made a mistake.

25. It was very unfortunate that you were taken ill.

26. He was a man of fine character except that he was rather timid.

II. Expand each Simple Sentence into a Complex one containing a Noun-clause or clauses :—

1. I was glad to hear of your having succeeded so well.

2. He is generally believed to have died of poison.

3. No one can tell the time of his coming.

4. One man's meat is another man's poison.

5. We have read of savages being able to produce fire by the friction of two pieces of wood.

6. He shouted to his neighbours to come to his help.

7. We can place no confidence in any of his words.

8. The fact of his having gone away without leaving us his address is a clear proof of the dishonesty of his intentions.

9. The usefulness of even the simplest weapons to men in the savage state will easily be understood.

10. His death at so young an age is much to be regretted.

11. We must hope for better times.

12. Tell me the time and place of your birth.

13. The verdict of the judge was in favour of the accused.

14. All his statements should be accepted.

15. They questioned the propriety of doing that.

16. The greatness of his labour could be seen from the result.

17. My departure will depend upon my getting leave.

18. He desired to know the nature of his offence.

19. The burial-place of Moses was never known to the Jews.

20. They explained to him the duty of confessing his fault.

21. He was reported to have lost most of his money.

22. We know the name of the writer of that letter.

II. Adjective-clause.

198. An Adjective-clause has but one function, viz. to qualify some noun or pronoun belonging to some other clause. In doing this it simply does the work of an adjective proper. Remember that the Conjunctive pronoun or Conjunctive adverb, by which an Adjective-clause is introduced, must have a Restrictive, not a Continuative, sense (§ 83); for if the sense is Continuative, and not Restrictive, the sentence is Compound, not Complex (§ 194).

- (1) We found it in the place where we had left it . Complex.
 (2) We went to Brighton, where we spent a week . Compound.

In (1) the sentence is Complex, because the clause "where we had left it" qualifies the noun "place" as an adjective would do. Where is here Restrictive. In (2) the sentence is Compound, because the clause "where we spent a week" is merely Continuative,—co-ordinate with the preceding clause :—
 "We went to Brighton, and spent a week there."

Note.—The Conjunctive pronoun (when used in a Restrictive sense) is sometimes left out. (It is never left out when the sense is Continuative) :—

The food (that or which) he needed was sent.

I. Pick out the Adjective-clause or clauses in each of the following examples, and point out the noun or pronoun qualified by it in some other clause. If the Conjunctive pronoun has been omitted anywhere, supply it :—

1. Man has the power of making instruments, which bring into view stars, whose light has taken a thousand years to reach the earth.
2. The first thing that man needed was some sharp-edged tool.
3. The exact time when the theft was committed was never found out.
4. The man by whom the theft was committed has been caught.
5. The house we lived in has fallen down.
6. This is the same story that I heard ten years ago.
7. It's an ill wind that blows no one any good.
8. This is not such a book as I should have chosen.
9. He made his living by the presents he received from the men he served.
10. All that glitters is not gold.
11. In ponds, from which but a week before the wind blew clouds of dust, men now catch the re-animated fish.
12. A river is joined at places by tributaries that swell its waters.
13. Of what use is a knowledge of books to him who fails to practise virtue ?
14. Fortune selects him for her lord, who reflects before acting.
15. Springs are fed by rain, which has percolated through the rocks or soil.
16. Nuncoomar prepared to die with that quiet fortitude with which the Bengalee, so backward, as a rule, in personal conflict, often encounters calamities for which there is no remedy.
17. I have seen the house where Shakspeare was born.
18. The plan you acted on has answered well.
19. They accepted every plan we proposed.
20. Surely the story you are telling me is not true.
21. Thrice is he armed that hath his quarrel just.
22. The night is long that never finds the day.

23. He travelled home by the way his father showed him.
24. There are times when every one feels a little sad.
25. Such men as are false to their friends should always be avoided.
26. I forgot to tell you the time when I shall return.

II. Expand each Simple sentence into a Complex one containing an Adjective-clause :—

1. Our present house suits us exactly.
2. This rule, the source of all our troubles, is disliked by every one.
3. That was a fault not to be forgiven.
4. The diamond field is not far from here.
5. He and his friend entered into a partnership binding themselves to incur equal risks.
6. Their explanation cannot be true.
7. The king took refuge in the fortress, being determined to make a last attempt in that place to save his kingdom.
8. The snow-line in India is about 20,000 feet high.
9. The troubles besetting him on all sides did not daunt him.
10. They soon forgot their past labours.
11. This spot, the first landing-place of the Pilgrim Fathers, is held to be sacred ground.
12. My leave-application has been dispatched.
13. Is this the way to learn your lessons ?
14. A certain cholera-cure has not yet been found.
15. Egypt was one of the first countries to become civilised.
16. Death from snake-bite is of daily occurrence.
17. The benefits of his early training were thrown away.
18. That was the act of a coward.
19. Milton was the greatest poet in King Charles's reign.
20. These hills have never yet been trodden by the foot of man.

III. The Adverb-clause.

199. An Adverb-clause does the work of an adverb to some verb, adjective, or adverb belonging to some other clause.

An Adverb-clause can be introduced by any of the Subordinative conjunctions, or by the Conjunctive adverbs—where, when, whether, etc. :—

| Principal Clause.  | Adverb-Clause.           | Subord. Conjunc.  |
|---------------------------|---------------------------------|--------------------------|
| He will succeed,          | because he works hard    | Cause.            |
| He worked so hard, | that he was quite tired  | Effect.           |
| He took medicine          | that he might get well   | Purpose.          |
| I will do this,           | if I am allowed          | Condition.        |
| He is honest,             | although he is poor      | Contrast.         |
| He likes you more  | than (he likes) me       | Comparison.       |
| Men will reap             | as they sow              | Extent or Manner. |
| The tooth stopped aching  | when the dentist came in | Time.             |

200. After the conjunctions though, when, unless, till, if, whether . . . or, and while, the Predicate-verb "to be" and its Subject are often omitted. These must be supplied in the Analysis.

Though (he was) much alarmed, he did not lose all hope.
 He sprained his foot, while (he was) walking in the dark.
 His opinion, whether (it is) right or wrong, does not concern me.

201. When an Adverb-clause is introduced by "than," its Finite Verb is not always expressed. It must then be borrowed in the same tense from the clause to which it is subordinate:—

He loves you better than (he loves) me.
 He loves you better than I (love you).

202. The Conjunctive pronoun "who" or "which" makes an Adverb-clause, whenever it is substituted for a Subordinative conjunction signifying Cause or Purpose:—

Cause.—They should pardon my son, who (= because he) has never committed such a fault before.

Purpose.—A man was sent, who should deliver (= that he might deliver) the message.

Note.—The student can now therefore take note that four different kinds of clauses can be introduced by the pronoun "who" or "which":—(1) A Co-ordinate clause, where the pronoun is used in a Continuative sense. This belongs to Compound sentences. (2) A Noun-clause, where no Antecedent to the pronoun is expressed. This belongs to Complex sentences. (3) An Adjective-clause, where the pronoun is used in a Restrictive sense. This belongs to Complex sentences. (4) An Adverb-clause, where the pronoun is used in the sense of Cause or Purpose. This also belongs to Complex sentences.

I. Pick out the Adverb-clause or clauses in the following. Show what word or phrase is qualified by every such clause, and what Adverbial relation is denoted thereby:—

1. He will succeed, because he has worked hard.
2. Men engage in some work, that they may earn a living.
3. He threatened to beat him, unless he confessed.
4. He was always honest, although he was poor.
5. This is not true, so far as I can tell.
6. He likes you as much as I do.
7. He tried for a long time before he succeeded.
8. Let us go to bed, as it is now late.
9. He walked with care, lest he should stumble.
10. I agree to this, provided you sign your name.
11. Though he punish me, yet will I trust in him.
12. He returned home, after he had finished the work.
13. Prove a friend, before you trust him.
14. When the cat's away, the mice will play.
15. He persevered so steadily, that he succeeded at last.
16. I will let off this man, who has been well punished already.
17. He sees very well, considering that he is sixty years of age.

18. I gave him a prize, that he might work harder next year.
19. They deserted their former associate, who had become poor and unfortunate.
20. As the tree falls, so will it lie.
21. Ever since we left the house, it has not ceased raining.
22. I would be glad to lend you that money, if I had as much in my own pocket.
23. Murder, though it have no tongue, will yet speak.
24. Unless you leave the house at once, I will send for a policeman.
25. A jackal, while prowling about the suburbs of a town, slipped into an indigo tank; and not being able to get out he laid himself down, so that he might be taken for dead.
26. Ambassadors were sent from Sparta, who should sue for peace.

II. Expand each Simple sentence into a Complex one containing an Adverb-clause or clauses :—

1. In the absence of any other helper, we must accept his aid.
2. The two chief points having been gained, success is now certain.
3. Owing to repeated failures, he made no further attempt.
4. The problem was too difficult to be solved.
5. He worked very well, to the astonishment of every one.
6. He fell under suspicion by becoming suddenly rich.
7. He worked hard for the purpose of gaining a prize.
8. Every precaution was taken against the failure of the plan.
9. He purposes to become rich by sticking steadily to his work.
10. Without leave from the master, we should not go out.
11. He would be very thankful to be relieved of all this trouble.
12. With or without his leave, I shall leave the room.
13. He would have been caught, but for his flight across the border.
14. Notwithstanding the heat of the sun we must go out.
15. In spite of all his riches, he is never contented.
16. For all his experience he is still incompetent.
17. The depth of the sea equals the height of the mountains.
18. With every man who came in, another went out.
19. Of all the boys in the class James is the most industrious.
20. Keep perfectly silent at peril of your lives.
21. Be it done unto thee according to thy belief.
22. The harvest will depend upon the sowing.
23. Nothing in my opinion will prosper under such a man.
24. He returned to duty immediately on the expiry of his leave.
25. With every cough he felt a good deal of pain.
26. In the performance of duty, no one should feel afraid.

SECTION 2.—SCHEME OF ANALYSIS IN DETAIL.

203. Scheme of Analysis.—The scheme of Analysis, given already in § 8, is here recapitulated to save reference :—

A man convinced against his will is of the same opinion still.

He made himself mean and of no reputation.

The second master of the school has been teaching my sons Euclid since Thursday last.

Whom the gods love die young.

| I. SUBJECT.                     |  | II. PREDICATE.       |   |                                    |                            |
|---------------------------------|--|----------------------|---|------------------------------------|----------------------------|
| NominativeorEquivalent. | Enlarge-ment.                                  | Finite verb.         | Completion.   |                                    | Extension.                 |
|                                 |  |                      | Object.(1) Direct.(2) Indirect.                             | Complement.                        |                            |
| 1                               | 2  | 3                    | 4   | 5                                  | 6                          |
| man                             | (1) A(2) con-vincedagainsthis will | is                   | ...   | of thesameopinion          | still.                     |
| He                              | ...  | made                 | himself   | mean andof no re-putation. |                            |
| master                          | (1) The(2) second(3) of theschool      | has beenteaching | (1) DirectEuclid(2) In-directmy sons | ...                                | sinceThursdaylast. |
| Whom thegods love           | ...  | die                  | ...   | ...                                | young.                     |

204. Nominative or its equivalent: see heading to col. 1.

This is the chief part of the Subject, and when there is no enlargement, it is the only part. It is this that fixes the number and person of the Finite verb. Its most typical form is that of a noun or pronoun in the Nominative case. The following is a list of the various forms in which a Nominative or its equivalent can be expressed: <sup>1</sup>—

- (1) Noun.—A ship went out to sea yesterday.
- (2) Adj. used as Noun.—The brave are always respected.
- (3) Pronoun.—He (some one previously named) has gone.
- (4) Noun-Infinitive.—To walk regularly is good for health.
- (5) Gerund or Verbal noun.—Reading is good for the mind.
- (6) Noun-phrase.—How to do this is a difficult question.
- (7) Noun-clause.—Whom the gods love die young.

Note.—Sometimes a sentence begins with “it,” and the Nominative or its equivalent is mentioned after the verb: “It is easy to do this.” Here the “it” is redundant, and may be left out in the analysis:—“To do this is easy.”

<sup>1</sup> There is no need to commit this list of forms to memory. They are enumerated merely to show what the student may expect to find. The same remark applies to the lists in §§ 205-209.

205. Enlargement : see heading to col. 2. The most typical form is an Adjective. We call this "enlargement," because an adjective, according to the definition given in § 12, "is a word that enlarges the meaning of a noun and narrows its application."

The following is a list of the various forms in which an "enlargement" can be expressed :—

- (1) Adjective.—Just men deserve to prosper.
- (2) Participle.—A fertilising shower fell to-day.
- (3) Qualifying Infin.—Water to drink is scarce in this place.
- (4) Possessive noun or pronoun.—Your teacher has come.
- (5) Noun used as Adj.—The village school opens at eight A.M.
- (6) Gerund used as Adj.—Drinking water is scarce here.
- (7) Prep. with object.<sup>1</sup>—A man of virtue does not tell lies.
- (8) Adverb with Def. article.—The then king died suddenly.
- (9) Noun in Apposition.—Charles, my son, has come.
- (10) Noun-clause in Appos.—The rumour that he was dead is false.
- (11) Adjective-clause.—The house in which we live has been sold.

206. Finite verb : see heading to col. 3. This is the chief part of the predicate, and, when the verb is Intransitive and of Complete predication (§ 6), it can be the only part ; as, "Hogs grunt."

If the tense or mood of the Finite verb is formed, not by inflexion, but by the help of one of the six Auxiliary verbs (§ 102), remember that the Auxiliary verb and the Principal verb together make up the Finite verb, and must be mentioned together in column 3.

| Subject. | Finite verb.        | Object.       |
|----------|---------------------|---------------|
| I        | have been examining | the pictures. |

But if the previous verb is not Auxiliary, as "will," for instance, when it occurs in the first person of the Future tense (§ 115), in such a sentence will alone makes the Finite verb, and the Noun-Infinitive that follows is its Object :—

| Subject. | Finite verb. | Object.            |
|----------|--------------|--------------------|
| I        | will         | see him to-morrow. |

<sup>1</sup> In such a phrase as "a brute of a man," the "of" denotes apposition, "a man a brute," i.e. a brutish man, a man who is a brute. In such a phrase, therefore, the sense is analogous to (9), and not to (7).

207. Object, direct or indirect: see col. 4. The different forms in which a Direct object can be expressed are the same as those in which the Nominative can be expressed (§ 204):—

- (1) Noun.—The snake bit the man.
- (2) Adj. used as Noun.—He satisfied the public.
- (3) Pronoun.—My friend will not deceive me.
- (4) Noun-Infinitive.—He deserves to succeed.
- (5) Gerund or Verbal noun.—He likes riding.
- (6) Noun-phrase.—We did not know how to do it.
- (7) Noun-clause.—We do not know who he is.

There are only two forms in which an Indirect object can be expressed, viz. a noun denoting some person or other animal, or some personal pronoun:—

- He gave James a book . . . . . (Trans. verb.)
- He overslept himself . . . . . (Intrans. verb.)

208. Complement: see heading to col. 5. The following are the various forms in which a Complement can be expressed (§§ 92, 95):—

- (1) Noun { The citizens made him their king . . . . . (Fact.)
 { That beggar turned out a thief . . . . . (Cop.)
- (2) Possessive { She made A.'s quarrel her own . . . . . (Fact.)
 { This book is mine, not James's. . . . . (Cop.)
- (3) Adjective { The judge set the prisoner free . . . . . (Fact.)
 { The prisoner is now free . . . . . (Cop.)
- (4) Participle { They found her weeping . . . . . (Fact.)
 { He seemed much pleas'd . . . . . (Cop.)
- (5) Prep. with object { I prefer a dog to a cat . . . . . (Fact.)
 { He is in a sad plight . . . . . (Cop.)
- (6) Qualifying Infinitive { I like a thief to be punished . . . . . (Fact.)
 { This house is to let . . . . . (Cop.)
- (7) Adverb { That noise sent him asleep . . . . . (Fact.)
 { The man has fallen asleep . . . . . (Cop.)
- (8) Noun-clause { We have made him what he is . . . . . (Fact.)
 { The result is what we expected . . . . . (Cop.)

209. Extension: see heading to col. 6. The most typical form is an Adverb. We call this "extension," because an adverb, according to the definition given in § 16, "is a word that extends the meaning and narrows the application of any part of speech except a noun or pronoun."

Two points should be noticed: (1) In the analysis of sentences (not in parsing, which is a different kind of operation), extension applies only to the Finite verb of its own clause: if an adverb or adverb-equivalent belongs to any part of a sentence except the Finite verb, it must not be placed in column 6. (2) "Ex-

"tension" means the same thing as "enlargement." But as one relates to the Finite verb, and the other to the Nominative or its equivalent, it is convenient in analysing sentences to give them separate names.

The following are the various forms in which "extension" can be expressed :—

- (1) Adverb.—He slept soundly.
- (2) Prep. with object.—He slept for six hours.
- (3) Adjective.—He went away sad.
- (4) Participle.—He went away disappointed.
- (5) Qualifying Infin.—He came to see the horse.
- (6) Adverbial objective.—Bind him hand and foot.
- (7) Absolute phrase.—We all set off, he remaining behind.
- (8) Adverb-clause.—We all set off, while he remained behind.

Note.—The student must not be surprised that in (3) an adjective is included among forms of extension, the typical form of which is an adverb. Analysis is not the same thing as parsing: there are three differences at least. (1) In analysis the unit to be dealt with is a sentence; in parsing a single word. (2) Analysis deals with grammar on its logical side; parsing on its syntactical. The word "sad," though it is an adjective in form and in syntax, is adverbial in function. In what manner or in what state of mind did he go away? In a sad state. The word "sad" therefore qualifies the verb "went away" in just the same way as if it were expressed in the form "sadly." The same remark applies to the participle "disappointed" in the fourth sentence. (3) There are some words which can be parsed, but do not come within the framework of analysis at all; such as an interjection, an exclamatory phrase, a nominative of address.

SECTION 3.—DEGREES OF SUBORDINATION.

210. Degrees of Subordination.—The following sentence may be taken as an example for analysis :—

One man in the audience, who was chief magistrate of the town and happened to be present, on seeing that the lion fawned on Androcles, when it was expected to tear him to pieces, called out with a loud voice, and ordered Androcles to explain how a savage beast could have so forgotten its innate disposition all of a sudden, that it became converted into a harmless animal, which chose to spare its intended victim rather than devour him.

Now, when we come to divide this sentence into its component clauses, we find, firstly, that it is a Compound sentence, consisting of two co-ordinate clauses connected by and, and secondly, that each of the co-ordinate clauses contains subordinate ones, the former containing three, and the latter four.

The two co-ordinate clauses, which are connected by and and make the sentence a Compound one, are marked by A and B.

(A) One man in the audience, (a) who was chief magistrate of the town (b) and happened to be present, on seeing (x) that the lion fawned on Androcles, (y) when it was expected to tear him to pieces, called out with a loud voice, (B) and ordered Androcles to explain (a) how a savage beast could have so forgotten its innate disposition all of a sudden, (b) that it became converted into a harmless animal, (c) which chose to spare its intended victim rather (d) than to devour him.

In (A) we see that clause (a) is an adjective-clause in the first degree, qualifying the noun "man"; clause (b) is co-ordinate to clause (a), and therefore a second adjective-clause to the noun "man"; clause (x) is a noun-clause in the first degree, object to the verb "seeing"; clause (y) is an adverb-clause in the second degree, qualifying the verb "fawned."

In (B) we see that clause (a) is a noun-clause in the first degree, object to the verb "explain"; clause (b) is an adverb-clause in the second degree, qualifying the verb "forgotten"; clause (c) is an adjective-clause in the third degree, qualifying the noun "animal"; and clause (d) is an adverb-clause in the fourth degree, qualifying the verb "chose."

The degree of subordination (as first, second, third, fourth, etc.), is shown by the number of lines drawn under the clause concerned.

211. Tabular form of Analysis.—Before beginning to analyse a sentence of many clauses in tabular form, it will be best to write it out with the clauses marked off in the manner shown in § 210. This will serve as a key to the tabulation, of which a complete example is given on page 106.

Words that are understood must be supplied: they can be shown in brackets in their proper column.

Words which do not come within the framework of analysis must be left out; as, for instance, an interjection, an exclamatory phrase, a noun used for purposes of address; see Note to § 209.

This heavy rain, alas! has spoiled the harvest this year.

The farmers, poor fellows! have lost heavily.

Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears.

It will be seen at once that there is no heading in the tabular form of analysis, under which the italicised words or phrases could be placed. In such a sentence as the following—

Happily he did not die, the adverb qualifies the sentence, not the verb "die." Since it is not an extension of the verb "die," there is no place for it in the tabular form, and it must be left out.

| Clause.  | Kind of Clause.                    | Connective. | I. SUBJECT.               |                                | Finite verb. | II. PREDICATE.  |                                   |   |
|--|------------------------------------|-------------|---------------------------|--------------------------------|--------------|---|-----------------------------------|---|
|  |                                    |             | Nominative or Equivalent. | Enlargement.                   |              | Completion.   | Complement.                       | Extension.  |
|  |                                    |             | 1                         | 2                              | 3            | 4   | 5                                 | 6   |
| A. One man in the audience called out with a loud voice, on seeing that etc.           | Principal.                         | ..          | man                       | (1) One(2) in the audience | called out   | (1) Direct.(2) Indirect.                              | ..                                | (1) with a loud voice,(2) on seeing that etc. |
| (a) who was chief magistrate of the town   | Adj.-clause to "man" in A.         | who         | who                       | ..                             | was          | ..  | chief magistrate of the town      | ..  |
| (b) and happened to be present,  | Co-ord. to (a).                    | and         | (who)                     | ..                             | happened     | ..  | to be present,                    | ..  |
| (c) that the lion fawned on Androcles,   | Noun-clause, object to "seeing."   | that        | lion                      | the                            | fawned on    | Androcles,  | ..                                | ..  |
| (d) when it was expected to tear him to pieces,  | Adv.-clause, qualifying, "fawned." | when        | it                        | ..                             | was expected | ..  | to tear him to pieces,            | ..  |
| B. and ordered Androcles to explain  | Principal, co-ord. to A.           | and         | (man)                     | ..                             | ordered      | Androcles   | to explain etc.                   | ..  |
| (a) how a savage beast could have so forgotten its innate disposition all of a sudden, | Noun-clause object to "explain."   | how         | beast                     | (1) a(2) savage            | could        | have so forgotten its innate disposition all of a sudden, | ..                                | ..  |
| (b) that it became converted into a harmless animal,                                   | Adv.-clause to "have forgotten."   | that        | it                        | ..                             | became       | ..  | converted into a harmless animal, | ..  |
| (c) which chose to spare its intended victim   | Adj.-clause to "animal."           | which       | which                     | ..                             | chose        | to spare its intended victim                              | ..                                | rather than etc.                                  |
| (d) rather than to devour him.   | Adv.-clause to "chose."            | than        | (it)                      | ..                             | (chose)      | to devour him.  | ..                                | ..  |

I.—Examples in Parsing and Analysis.

For parsing a word the student can follow the Parsing Chart given at the opening of chap. xii. The method there shown is as follows :—

I. Noun.—What kind (Proper, Common, Collective, Material, or Abstract)? What gender (Masc., Fem., or Neut.)? What number (Sing. or Plur.)? What case (Nom., Poss., or Obj.)? Why in such a case (see all possible reasons in Parsing Chart No. III.)?

II. Pronoun.—What kind (Pers., Dem., Conj., or Interr.)? What gender (depends on antecedent)? What number (depends on anteced.)? What person (depends on anteced.)? What case (depends on its own clause, see Parsing Chart No. III.).

IV. Adjective.—What kind (Proper, Descriptive, Quantit., Interr., Distrib., Numeral, or Demons.)? What degree of Comparison (Pos., Comp., or Superl.)? Which use (Attributive or Predicative)? What noun or pronoun does it qualify?

V. Adverb.—What kind (Simple, Conj., or Interr.)? What degree (Pos., Comp. or Superl.)? Which use (Attrib. or Predic.)? If Attrib., to qualify what word or words (Verb, Adj., Adv., Prep., Conj., or Sentence)? If Predic., complement to what verb?

VI. Finite Verb.—What kind (Transitive or Intransitive)? What Conjug. (Strong, Weak, or Mixed)? What person (first, second, or third)? What tense? What mood? What voice? Agreeing with what subject? If Trans., governing what object or objects?

VII. Infinitive.—What form (Indefinite, Continuous, Perfect, or Perf. Contin.)? Which Infin. (Noun-Infin. or Qualif. Infin.)? If Noun-Infin., in what connection? If Qual. Infin., in what connection?

VIII. Gerund.—What form (Pres. or Perf.)? What voice? What kind of verb? If Trans., governing what object?

IX. Participle.—What form (Pres., Past, or Perf.)? What voice? What kind of verb? If Trans., governing what object? What use (Attributive, Predicative, Absolute, or Gerundive)?

X. Conjunction.—What kind (Co-ordinative or Sub-ordinative)? Joining what words or phrases, or what sentences?

Analyse the following sentences, and parse (with any explanation that may be necessary) the words printed in italics :—

1. By torch and trumpet fast arrayed,
Each horseman drew his battle blade,
And furious every charger neighed,
To join the dreadful revelry.—CAMPBELL.
2. Let me hear what you have to say.
3. Week in, week out, from morn till night,
You may hear his bellows blow.—LONGFELLOW.
4. On Linden, when the sun was low,
All bloodless lay the untrodden snow,
And dark as winter was the flow
Of Iser rolling rapidly.—CAMPBELL.
5. Perdition catch my soul, but I love thee.—SHAKSPEARE.
6. I cannot but believe that you are lost.
7. These men, than whom I have never known men more unwilling, have suddenly left me, merely because I asked them to work a little overtime on account of the orders that I unexpectedly received this morning from headquarters.
8. Toll for the brave!
Brave Kempenfelt is gone;
His last sea-fight is fought,
His work of glory done.—COWPER.
9. Cowards die many times before their death;
The valiant only taste of death but once.—SHAKSPEARE.
10. I now gave over any more thoughts of the ship, or of getting anything out of her, except what might drive a-shore from the wreck, as indeed divers pieces of her afterwards did; but those things were of small use to me.—Robinson Crusoe.
11. I like a rascal to be punished,<sup>1</sup> when I am quite sure that his guilt has been proved before a jury who had no prejudice against him, before they began hearing his case.
12. The reason why the seven stars are no more than seven is a pretty reason.—SHAKSPEARE.
13. Just so we have heard a baby, mounted on the shoulders of its father, cry out, "How much taller I am than papa!"—MACAULAY.
14. There is no despair so absolute as that which comes with the first moments of our first great sorrow, when we have not yet known what it is to have suffered and be healed, to have despaired and to have recovered hope.—G. ELIOT.
15. Music, when soft voices die,
Vibrates in the memory;
Odours, when sweet violets sicken,
Live within the sense they quicken.—SHELLEY.

<sup>1</sup> The explanation given in § 92 is that to be punished is the Infin. form of Complement; and this agrees with that given by Abbott in §§ 97 and 105 in How to Parse. Dr. Gow, however, in Method of English, p. 117, has expressed the view that to be punished (=punishment) is the Direct object to the verb "like," and "a rascal" (=for a rascal) the Indirect. Both views appear to be tenable; but on grounds of convenience I have adopted the former. It covers the ground of such a sentence as "I saw him come." This could scarcely be broken up into "I saw come (Direct object) for him (Indirect)."

16. Woe worth the chase, woe worth the day,
That cost thy life, my gallant grey !—SCOTT.
17. What must the king do now ? Must he submit ?
The king shall do it.—SHAKESPEARE.
18. At four o'clock P.M. we reached York, which is a fine old town dating back to the time of the Romans, though they called it by a different name, that I cannot now remember.
19. For what are men better than sheep and goats
That nourish a blind life within the brain,
If, knowing God, they lift not hands of prayer
Both for themselves and those who call them friend ?
TENNYSON.
20. Our deeds shall travel with us from afar,
And what we have been makes us what-we-are.—G. ELIOT.
21. Because half a dozen grasshoppers under a fern make the field ring with their importunate chink, while thousands of great cattle, reposing beneath the shadow of the British oak, chew the cud and are silent, pray do not imagine that those who make the noise are the only inhabitants of the field.—BURKE.
22. For when the noble Cæsar saw him stab,
Ingratitude, more strong than traitors' arms,
Quite vanquish'd him : then burst his mighty heart ;
And, in his mantle muffling up his face,
Even at the base of Pompey's statua,
Which all the while ran blood, great Cæsar fell.—SHAKESPEARE.
23. Let me now tell you that every six hours of study will be injurious to your health, unless you break the period with half an hour's walk in the open air or with some light form of recreation that can give relief to the brain.
24. He was proud, when I praised ; he was submissive, when I reproved him ; but he did never love me, and what he now mistakes for justice and kindness for me, is but the pleasant sensation that all persons feel at revisiting the scenes of their boyish hopes and fears, and the seeing on equal terms the man they were accustomed to look up to with reverence.

II.—General Questions.

1. When a Singular noun ends in an s sound, how is the Possessive sign affected ? How is the Possessive expressed in plurals ?
2. What are Weak verbs ? Classify bring, sing, take, seek, teach, set, bleed, eat as Strong or Weak. Give reasons in each case.
3. Name all the Auxiliary verbs. Why are they so called ? Distinguish them from every other class of verb.
4. Distinguish the uses of but in the following sentences :—
There is but one man present.
I cannot but believe that you are lost.
He is a clever man, but not learned in books.
There was no one present but pitied the lame horse.
He was all but ruined by that investment.
5. Explain and exemplify the difference between Extension and Completion of the predicate, and between a Direct and an Indirect object.

6. Point out the grammatical difference between the in such a sentence as "He did his duty, and was the happier for it," and the in such a sentence as "He was the happier of the two."

7. Account for the resemblance in form between the Verbal noun and the Present Participle. Parse all the words ending in -ing in this sentence: "Darkling, we went singing on our way, with our walking-sticks in our hands, weary of toiling in town."

8. Show by what means Transitive verbs in English can be used intransitively and vice versa. Can Intransitive verbs be conjugated in the Passive voice? If so, to what extent?

9. Classify verbs of Incomplete predication, and exemplify the different forms that the Complement may assume with each class of verb.

10. What principle would you adopt in classifying nouns in English? Exemplify each class.

11. Exemplify the uses of the Qualifying or Gerundial Infinitive. Is there any connection in origin between this and what we now call a Gerund or Verbal noun?

12. Explain and exemplify the meaning of each of the Auxiliary verbs, when the said verbs are not used as Auxiliaries.

13. Under what circumstances are we debarred from parsing than as a conjunction? To what part of speech must we then assign it? Give examples.

14. Explain the points of resemblance and the points of difference between (a) adjectives and adverbs, (b) prepositions and conjunctions.

15. Explain and exemplify the terms Impersonal verbs, Defective verbs, Irregular verbs, Auxiliary verbs, Factitive verbs, Copulative verbs.

16. What is meant by the case of a noun? How did the word come to be used in such a sense?

17. How do we express simply futurity (1) in Finite verbs, (2) in the absolute construction? Give examples.

18. What form of the Indefinite article do you use before the words — history, historical, European, usual, humble, ere? Give reasons.

19. Specify, with examples, the various meanings and uses of one in our language.

20. Give instances of the conversion of Abstract nouns into Concrete, Proper into Common, Material into Common.

21. Define a sentence. How would you deal with the following? (1) go; (2) hence! (3) does it rain? yes; let us return.

22. Explain and exemplify "pro-noun," "pro-verb," "pro-sentence."

23. Explain finite in the phrase "Finite verb." Mention those parts of a verb which are not finite.

24. Examine the following definitions of a preposition:—

"A word used before a noun or pronoun to show its relation to some other word."

"A word that connects a noun with a verb, an adjective, or other noun."

25. Give examples of the three main senses in which the Possessive case can be used. To what class or classes of instances is the use of this case now restricted ?

26. How would you distinguish between a Demonstrative adjective and a Demonstrative pronoun ? Give examples.

27. Distinguish the uses of as in the following sentences :—

Yours is not the same book as mine.

He trembled as he spoke.

Do not act as he did.

Hot as the sun is, we must go out in it.

I will inquire again as to that matter.

As a judge I condemn you, as a man I pity you.

28. Describe and exemplify the different kinds of objects that can be used in connection with verbs.

29. Describe the main tests by which a Weak verb is distinguished from a Strong. Apply these tests to hang, fight, read, beseech, see, saw, say, sow, sew, sue, sit, seethe, sell.

30. Show how the distinction between Attributive and Predicative is applied to adjectives and Simple adverbs, and how that between Continuative and Restrictive is applied to Relative pronouns or Relative adverbs.

31. Exemplify the uses of (a) though, but, (b) as well as, as Co-ordinative or Subordinative conjunctions.

32. What exceptions are there to the rules (1) that two Singular subjects are followed by a Plural verb, (2) that one Singular subject is followed by a Singular verb ?

33. Explain the cases of the words italicised below :<sup>1</sup>—

(a) Knock me this gate and rap me well.—SHAKSPEARE.

(b) Fare thee well. He overslept himself.

(c) Methinks. It likes us well (SHAKS.)

(d) Woe worth the day! Woe is me!

(e) I hope you will do me this favour.

III.—Correct or justify the following. (From London Matriculation Papers, Jan. 1879 to Jan. 1897).

1. I am verily a man who am a Jew.

2. Too great a variety of studies distract the mind.

3. Who do you speak to ?

4. The river has overflown its banks.

5. Man never is, but always to be blest.

6. Neither our virtues or our vices are all our own.

7. If I were old enough to be married, I am old enough to manage my husband's house.

8. I am to blame, not you.

9. Art thou proud yet ? Ay, that I am not thee.

<sup>1</sup> These are all now parsed as Objective cases. For (b) see § 97 ; for (c) see § 148 ; for (e) see § 90. In all of them the preposition to or for is understood. In Old English all these cases were Datives. The construction in (a) is still called the Dative of Interest : "Knock this gate for me and rap well for me." In (d) the prep. to is understood : "Woe happen to the day ! " ; "woe is to me" (Latin, hei mihi).

10.           Whoever the king favours
The cardinal will find employment for.
11. Here you may see that visions are to dread.
12. Nothing but wailings was heard.
13. Neither of them are remarkable for precision.
14. I cannot tell if it be wise or no.
15. It must be confessed that a lampoon or a satire do not carry in them robbery or murder.—Spectator.
16. Whose own example strengthens all his laws,
And is himself the great sublime he draws.
17. They were both fond of one another.
18. Thersites's body is as good as Ajax, when neither are alive.
19. Thou art much older than thy looks.
20. There were no less than five persons concerned.
21. Recite the first six lines of Paradise Lost.
22. Neither he nor we are disengaged.
23. One of the best books (that has been written on the subject.)
24. I like it better than any.
25. And since I never dare to write
As funny as I can.
26. Laying the suspicion on some one, I know not who.
27. Well is him that hath found prudence !
28. Neither he nor I have any doubt of his success.
29. One of the best treatises that has been written on the subject.
30. I am one of those who cannot describe what I do not see.
31. The country was divided into counties, and the counties placed under magistrates.
32. Nobody ever put so much of themselves into their work.
33. He hath given away above half his fortune to the Lord knows who.
34. Friendships which we once hoped and believed would never grow cold.
35. Nepos answered him, Celsus replied, and neither of them were sparing of censures on each other.
36. Such are a few of the many paradoxes one would cite from his writings, and which are now before me.
37. The largest circulation of any Liberal newspaper.
38. Injustice springs only from three causes. . . . Neither of these can be found in a being wise, powerful, and benevolent.
39. This dedication may serve almost for any book that has, is, or shall be published.
40. In the best countries a rise in rents and wages has been found to go together.
41. He belongs to one caste, and the hewers of wood and drawers of water to another.
42. The second assault was met by Buckingham by a counter attack on the Earl of Bristol, whom (he knew) would be the chief witness against him.
43. And many a holy text around she strews,
That teach the rustic moralist to die.
44. This view has been maintained by one of the greatest writers that has appeared in this country.

45. The administration of so many various interests, and of districts so remote, demand no common capacity and vigour.
46. He having none but them, they having none but he.
47. Breaking a constitution by the very same errors that so many have been broke before.
48. They are not only the most charitable of any other nation, but most judicious in distinguishing the properest objects of compassion.
49. The part of this reed used by the Indians is from 10 to 11 feet long, and no tapering can be perceived, one end being as thick as another.
50. If he had writ one word by the next post, this had been just and civil.
51. Thou lovest, but ne'er knew love's sad satiety.
52. Macbeth. There's blood upon thy face.
Murd. 'Tis Banquo's then.
Macb. 'Tis better thee without than he within.
53. This is he, my master said,
Despised the fair Athenian maid.
54. Luckily the monks have recently given away a couple of dogs which were returned to them, or the breed would have been lost.
55. It was the most amiable, although the least dignified, of all the party squabbles by which it had been preceded.
56. Having perceived the weakness of his poems, they now reappear to us under new titles.
57. Neither you nor I am right.
58. I am one of those who cannot describe what I feel.
59. Whom they were I really cannot specify.
60. Whom do you say that I am?
61. His is a poem, one of the completest works that exists in any language.
62. He was shot by a secretary under notice to quit, with whom he was finding fault,—very fortunately without effect.
63. It is characteristic of them to appear but to one person, and he the most likely to be deluded.
64. I think it may assist the reader by placing them before him in chronological order.
65. Few people learn anything that is worth learning easily.
66. My resolution is to spare no expense in education; it is a bad calculation, because it is the only advantage over which circumstances have no control.
67. Image after image, phrase after phrase, starts out vivid, harsh, and emphatic.
68. Books that we can at a glance carry off what is in them are worse than useless for discipline.
69. He preferred to know the worst than to dream the best.
70. Humanity seldom or ever shows itself in inferior minds.
71. You have already been informed of the sale of Ford's theatre, where Mr. Lincoln was assassinated, for religious purposes.
72. The Moor, seizing a bolster, full of rage and jealousy, smothers her.
73. Nor do I know any one with whom I can converse more pleasantly or I would prefer as my companion.

74. They drowned the black and white kittens.
 75. The then Ministry were in favour of the bill.
 76. The people is one ; they have all one language.
 77. George and myself went up the mountain together.
 78. The Duke of Wellington is one of those who never interfere with matters over which he has no control.
 79. Her voice was ever soft, gentle, and low ; an excellent thing in woman.
 80. Peter the Hermit's diet was abstemious, his prayers long and fervent.
 81. I shall have great pleasure in accepting your invitation.
 82. Each of the girls went to their separate rooms to rest and calm themselves.
 83. Being early killed, I sent a party in search of his mangled body.

IV.—Direct and Indirect Narration, with Examples.

A speech is said to be in Direct Narration, when the very words used by the speaker are repeated without any change ; in Indirect, when the words are given with some change of construction.

In Indirect Narration the verbs are bound by the same rules as those given in § 191 for the Sequence of Tenses.

Thus by Rule I., when the reporting or principal verb is in the Past tense, the Present tense in the reported speech must be changed into its corresponding Past form. Thus we change :—

|              |      |               |                        |      |                        |
|--------------|------|---------------|------------------------|------|------------------------|
| Shall | into | should | See             | into | saw             |
| Will  | ,,   | would  | Is seeing       | ,,   | was seeing      |
| May   | ,,   | might  | Has seen        | ,,   | had seen        |
| Can   | ,,   | could  | Has been seeing | ,,   | had been seeing |

Observe also that when the Present tense is changed into the Past by Rule I., an adjective or adverb expressing nearness is similarly changed into one expressing distance. Thus we change :—

|                      |      |                      |                   |      |                           |
|----------------------|------|----------------------|-------------------|------|---------------------------|
| Now           | into | then          | To-day     | into | that day           |
| This or these | ,,   | that or those | To-morrow  | ,,   | next day           |
| Hither        | ,,   | thither       | Yesterday  | ,,   | the previous day   |
| Here          | ,,   | there         | Last night | ,,   | the previous night |
| Hence         | ,,   | thence        | Ago        | ,,   | before             |
| Thus          | ,,   | so            |                   |      |                           |

1. Direct.—"What is this strange outcry?" said Socrates ; "I sent the women away mainly in order that they might not offend in this way ; for I have heard that a man should die in peace. Be quiet then and have patience."

Indirect.—Socrates inquired of them what that strange outcry was. He reminded them that he had sent the women away mainly in order that they might not offend in that way ; for he had heard that a man should die in peace. He begged them therefore to be quiet and have patience.

2. Direct.—The teacher became angry with the student and said, “Why have you again disturbed the class in this way? I have told you before, that when I am speaking, you should be silent. Leave the room, and do not return again to-day.”

Indirect.—The teacher became angry with the student and inquired of him why he had again disturbed the class in that way. He reminded him that he had told him before that he (the student) should be silent when he (the master) was speaking. He ordered him therefore to leave the room, and forbade him to return again that day.

(1) Convert the following sentences from Direct to Indirect:—

1. We said to him, “The weather is stormy, and the way is long.”
2. He said to us, “The carriage has come, and we shall start soon.”

3. The teacher told us, “The prize will be presented to-morrow.”

4. He said to me, “The rain has been falling since daybreak, and you cannot go.”

5. We said to him, “Your fault will be pardoned, if you confess it.”

6. He said to me, “I am glad to tell you that you are pardoned.”

7. He said, “The man has started, but he has not yet come.”

8. We heard him say, “I will agree to what you propose, if you sign this.”

9. He said to me, “You are mistaken; you will not go to-day.”

10. John said to me, “I shall leave this place, as soon as I can.”

11. John said to me, “You will be tired before you arrive.”

12. John said, “Our friend arrived yesterday, but will go to-day.”

13. My son exclaimed, “Some one has taken the book I was reading.”

14. He made a promise, “I will come, if I can.”

15. He said, “I have been very ill, but am now better.”

16. Pilate replied to the Jews, “What I have written, I have written.”

17. He said to me, “You are guilty, and I am innocent.”

18. They said, “The boy is hiding in the place where we left him.”

19. They said, “The boy will soon be found; and we will bring him.”

20. And Reuben said unto them, “Shed no blood; cast Joseph into this pit that is in the wilderness, but lay no hand upon him.”—Old Testament.

21. And Judah said unto his brethren, “What profit is it, if we slay our brother and conceal his blood? Come, let us sell him to the Ishmaelites, and let not our hand be upon him; for he is our brother and our flesh.”—Old Testament.

22. Joseph said to James, “I can tell you what strikes me as the most useful machine in the world.” James replied, “Can you, Joseph? I should like to hear of it. What is it used for?”

23. "What do you mean?" asked the man; "how can a rope be used for binding flour?" "A rope may be used for anything," replied the man, "when I do not wish to lend it."

24. A rich man once said to his poorer brother, "Why do you not enter the service of the king, so that you may be relieved of the baseness of labour?"

25. Finding no remedy, he said to himself, "It is better to die than to live in such misery as I am compelled to suffer from a master who treats me and always has treated me so unkindly."

26. And they said one to another, "We are verily guilty concerning our brother, in that we saw the distress of his soul, when he besought us, and we would not hear: therefore is this distress come upon us."—Old Testament.

27. The violent man said, "What violence have I done? What anger have I been guilty of?" Then the others laughed and said to him, "Why should we speak? You have given us ocular proof of your violent temper."

28. The robber said to Alexander, "I am thy captive: I must hear what thou art pleased to say, and endure what thou art pleased to inflict. But my soul is unconquered; and if I reply at all to thy reproaches, I will reply to thee like a free man."

29. "You are old, Father William," the young man cried,
 "The locks that are left you are grey;
 You are hale, Father William, a hale old man;
 Now tell me the reason, I pray."

30. "I am sorry indeed," replied the king, "that my vessel is already chosen; and I cannot therefore sail with the son of the man who served my father."—DICKENS.

31. He cried to them in agony, "Row back at any risk! I cannot bear to leave her behind to be drowned."—DICKENS.

32. He made a promise to the king's surgeon, saying:—"Bleed the king to death with this lancet, and I will give you a thousand pieces of gold; and when I ascend the throne, you shall be my chief minister."

(2) Convert the following sentences from Indirect to Direct:—

1. He made them understand that he would soon return.
2. He told them that he had been robbed of the book which he had bought.
3. He said that he was very sorry for the fault he had committed.
4. They all said to him that he deserved to be pardoned.
5. They affirmed that he was the best worker they had seen.
6. He admitted that he had not worked so hard as we had done.
7. He heard them say that he did not deserve the prize.
8. He promised them that he would do it as soon as he could.
9. They said that he deserved their thanks for all he had done.
10. All who heard this said that he was speaking the truth.
11. He said that he had been three years in jail, and yet was innocent.
12. They told him they would never believe what he said.
13. He replied that he would prove what he had said to be true.

14. My brother told me that he had been reading all day.
15. My father told me that I was wrong and would be fined.
16. I replied that if my fault was proved I would pay the fine.
17. I admitted that I had acted foolishly in what I had done.

18. Damon, before his execution, requested but one favour from Dionysius, which was that he might be permitted to visit his wife and children, who were at that time a considerable distance from him, and he promised faithfully to return on the day appointed.

19. This Dionysius refused to grant, unless some person could be found who would consent to suffer death in his stead, if he did not perform his promise and return by the appointed time.

20. In a short speech Pythias told the surrounding multitude that his dear friend, Damon, would soon arrive ; but he hoped not before his own death had saved a life so dear as Damon's was to his family, his friends, and his country.

21. He sent his compliments to Francis, Clavering, and Monson, and charged them to protect Raja Guru Das, who was about to become the head of the Brahmans of Bengal.

22. The governor of the town then called out with a loud voice, and ordered Androcles to explain to them how a savage and hungry lion could thus in a moment have forgotten its innate disposition, and be converted all of a sudden into a harmless animal.

23. Androcles then explained to them that that very lion, which was standing before them, had been his friend and partner in the woods, and had for that reason spared his life, as they now saw.

24. Socrates then suggested to Glaucon that the entire abolition of the guards which he (Glaucon) recommended could not remedy the evils which he desired to remove, and he inquired of Glaucon whether he knew by personal examination that the guards did their work as badly as he imagined.

25. When he reached home, his father asked him where his ship was and what had become of his merchandise. The son in reply told him what had happened,—how he had given up his vessel with its cargo, and had taken in exchange the slaves and set them free, and how he had consented to take this girl back with him and make her his wife.

26. When they asked Thales what thing in the world was more universal than anything else, he replied that Hope was the most universal thing, because Hope remained with those who had nothing else left.

27. When Solon and Periander were sitting together over their cups, Periander, finding that Solon was more silent than usual, asked him whether he was silent for want of words or because he was a fool. Solon told him in reply that no fool could be silent over his cups.

PART II.—COMPOSITION: FORCE AND PROPRIETY OF DICTION.

CHAPTER XIV.

PUNCTUATION, OR THE RIGHT USE OF STOPS.

212. Punctuation divides one sentence or one part of a sentence from another, to help the reader's eye. Much confusion is caused by using wrong stops, or by putting them in wrong places, or by leaving them out where they are wanted. Punctuation is therefore an element in composition.

To take a very simple example, there is a vast difference in meaning between the two following sentences:—

May I be promoted ?
May I be promoted !

And this difference turns, not upon the grammatical construction, nor upon the order of the words, nor (if the sentences are read aloud) upon the modulation of the voice, but solely on the punctuation.

213. The names and forms of the different points, stops, or marks are the following:—

|   |   |
|---|---|
| Comma, indicated by . . . ,                 | Note of exclamation, indicated by . . . ! |
| Semicolon, indicated by . . . ;             | Brackets, indicated by . . . ( ) or [ ]   |
| Colon, indicated by . . . :                 | Dash, indicated by . . . —                |
| Full stop or period, indicated by .         | Hyphen, indicated by . . . -              |
| Note of Interrogation, indicated by . . . ? | Inverted commas, indicated by . . . “ ”   |
| Apostrophe, indicated by . . . ’            |   |

The Comma.

214. The shortest pause in the sense or voice is represented by a comma. Its chief uses in a simple sentence are the following:—

- (a) Between nouns or pronouns in apposition; as—
Alexander, the son of Philip, king of Macedon.

(b) Between two or more words of the same Part of Speech :—

A dull, heavy sound was heard. (Adjectives.)

Greece, Italy, and Spain are peninsulas of Europe. (Nouns.)

We should live soberly, prudently, and industriously. (Adverbs.)

Steam propels, elevates, saws, prints, threshes, etc. (Verbs.)

(c) After the Nominative of address :—

Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears.

(d) Before and after an absolute construction or words interpolated in the middle of a quotation :—

The sun having set, we all went home.

“Leave the room,” said he, “and do not come back.”

(e) When words of the same class or rank go together in pairs, each pair is separated by a comma :—

By night or by day, at home or abroad, asleep or awake, he is a constant source of anxiety to his parents.

(f) After an adverbial phrase at the commencement of a sentence. (Here, however, the use of the comma is optional.)

In fact, his poetry is no better than prose.

(g) Before and after a participial phrase, provided that the participle might be expanded into a sentence, and is not used in a merely qualifying sense :—

Cæsar, having defeated the Gauls, led his army into Britain.

(Here “having defeated” means “after he had defeated.”)

Convinced of the accuracy of his facts, he stuck to his opinion.

(Here “convinced” means “because he was convinced.”)

But when the participle merely qualifies the noun as an adjective would do, no comma need be used :—

A dog lying asleep on a public road is likely to be run over.

A man convinced against his will is of the same opinion still.

(h) Explanatory phrases are separated by commas :—

The field was oblong, 60 yards in length, 40 in breadth.

(i) Before and after Qualifying Infinitives, when these are used in an explanatory or parenthetical sense :—

I am, to tell you the truth, thoroughly sick of work.

To sum up, the man was accused of three offences.

(j) To introduce the words actually or apparently used by a speaker. The sentence so quoted must begin with a capital :—

What I say unto you, I say unto all, Watch.—New Testament.

The question is, What shall we do with it ?

(k) To mark the omission and save the repetition of a verb :—

My regiment is bound for India ; yours, for Gibraltar.

215. (a) In a compound sentence the co-ordinate clauses, when expressed at full length, are separated by a comma :—

His vanity is greater than his ignorance, and what he lacks in knowledge is supplied by impudence.

But when the two sentences are not expressed at full length and have the same Subject, the comma is omitted :—

I made haste and caught him.

I took up a stone and threw it at the mad dog.

(b) If the conjunction is omitted between Co-ordinate clauses, these must be separated (1) by a comma, when they are short ; or (2) by a semicolon, when they are long :—

(1) Steam propels, elevates, lowers, pumps, drains, pulls, etc.

(2) Between fame and true honour there is much difference : the former is a blind applause ; the latter is an internal and more silent homage.

216. In complex sentences the following are the main rules regarding the use of commas :—

(a) A Noun-clause is not separated by a comma from the word to which it stands in grammatical relation :—

It is generally allowed that the art of teaching is difficult.

No one knows when he will come.

His pardon depends upon whether he will confess his fault or not.

But two or more Noun-clauses must be separated by commas, when they stand in the same relation to the same word :—

No one knows when he will come, or whether he will come at all, or whether he is even alive.

Who he was, or why he came, or what he intends to do, will all be found out in time.

(b) An Adjective-clause is not separated from its noun or pronoun, unless it is rather lengthy :—

The man we saw yesterday has come again to-day.

The man, who reflects carefully before acting, is more likely to be successful than one, who thoughtlessly takes a leap in the dark.

(c) An Adverb-clause is separated from the Principal clause :—

He will succeed, because he works hard.

I will gladly do this, if I am allowed.

The comma is never omitted, unless the Adverb-clause is either very short or expressed elliptically :—

He likes you better than me.

Send me word before you start.

Insert commas, where necessary, in the following sentences :—

The triple alliance consists of Germany Austria and Italy. My son so far from being blamed for his conduct was commended and even rewarded. The roof of the house having caught fire the inmates fled and remained outside the house until the fire was put out. Towns villages and hamlets were all alike attacked with the epidemic of cholera. I shall be happy to make the attempt that you speak of if I am permitted. From morning till noon from noon to evening from evening to midnight this same grief never leaves him. Early this morning when we had just left the house we met the man that we had been looking for. He found as I expected he would that the house he had lately purchased was a bad one. What was the cause of so much grief to him was never known to any of us. I hope my friend that you will come and spend at least a week with us. He has now grown so old that he spends most of his time in sleeping taking his food or sitting in an easy-chair. I remain my dear sir yours faithfully William Matthews. I shall not leave home for business unless you set the example. Example as the proverb says is the sincerest form of precept. To tell you the plain truth I should be glad to retire from business altogether considering that I am now past sixty years of age and have a son to succeed me. The boatman shouted to a man on shore throw out the rope. A snake sleeping in the grass will bite if any one treads upon it. The prisoner having been convicted of the crime of which he was accused must make up his mind to suffer the penalty. The building is a noble structure of red brick and comprises a reading-room a library a room for writing letters and a room for refreshments. It is quite true that this fine building was erected by private subscriptions. In fact of all that was subscribed L. gave the largest amount in cash but M. was not less liberal because he gave the land on which the building was erected. A dog barking at nothing is a nuisance.

The Semicolon.

217. A Semicolon indicates a longer pause than what is indicated by a comma. Its chief uses are as follows:—

(a) To separate longer Co-ordinate clauses see (§ 215, b). A longer pause gives greater emphasis to each clause in the series, as it gives the mind more time to dwell on each of them separately:—

Honesty of purpose in worldly affairs has many advantages over deceit. It is a safer way of dealing with men; it is an easier mode of despatching business; it inspires men with greater confidence; it acquires more and more confidence in itself, while deceit becomes more and more diffident.

(b) To divide clauses, which are connected by some Alternative or Illative conjunction. (Here a greater pause is required, because the mind requires a little more time to perceive the alternative or the inference):—

I met him as he was leaving his house; otherwise I should not have known where he lived.
I refused to do what he asked me to do; for I was convinced that he had been misinformed of the facts.

The Colon.

218. Colon : The main uses of the colon are the following :—

(a) To introduce an additional remark in explanation or in confirmation of a previous one :—

Strive above all things, in whatever station of life you may be, to preserve health : there is no happiness in life without it.

(b) To introduce a quotation : usually followed by a dash :—

Then Peter stood forth and said :—“Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons,” etc.

(c) To introduce or to sum up a series of Co-ordinate clauses. Here, too, the colon is followed by a dash :—

You must now hear what I have to say about the uses of iron :—we sleep on iron ; we travel on iron ; we float on iron ; we plough the fields with iron ; we shoot with iron ; we chop down trees with iron :—in fact, there is scarcely anything that we can do without the help of this wonderful metal.

(d) To introduce an enumeration of particulars :—

Send me the following articles :—a pen, a brush, a pencil, a portfolio, and some fine-pointed nibs.

Insert commas, colons, or semicolons, where necessary, in the following sentences :—

1. According to an old belief if a sick man sneezes it is a sure sign of recovery but when a man is going on a journey or about to commence some business should any one about him sneeze the sneeze indicates that the object in which he is interested will not be accomplished.

2. In Rome the army was the nation no citizen could take office unless he had served in ten campaigns.

3. The drill was unremitting at all times so long as a man continued to be a soldier when the troops were in winter quarters sheds were erected in which the soldiers fenced with swords buttoned at the points or hurled javelins also buttoned at the points at one another.

4. The Carthaginian army was composed entirely of mercenary troops Africa Spain and Gaul were their recruiting grounds and these countries were an inexhaustible treasury of warriors as long as the money lasted which the recruits received as pay.

5. While I was still wondering at my sudden deliverance a man came suddenly forward and said my good sir there is nothing to be surprised at I was sent here to find you and rescue you from these robbers well I have succeeded in finding you and so I have accomplished what I was sent for as you now see.

6. Whenever you hesitate about beginning to do something which must be done eventually remember the maxim a thing begun is half done.

The Full Stop or Period.

219. The Full Stop or Period indicates the close of a complete sentence. The sentence following must invariably be commenced with a capital letter. (See Note at close of Chapter.)

The full stop is also used after abbreviations; as, A.D. (for Anno Domini); B.L. (for Bachelor of Law); Bart. (for Baronet); the Hon. (for the Honourable).

But if the last letter is given, the stop is sometimes not used; as, Dr Jones, Mr Clark, Mrs Jones, Messrs Scott and Sons.

Inverted Commas.

220. Inverted Commas are used for indicating the beginning and end of a quotation, or of the actual words used by a speaker:—

The councillors stood up, and with one voice exclaimed:—"Death before dishonour."

"Wine is a mocker," said the wise king.

To introduce a quotation within a quotation, a single comma is used at either end:—

"What did they say to you?" inquired the man.

"They gave me," he answered, "strict orders, 'That gate is not to be opened under any circumstances whatever.'"

Note of exclamation.

221. A Note of Exclamation is used after words or sentences which express emotion:—

How are the mighty fallen in the midst of the battle! I am distressed for thee, my brother Jonathan!

"Land ahead!" shouted the delighted crew.

The Apostrophe.

222. The Apostrophe (') is inserted to show that some letter or letters have been omitted:—

The Hon'ble (for Honourable); e'en (for even); 'tis (for it is); ta'en (for taken); don't (for do not); shan't (for shall not); won't (for will not); tho' (for though); an ox's head (for oxes head); and all other instances of the Possessive case.

Note of Interrogation.

223. A Note of Interrogation is used after sentences which ask questions. The sentence following must be commenced with a capital:—

Where was he born? When did he die?

Insert the proper stops and capitals, where necessary, in the following sentences:—

Whats the matter Thomas ist that old pain of yours again no its not that at all said he but something a good deal better would you believe it my poor old uncle is dead and he has left me five thousand pounds that was very good of him she replied but its come too late why he inquired because she answered you are now old and broken in health what a pity it is that he did not die twenty years ago or give you the money while he was still alive.

Dashes.

224. The Dash has five main uses :—

(a) To mark a break or abrupt turn in a sentence :—

Here lies the great—false marble where ?
Nothing but sordid dust lies here.

(b) To mark words in apposition or in explanation :—

They plucked the seated hills with all their loads—
Rocks, waters, woods—and by the shaggy tops
Uplifting bore them in their hands.—Paradise Lost.

(c) To insert a parenthesis. Here two dashes are required.
At the age of ten—such is the power of genius—he could read Greek with facility.

(d) To resume a scattered subject :—

Health, friends, position,—all are gone.

(e) To indicate a hesitating or faltering speech :—

I—er—I—that is,—I don't care.

Brackets.

225. Brackets are used like a couple of dashes in (c), as just explained, for inserting a parenthesis.

At the age of ten (such is the power of genius) he could read Greek.

Brackets are also used for introducing humorous or ironical side-speeches :—

I gave all I had (twopence) to that noble cause.

The Hyphen.

226. A Hyphen is used for joining the parts of a compound word ; as “bathing-place.” It is a shorter line than the Dash.

A hyphen is also used to indicate syllabic division (see note at close of this chapter) ; as “for-mer-ly.”

Insert a dash, hyphen, or brackets, wherever necessary, in the following sentences, and add any other appropriate stops :—

England and Russia the two greatest empires on the face of the earth have no real cause of enmity. I could tell you all about my but perhaps you have heard enough by this time. My dog such is the power of jealousy attacked its rival whenever they met. This is very uphill work. If you read without spectacles and I believe you can be so good as to read out the contents of this letter. When I took my degree and this was twelve years ago I had good prospects before me. I will never but I need not finish my sentence for you know already what I was going to say.

Diæresis.

227. Diæresis (separation) consists of two dots placed over the second of two vowels, to show that the two vowels are to be sounded separately :—

Coöperation = co-operation.

Asterisks.

228. Asterisks denote that some words or clauses have been omitted :—

The Jews * * * * had to pay heavy taxes to the Norman kings.

Note on Syllabic Division.

Syllabic division, to which allusion is made in § 226, assists pronunciation. It is therefore ruled by accentuation, and not, as has been sometimes maintained, by etymology. "Word-division has nothing to do with etymology. From a practical point of view im'-pu-dence is right, being based on true phonetic principles, i.e. on the spoken language. It is only when we take the word to pieces that we discover that it is formed from im- (for in), the base pu-, and the suffix -ence. The spoken language has pe-ruse' at one moment, and pe-ru'-sal at another. It rightly regards ease of utterance, and nothing else" (Skeat).

It may be added that syllabic division by etymology is impracticable for two reasons: (1) the component parts of a word are sometimes so mixed together as to be indistinguishable; cf. monkey (2 syll.), from Old Ital. moniccio (4 syll.); (2) the etymologies of words can be known only to those few persons who have studied the subject, whereas all men should know how a word ought to be sounded; cf. banqu-et (lit. little bench), which is divided phonetically as ban'-quet.

La-ment', lam'-en-ta'-ble. At'-om, a-tom'-ic. At'-tri-bute (noun), at-trib'-ute (verb). Or'-tho-dox, or-thog'-ra-phy. Pro-vide', prov'-i-dence. Tel'-e-gram, te-leg'-ra-phy. Ex-pect', ex'-pec-ta'-tion. Me-chan'-ic, mech'-a-nism. Do-min'-ion, dom'-i-nant. Fi'-nite, fin'-ish. Ta'-ble, tab'-let. Nu'-me-ral, nu-mer'-i-cal. O'-cean, o'-ce-an'-ic.

The terminations -cial, -cious, -cean, -sion, -gion, -tion, -trial, -tious, since they are sounded as one syllable, should not be divided into two :—

So'-cial, o'-cean, le'-sion, le'-gion, con'-scious, mo'-tion, par'-tial, cap'-tious, fi-nan'-cial.

But in such words as the following the termination -ion or -ious has to be detached from the preceding consonant, in order to throw the accent on the consonant:—

Re-lig'-ion, con-trit'-ion, prec'-ious, con-dit'-ion, o-pin'-ion, on'-ion, ver-mil'-ion, de-cis'-ion.

Note on the Use of Capitals.

Capitals are used for the first letter of a sentence following a full stop (§ 219); for the first letter of a sentence following a note of interrogation (§ 223); for the first letter of proper names; for the first letter of the names of days and months; for the first letter of the name of the Deity; for the pronoun "I"; for the first letter of every line of poetry; for the first letters of titles of honour or office; for the first letter of a quoted speech or sentence (see § 214 (j) and § 220); for the interjection "O" or "Oh."

In a technical treatise, such as one on Architecture, Photography, Grammar, etc., when a technical term is first introduced and defined, it is usual to print the first letter of every such term in a Capital. As the work proceeds, the use of the Capital may be continued or not at the option of the writer.

CHAPTER XV.—THE NORMAL ORDER OF WORDS.

229. The Rule of Proximity.—The cardinal rule regarding the order of words or phrases is this:—things which are to be thought of together must be mentioned together. This has been called the "Rule of Proximity."<sup>1</sup>

In a language like ours which has lost nearly all its inflexions, we usually have nothing but the position of a word to show with what other word or words its sense is to be connected. Observe the faulty order in the following:—

A piano is for sale by a lady about to cross the Channel in an oak case with carved legs.

He blew out his brains after bidding his wife good-bye with a gun. Erected to the memory of John Phillips accidentally shot as a mark of affection by his brother.

The University of London Commissioners.—Daily Telegraph, 6th August 1898. (Say, The London University Commissioners.)

The above is a reproduction of the magnificent picture by the celebrated French artist Benjamin Constant, representing the interior of a carpet bazaar in Tangiers, now in the possession of Messrs. Treloar and Sons, Ludgate Hill.—Black and White, 6th August 1898, p. 191.

---

<sup>1</sup> Bain's Composition and Rhetoric, p. 1.

In an inflected language, like Latin for example, the order of words is of less importance, because the sense is shown by the endings. The following words cannot have more than one meaning. The inflexions leave no choice.

Brutus et Cassius Cæsarem interfecerunt.

The same five words, when translated into English without reference to their Latin inflexions, will give six different senses :—(1) "Brutus slew Cassius and Cæsar," (2) "Cæsar slew Brutus and Cassius," (3) "Cassius slew Cæsar and Brutus," (4) "Brutus and Cassius slew Cæsar," (5) "Cæsar and Brutus slew Cassius," (6) "Cæsar and Cassius slew Brutus."

All that we have to say in this chapter about "the normal order of words" in English consists of the various applications of the Rule of Proximity.

Nouns.

230. Nouns must be placed as near as possible to the nouns or pronouns with which they are connected in sense :—

- (1) The death is announced of Dr. Scott, the joint-author with Dr. Liddell of the well-known Greek dictionary.

The only good point in the order of these words is that "joint-author" is placed close to "Dr. Scott," with which it is in apposition. This does not, however, redeem the sentence from clumsiness; for the noun "Scott" ought not to be separated from the noun "death," nor the noun "dictionary" from the noun "author." The sentence might be rewritten thus :—

We regret to announce the death of Dr. Scott, who with Dr. Liddell was the joint-author of the well-known Greek dictionary.

- (2) As the leading and consistent champion of the oppressed, I trust you will permit me in your columns to advocate the cause of humanity towards helpless animals.—To the Editor of the "Daily Telegraph," 6th Jan. 1898.

This sentence can be put right by changing "I trust you will" to "you will, I trust." As it stands, the noun "champion" is wrongly placed in apposition with the pronoun "I."

Adjectives and Participles.

231. Attributive use.—When an adjective is used attributively (§ 58), it should as a rule be placed before the noun that it is intended to qualify :—

A just man. Bright prospects. This rose. Other roses.

There is a vast difference between an "English village" and "village English"; and it is the qualifying or adjectival word standing first that decides the meaning. In such examples as the following, however, the position of the adjective is exceptional:—

(a) If the adjective is enlarged by some qualifying phrase, it must be placed after its noun, to avoid a breach of the "rule of proximity":—

A matter too urgent to be put off any longer.

We could not separate matter from urgent by saying:—

A too urgent to be put off any longer matter.

(b) If several adjectives qualify a single noun, it often sounds better to place them after the noun than before it:—

God is the maker of all things visible and invisible, animate and inanimate.

(c) There are certain stock phrases, in which it has become idiomatic (chiefly through the influence of French) to place the adjective after its noun:—

The body politic. Malice prepensc. Heir apparent. Lords Temporal and Spiritual. Notary public. Knight errant. Governor General. Bishop elect. The sum total. Point blank (the white or blank spot in the centre of a target). Letters patent. Price current. Lord paramount. Durance vile. Court martial, etc.

Note.—The adjective alone, as "he alone," is always placed after the noun or pronoun that it qualifies.

232. Predicative use.—When an adjective is used predicatively (§ 58), it is placed after its noun:—

All men are mortal. He lay dead on the ground. He became very rich. He was left rich by his father. (Subjective Complement, § 95.)

My father left me poor, but well educated. The judge declared him guilty. (Objective Complement, § 95.)

The difference in meaning between the two following sentences hinges on the position of the word "public":—

He made public confessions. (Attrib. use.)

He made his confessions public. (Predic. use.)

233. Sometimes an adjective (§ 209, 3) is used instead of an adverb to qualify the predicate-verb of the sentence. In this case it must be placed as near as possible after the verb that it qualifies, as in example (a) given below:—

(a) I can do it alone.

(b) I alone can do it.

Observe that the sense of each sentence depends entirely on the position of the adjective "alone."

(c) He bought the material cheap.

(d) He bought cheap material.

In (c) "cheap" must be parsed as an adjective qualifying the noun "material"; but in point of meaning it qualifies the verb "bought" and signifies "at a low price." The first sentence means that he bought good material at less than the market-price; the second, that he bought inferior material at the market-price.

Adverbs.

234. If the word to be qualified is an Adjective, or an Adverb, or a Preposition, or a Conjunction, the qualifying Adverb is placed immediately before it :—

Adjective.—We are half pleased and half sorry.

Adverb.—He stood far apart from me.

Preposition.—He arrived long before the time.

Conjunction.—This is precisely how it happened.

Note.—But "enough" is placed after the adjective that it qualifies, because it is followed by a phrase :—

Your pay is good enough for your work.

235. If the Verb to be qualified is Intransitive, the Adverb, unless it is one of Time, is placed immediately after it :—

He always laughed heartily at a good joke.

He never spoke boastfully about his own merits.

He often wept bitterly on passing that tomb.

He sometimes slept soundly in my house.

He seldom slept well in any house but his own.

236. If the Verb to be qualified is Transitive, the qualifying Adverb must not be allowed to separate the verb and its object.

The Adverb must therefore be placed either before the Verb or (which is rather more common) after the Object.

He bore his losses cheerfully.

He briefly explained his meaning.

But if the Object is qualified by a clause, or consists of a good many words, the adverb may come between the verb and its object :—

He rewarded liberally all those who had served him well.

But this is scarcely so idiomatic as, "He liberally rewarded," etc.

237. An Adverb is often placed between the Auxiliary verb and the Principal verb (whether Transitive or Intransitive) :—

The wind has suddenly risen. I have quite understood you.

The Negative adverb "not" is always placed between the Auxiliary verb and the Principal verb :—

We have not seen him since Monday last.

238. An Adverb is placed first in a sentence—(a) when it qualifies the whole sentence, (b) when it is emphatic.

Rewrite the following pairs of sentences, so as to show how the sense depends on the position of the Adverb:—

{ Happily he did not die. } At length he wrote to her.
 { He did not die happily. } He wrote to her at length.

239. Divided Infinitives.—An adverb should not be placed between the “to” and the Infinitive. The custom is springing up, but it is not sanctioned by the usage of any good writers:—

I feel it my duty to plainly inform you, etc.
 I feel it my duty to inform you plainly, etc.

240. Only.—This adverb must be placed immediately before the word that it is intended to qualify:—

(a) Only he promised to read the first chapter of that book.

Here “only” is an Adjective, and not an Adverb; and it qualifies the pronoun “he.” He alone would be more suitable than only he.

He alone, and no one else, promised to read the first chapter, etc.

(b) He only promised to read the first chapter of that book.

Here “only” is an Adverb qualifying the verb “promised”; and the meaning is that he merely or only promised, but did not perform the promise.

(c) He promised only to read the first chapter of that book.

That is, he did not promise to study, analyse, or remember, but only to read. Here “only” is an Adverb qualifying the verb “read.”

(d) He promised to read only the first chapter of that book.

That is, he promised to read nothing more than the first chapter. Here “only” is an Adverb qualifying the adjective “the first.”

(e) He promised to read the first chapter of that book only (or, only of that book).

That is, he promised to read the first chapter of no other book but that. Here “only” is an Adverb qualifying the phrase “of that book.”

Note.—At the beginning of a sentence, only can have the force of but:—

Go wherever you like; only do not stop here.

Subject and Object.

241. The Subject usually precedes its verb; but the following exceptions should be noted:—

(a) When the verb is Intransitive, and is preceded by the introductory adverb “there”; see § 153 (2).

On the whole there is nothing to prove his guilt.

(b) When the verb is used for asking a question:—

At what hour in the morning does he get up?

(c) When the verb is in the Imperative mood :—

Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature.

(d) To express a wish or a condition :—

|                  |   |   |
|------------------|---|---|
| Wish      | { | Long live the king .                         |
|                  |   | May he never again come inside this house.   |
| Condition | { | Should he meet me, he would know me at once. |
|                  |   | Had he met me, he would have known me.       |

242. If the Object to a verb is expressed by a Conjunctive pronoun, or is qualified by an Interrogative, it is placed before the verb instead of after it :—

The house that we occupy suits us well. (Conjunctive.)

What kind of book do you like best? (Interrogative.)

243. If the Object is qualified by an Adjective-clause, it may be separated from its verb by an adverbial phrase :—

The captain took with a thankful heart the good things which the firm provided.

Nobler and loftier emotions lit up with a generous enthusiasm the hearts of men who had heavy sacrifices still to make.

If the italicised phrases were placed at the end of the sentence, the sense would be either obscured or radically altered.

Pronoun and Antecedent.

244. A Conjunctive pronoun or Conjunctive adverb must always be placed as close as possible to its antecedent :—

(1) I have read Plato's writings, who succeeded Socrates.

Here it would have been better to say "the writings of Plato, who succeeded," etc.

(2) It is the system, not the individual, which I condemn.

The clause which I condemn should be written after system.

(3) I now come to one of the objections to free trade, which has never yet been answered.

The sentence can be rewritten thus, "Among the objections to free trade, I now come to one which has never yet been answered."

245. Demonstrative and Conjunctive pronouns should not, as a rule, be mentioned until the Antecedent has been mentioned.

Avoid such an order of words as the following :—

Before we pay them, let us see what work the men have done.

The proper arrangement would be :—

Before we pay the men, let us see what work they have done.

Preposition and Object.

246. In prose (not always in poetry) the preposition is placed immediately before its Object. But the following exceptions occur in prose also :—

(a) When the Object is "whom," "which," or "what," the preposition may be placed last in the sentence and its Object first:—

That is the man whom we were looking for. (Conjunctive.)

Which of these chairs did you sit on? (Interrogative.)

(b) When the Object is the Conjunctive pronoun "that," the preposition must be put last:—

This is the man that we were looking for.

Prepositions.

247. A Preposition must be placed immediately after the word with which it is intended to be construed:—

Books authorised by teachers as fit for use.

Books authorised as fit for use by teachers.

The meaning of each sentence turns entirely upon the position of the phrase by teachers.

Correlative Conjunctions.

248. When Conjunctions are used correlatively, that is, in pairs, each member of the pair must invariably be connected with words of the same part of speech or of the same function.

(1) Not . . . but:—

A wise physician endeavours not to cure diseases, but to prevent them. (Infinitive mood.)

Objections were raised not to his having spent the money, but to his having done so without leave. (Preposition.)

(2) Not only . . . but also or but:—

All his work was done not only with zeal, but also with judgment. (Preposition.)

He was not only sad, but disgusted. (Adjective and Participle.)

This not only amused, but enlightened them. (Verb.)

(3) Not more . . . than:—

I am not more amused, than surprised. (Participle.)

(4) Both . . . and:—

He is thoroughly tired out both in mind and in body. (Preposition.)

(5) Either . . . or, neither . . . nor:—

They have worked either stupidly or lazily. (Adverb.)

This wall was built either crookedly or of bad material. (Adverb and Adverb-phrase.)

Neither James nor I saw it. (Noun and Pronoun.)

Exercise.

Rewrite or rearrange the following sentences in such a way as to remove any impropriety that may exist in the order of the words:—

1. The chair cost ten shillings on which he sat.
2. He shot the mad dog after driving it out of the house with a gun.
3. A gang of robbers entered the house at night armed from head to foot.
4. He is an undoubted man of honesty, and yet persons accused him of cheating who ought to have known him better.
5. This tablet was erected to the memory of a faithful dog that was accidentally shot as a mark of respect.
6. He left the house where he had slept next morning mounted on a horse.
7. He repeated these lines after he had read them only once with perfect accuracy.
8. The judge saw more clearly that the man was innocent than the jury did.
9. The girl was conveyed from the house where she had just been married in a carriage and pair.
10. They found the house on the top of a hill where they wished to spend the night.
11. It is believed that they are most desirous of keeping up this practice who profit most by it.
12. There was a small house on the side of the mountain, out of which came a black slave.
13. The magistrate passed too severe a sentence, being young and inexperienced.
14. English is not only difficult to read, but also to speak.
15.       Such were the Centaurs of Ixion's race,
          Who a bright cloud for Juno did embrace.
16. The general ordered indignantly the deserters to be shot.
17. I only like a pear when it is ripe.
18. He wisely did this because he was ordered, not because he liked it.
19. Northern India is bounded by the Himalaya mountains, with at their base a very thick jungle.
20. The natives of the other islands only knew how to divide time by the sun and moon, whereas these had acquired some knowledge of the stars.
21. They are as ready, nay more ready, to apply these things to their right uses than we are.
22. I soon arrived at the mansion of my friend, guarded by a huge mastiff that flew at me.
23. He cannot be said to have died prematurely whose work was finished, nor does he deserve to be lamented who died so full of honours.—SOUTHEY.
24. Sir Morton Peto spoke of the notion that the national debt might be repudiated with absolute contempt.
25. An unquestioned man of genius.
26. I am neither an ascetic in theory or practice.
27. Her success is neither the result of system nor strategy.
28. I never remember to have felt an event more deeply than Horner's death.
29. His last journey was to Cannes, whence he was never destined to return.

30. No one has been able to deny that there is a connection between virtue and vice on the one hand and happiness and misery on the other.—Saturday Review, 2nd Sept. 1865.

31. All goes on well at Winchester, the attention and attendance gradually deepening and increasing.

32. Since several thoughts may be natural which are low and grovelling, an epic poet should not only avoid such sentiments as are unnatural or affected, but also such as are mean and vulgar.—Spec-tator, No. 279.

33. This shipping is to a great extent now the product of German yards, which have developed rapidly to suit the requirements every day increasing of local shipbuilding.—Daily Tel., 27th Jan. 1898.

34. There are not meanwhile critics wanting here who assign this victory as regards moral and political supremacy in China to Russia.—Berlin Telegram, Daily Tel., 5th Feb. 1898.

35. The sitting closed definitely at five o'clock without the matter which had brought so many together having been practically entered upon.—Daily Tel., 8th Feb. 1898.

36. The death occurred last week in Madrid of Mr. W. Macpherson, formerly British Vice-Consul at Seville.—Times Weekly, 11th Feb. 1898.

37. The captain took the good things which the gods provided with thankful good-humour.

38. His daily custom is to tell anecdotes which amuse or excite the company after dinner.

39. Othello seizing a bolster, full of rage and jealousy, smothers Desdemona.

40. Some paintings by lady artists, well worthy of inspection, will be exhibited to-morrow.

41. The daughter of a civil officer retired from India, brought up in England, seeks employment.

42. Lost, a walking-stick belonging to a gentleman, with a curiously shaped head.

43. Here the train made a halt to take in water, which lasted only for a few minutes.

44. He wept in passing that tomb often.

45. Do you take the medicine that I send you regularly?

46. In all scientific books it is necessary to clearly define the technical terms employed.

47. I never remember to have spent a more agreeable visit.

48. Zedekiah was sent captive to Babylon, from which he was never destined to return.

49. His body was found floating lifeless on the water at a short distance from where the boat was upset by a fisherman.

50. No one is entitled to form or express an opinion on the relations between Nelson and Lady Hamilton, or on the parentage of Horatia, who has not carefully studied the letters to be found in this invaluable collection.—Times Weekly, 4th March 1898.

51. It will be a war on sea, instead of land, largely, and we do not know much about sea warfare of late years.—Quoted in Daily Tel., 15th April 1898.

52. Right from the birth of a Spanish monarch he is subject to an etiquette the most pronounced.—Cassell's Family Magazine, Jan. 1897, p. 149.

53. For this person to accuse us of want of knowledge can only create amusement in the minds of those who have studied the views and know the facts as I have and do.—Middlesex County Times, 30th April 1898.

54. We may well ask what is the use of it, if parallel action in shipbuilding is not accompanied by energetic action in diplomacy?—Homeward Mail, 25th July 1898.

55. With regard to the Ottoman bank, the government, in case of its leaving Cyprus, would undertake some measures to replace it.—Report of Mr. Chamberlain's Speech, 9th August 1898.

CHAPTER XVI.—INVERSION OF THE NORMAL ORDER : EMPHASIS.

249. Inversion of Normal Order.—In the last chapter we showed what is the normal order of words in a sentence. We have now to show how emphasis may be given to a word by placing it out of the normal order. A word so placed excites surprise, and thereby attracts more attention. But no inversion must be made, if it obscures the meaning or offends the ear.

(1) The Object placed before its verb instead of after it :—

Direct object :—

Silver and gold have I none ; but such as I have give I unto thee : in the name of Jesus of Nazareth, arise and walk.—Acts iii. 6.

If heaven I cannot summon to my prayer,

Hell will I move, and try mine interest there.

DRYDEN'S Virgil.

The sorrow for the dead is the only sorrow from which we refuse to be divorced. Every other wound we seek to heal, every other affliction to forget ; but this wound we consider it a duty to keep open, this affliction we cherish and brood over in solitude.
—WASHINGTON IRVING.

Indirect object :—

They held their peace, and glorified God, saying, Then to the Gentiles also hath God granted repentance unto life.—Acts xi. 18.

(2) The Complement placed before its verb instead of after it :—

On Linden, when the sun was low,
All bloodless lay the untrodden snow,
And dark as winter was the flow
Of Iser rolling rapidly.—CAMPBELL.

Great is Diana of the Ephesians.—Acts xix. 28.

Immense is the attention that the government in France is devoting to the Zola trial.—Daily Tel., 16th Feb. 1898.

Fallen, fallen is Babylon, the great city.<sup>1</sup>—Rev. xviii. 2.

(3) Adverb or Adverbial phrase placed first :—

Not at once was language adequate to receive or take up into itself the ideas that were asking for expression.—JOWETT.

On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets.—Matt. xxii. 40.

In thy presence is fulness of joy ; at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore.—Psalms xvi. 11.

(4) The Verb placed first (rare except in poetry) :—

Every man has left behind him influences for good or evil that will never exhaust themselves. It may be his fireside, it may be a kingdom ; it may be a village or a great nation ; but act he does, ceaselessly and for ever.—CUMMING.

Flashed all their sabres bare,

Flashed as they turned in air.—TENNYSON.

(5) Adverb with verb placed first :—

Thus came into prominence what are called sacred and profane knowledge : thus came into the presence of each other two opposing parties, one relying on reason, the other on revelation.—DRAPER.

Then burst his mighty heart.—SHAKESPEARE.

Up goes my grave Impudence to the maid.—Tatler.

(6) Adjective or Adjectival phrase placed after its noun :—

I appeal from Philip drunk to Philip sober.

Alfred the Great. Pliny the Elder. Pliny the Younger.

I will talk of things heavenly or things earthly ; things moral or things evangelical ; things sacred or things profane ; things past or things to come ; things foreign or things at home ; things essential or things circumstantial ; provided that all be done to our profit.—BUNYAN.

I love thee, Cassio,

But nevermore be officer of mine.—SHAKESPEARE.

250. Emphatic Positions.—The middle of a sentence is less emphatic than the beginning, and the beginning in most cases is less emphatic than the end.

<sup>1</sup> This is the rendering given in the Revised Translation, 1885. In the translation of 1611 the wording is far less pointed.

Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city.

Compare what Horace puts into the mouth of Hannibal :—

Occidit, occidit,

Spes omnis et fortuna nostri

Nominis, Asdrubale interempto.—Ode iv. 4, 70.

“ Fallen, fallen are all our hopes and our fortune ; for Hasdrubal is slain.”

(a) The beginning.—If we take a word out of its normal order in order to place it first, the emphasis that it acquires arises partly from the surprise excited by its unusual position, and partly from the prominence that naturally belongs to the initial word. This has been exemplified already in § 249.

The subject of a sentence is usually placed first, because that is its normal order. In this position it possesses a certain degree of prominence, because it names the person or thing about which the assertion is made.

Romulus, according to the ancient legend, founded Rome.

If that degree of prominence, however, happens not to be sufficient, additional emphasis can be given to the subject "Romulus" by placing it last :—

Rome, according to the ancient legend, was founded by Romulus.
The founder of Rome, according to the ancient legend, was Romulus.

(b) The end.—The end of a sentence is more emphatic than the beginning, because one's mind is held in suspense till we know the closing circumstance, and our interest is aroused to know what that circumstance is. This is called the PRINCIPLE OF SUSPENSE.

(1) Add to your faith virtue ; and to virtue knowledge ; and to knowledge temperance ; and to temperance patience ; and to patience godliness ; and to godliness brotherly kindness ; and to brotherly kindness charity.—2 Peter i. 5-7.

(2) Knowing that you are very inquisitive after everything that is curious in nature, I will wait on you in the dusk of the evening with my show upon my back.—Spectator, No. 271.

Here the emphatic phrases, the first of which shows the time of coming, and the second the purpose of coming, are rightly placed last.

Corollary.—If we do not wish a word to be emphatic, we must avoid placing it in an emphatic position.

That all members of the same household should live together in peace is necessary.

He, deserted by his friends and pursued by his enemies, fled from the country.

The undue emphasis given in one sentence to the word "necessary," and in the other to "he" can be avoided by altering their positions :—

It is necessary that all members of the same household should live together in peace.

Deserted by his friends, and pursued by his enemies, he fled from the country.

251. Correlative Conjunctions and Phrases.—Conjunctions and phrases which go in pairs add to the energy of a sentence, because the first one keeps the mind in suspense (§ 250, b) till the second one has been mentioned :—

|                   |  |                                   |
|-------------------|--|-----------------------------------|
| Either—or         | Partly—partly                            | On the one hand—on the other hand |
| Neither—nor       | In the first place—with second place | Though—yet                        |
| Not only—but also | On this side—on that side                | As—so                             |
| Both—and          | Here—there                               | Indeed—but                        |
| If—then           | Not—but                                  |                                   |

(1) The use of language is to conceal the thoughts.

To emphasise conceal, we could say :—“The use of language is not to express, but to conceal the thoughts.”

(2) I regard the prospects of peace with confidence.

To emphasise confidence we could say :—“I regard the prospects of peace not only with hope, but with confidence.”

(3) He is both a fool and a knave.

To emphasise fool we should say :—“He is not only a knave, but also a fool”; or, “He is a fool as well as a knave.” To emphasise knave, we should say :—“He is not only a fool, but also a knave”; or “He is a knave as well as a fool.”

252. Emphasis by Repetition.—Emphasis is sometimes added to a word by repeating it, or by adding some other word almost synonymous. Repetition, when it adds force, is “not like a bird flapping its wings uselessly in the air, but like a blacksmith repeating his blows on an anvil” (Nichol).

If I were an American, as I am an Englishman, I never would lay down my arms, never—never—never.—BURKE.

Christ being raised from the dead dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over him.—New Test.

Our language abounds in phrases, in which words of the same or almost the same meaning go in pairs.

They were driven out bag and baggage. He works only by fits and starts. His progress is by leaps and bounds. He was fair and square in all his dealings. Words full of fire and fury. He is a stickler for forms and ceremonies. He is free and easy in his manners. His presence is gall and wormwood to me. Where are my goods and chattels? He took to it heart and soul. He is very high and mighty. Turned out of house and home. To all intents and purposes. Eager for the loaves and fishes of office. He would not yield one  jot or tittle. His will is null and void. Over head and ears in debt. The pains and penalties of the law. He arrived safe and sound. All stuff and nonsense. Time and tide wait for no man. If you do this, well and good. This is my will and pleasure. He worked with might and main. Drenched through and through. First and foremost be truthful.

253. "It is," "it was."—These introductory phrases are much used for giving prominence to the word that the writer wishes to emphasise (see § 75, c).

(1) Romulus, according to the ancient legend, founded Rome.

If "Romulus" is not sufficiently emphatic as it stands, we could say:—"It was Romulus who, according to the ancient legend, founded Rome."

(2) Cicero admired Pompey.

These words stand in their normal order, and one is not more emphatic than the other. Each in turn might be emphasised as follows:—"It was Cicero who admired Pompey;" "It was admiration, not blame, that Cicero expressed for Pompey;" "It was Pompey whom Cicero admired."

254. Conjunctions and Prepositions repeated.—If we wish to give equal emphasis to each word in a series of particulars, we can do so by repeating the conjunctions or prepositions before each of them instead of mentioning it once only before the first or last.

Now, brethren, if I come unto you speaking with tongues, what shall I profit you, except I shall speak to you either by revelation, or by knowledge, or by prophesying, or by doctrine?—1 Cor. xiv. 6.

The latter part of this sentence would sound very feeble in comparison if it stood thus:—"Except I shall speak to you by revelation, knowledge, prophesying, or doctrine."

255. Recapitulation of Clauses.—A series of subjects or clauses can be recapitulated by the use of pronouns like "these" or "such"; and this adds to the energy of the sentence.

Intellect, imagination, power of expression, humour, taste, truth to life, and truth to human nature,—these are not the qualities which to-day make a writer popular."—Fort. Rev., Feb. 1898, p. 280.

The storm had passed, the sun was shining on the green leaves of the trees; the stream was dancing around the rocks; the birds hopped about him as they chirped with their cheerful notes;—such were the pleasant scenes and sounds that welcomed the wanderer back to his home.

256. Antithesis.—Antithesis means "setting one word against another," like balancing opposite things against each other in a pair of scales. The balance of form and sound not only pleases the ear, but is an aid to memory, as we may gather from its frequent use in proverbs, and in the best-remembered sayings of great authors:—"It never rains, but it pours;" "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush;" "Evil communications corrupt good manners;" "The Sabbath was made for man, not man for the Sabbath."

God, who at sundry times and in divers manners, spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds.—Hebrews i. 1, 2.

The antithesis of this finely balanced sentence is marred in the Revised Version of 1885, where it is made to run as follows:—

God, having of old time spoken unto the fathers in the prophets by divers portions and in divers manners, hath at the end of these days spoken unto us in his Son, whom he appointed heir of all things, through whom also he made the worlds.

Exercises.

I. Rearrange, or if necessary supplement or rewrite, the following sentences so as to throw the emphasis on certain words as directed:—

1. I am not sure he said that. (Emphasise (1) sure, (2) he, (3) said, (4) that, (5) I.)

2. They brought home her dead warrior. (Emphasise home.)

3. No man hath greater love than this. (Emphasise greater love.)

4. Consummate men of business are almost as rare as great poets, and perhaps rarer than veritable saints and martyrs.—HELPS. (Emphasise rare and rarer.)

5. The battle of Hastings was fought in 1066. (Emphasise (1) the battle of Hastings, (2) in 1066.)

6. A greater mistake was never made. (Emphasise never.)

7. Thou didst not anoint mine head with oil.—New Testament. (Emphasise mine head with oil.)

8. The wind blows keen, and the night is coming on. (Emphasise keen.)

9. If I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how shall ye believe if I tell you of heavenly things. (Emphasise earthly and heavenly.)

10. When all were seated, a noise was suddenly heard outside. (Emphasise suddenly.)

11. Moses led the children of Israel out of Egypt. (Emphasise (1) Moses, (2) the children of Israel, (3) Egypt.)

12. The reign of Constantine marks the epoch of the transformation of Christianity from a religion into a political system. (Emphasise the reign of Constantine.)

13. All classes of the population did not with equal rapidity adopt monotheistic views. (Emphasise (1) not with equal rapidity, (2) all classes of the population.)

14. All parties in the Roman commonwealth concurred in appointing Quintus Fabius to the command of the Roman forces against Hannibal. (Emphasise (1) all parties, (2) Quintus Fabius, (3) concurred.)

15. Nature conciliates and forms the mind of man to his condition.—GOLDSMITH. (Emphasise mind.)

II. Give some additional point to the following sentences by a change of order, or by a change of words, or by any other means :—

1. Which of you by taking thought can add one cubit to his stature? (cf. Matt. vi. 27 with Luke xii. 25).

2. The government prosecuted Watson for high treason and were defeated; had they indicted him for aggravated assault, they would have obtained a conviction.

3. The authors of a revolution are not like those whom the revolution produces.

4. Tully was the first who observed that friendship improves happiness and abates misery by the doubling of our joy and dividing of our grief; a thought in which he has been followed by all the essayers upon friendship, that have written since his time.—Spectator, No. 68.

5. A clever magistrate would see whether a witness was deliberately lying a great deal better than a stupid jury.

6. The air last night condensed the vapour into white particles, but was not cold enough to turn them into actual hoar-frost.

7. Nothing in this war threatened our interests more than the interests of other countries.

8. A coxcomb, flushed with victories over the fair young creatures whom he has deceived, will protest and vow he never thought of matrimony, and wonder talking civilly could be so strangely misinterpreted.—Spectator, No. 288.

9. Nor is the reason that has led to the establishment of this moral law difficult to be discerned.

10. In our search after God and contemplation of Him our wisdom doth consist; in our worship and obedience to Him our religion doth consist; in both of them our happiness doth consist.

11. It is not without a degree of patient attention, greater than the generality are willing to bestow, though not greater than the object deserves, that the habit can be acquired of examining and judging of our own conduct with the same accuracy and impartiality as that of another.

12. Every man calleth that which pleaseth and is delightful to himself good, and that evil which displeaseth him.

13. Our Berlin correspondent telegraphs that in diplomatic circles there confidence is placed in no reports about the Chinese loan.—Daily Telegraph, 8th Feb. 1898.

14. In the last few hours that preceded his death he was only able to make a few audible sounds, and no one understood them.

15. In this evil world guilt has a better chance than misfortune of being treated with indulgence.

16. He that tells a lie is not sensible how great a task he undertakes; for he must invent twenty more to maintain one.

CHAPTER XVII.—STRUCTURE OF SENTENCES.

257. Rule of Proximity.—Subordinate clauses are subject to the Rule of Proximity (§ 229) to the same extent as the various parts of speech and the corresponding phrases. A construction which violates this principle is called by the French construction louche, "a squinting construction"; or to adopt the more homely English phrase, "One eye is fixed on the kettle, while the other is looking up the chimney."

(a) Noun-clause.—A Noun-clause must be placed as close as possible to the verb or noun to which it belongs by grammatical relation :—

Mr. J. S. Chapple points out in reference to our remark last week, that, with the exception of Sir G. Scott, no other architect of our time has erected a cathedral, that Mr. W. Burgess erected St. Fin Barré's Cathedral at Cork in the year 1862.—Church Times, 23rd Dec. 1897.

The chief fault of this slovenly sentence lies in the fact that it separates the object from its verb by a block of twenty-five words, and this without any necessity whatever. The sentence could easily have been arranged as follows :—

In reference to our remark last week that, with the exception of Sir G. Scott, no architect of our time has erected a cathedral, Mr. J. S. Chapple points out that Mr. W. Burgess, etc.

(b) Adverb-clause.—An Adverb-clause must be placed as close as possible to the word that it qualifies :—

He imprudently put all his money in that concern, as the event showed.

The adverbial clause "as the event showed" is intended to qualify and explain the adverb imprudently, and should therefore be placed immediately after it.

Imprudently, as the event showed, he put all his money in that concern.

To take another example :—

All this is meant to open the eyes of the Chinese, and to cause them to accept each and every claim that we make upon them as soon as possible.—Daily Telegraph, 3rd Jan. 1898.

The clause or phrase as soon as possible should have been placed immediately after the verb accept, since it is not intended to qualify the verb make.

(c) Adjective-clause.—The position of such clauses is determined by the rule laid down in § 244, that a Conjunctive pronoun or Conjunctive adverb must be placed as close as possible to its Antecedent.

258. Rule of Priority.—The Rule of Proximity is supplemented by another—the Rule of Priority.<sup>1</sup> According to this rule, qualifying clauses should, as far as possible, precede the clause or words to which they are subordinate.

<sup>1</sup> Bain's Rhetoric and Composition, p. 1.

The principle underlying this rule is that the mind of the reader is by this means kept in suspense (see § 250, b). His interest is aroused to know what is coming, and when it does come, it comes with the greater force. The final or principal clause thus receives the emphasis that it ought to have.

- (1) Ghost. If ever thou didst thy dear father love,
Hamlet. O heaven!
Ghost. Avenge his foul and most unnatural murder.

Observe how the effect of this dialogue would have been marred, if the order of the clauses had been reversed. Observe, too, how the interest of Hamlet has been awakened by the suspensive influence of the conditional clause. This is shown by the exclamation, "O heaven!"

- (2) Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal.—1 Cor. xiii. 1.

Compare with this well-arranged sentence the following extract from Bacon, in which the limiting clause is awkwardly put last:—

A crowd is not company, and faces are but a gallery of pictures, and talk but a tinkling cymbal, where there is no love.

259. Qualifying Phrases.—What is true of subordinate clauses is no less true of qualifying phrases also. These, for the sake of their suspensory influence, should, whenever the idiom of our language allows it, be placed before, and not after, the word that they qualify.

A man who has mortgaged his estate up to almost its full value has, to all intents and purposes, ceased to be the owner of it.

This is very much better than saying, "Has ceased to be the owner of it to all intents and purposes."

In the following sentence<sup>1</sup> the Rule of Priority and that of Proximity are both neglected:—

With this small force the general determined to attack the foe, flushed with recent victory and rendered negligent by success.

The proper collocation would be as follows:—

Flushed with recent victory and rendered negligent by success, the general determined with this small force to attack the foe.

260. Sentences Periodic or Loose.—In point of structure sentences have been subdivided into two main classes—the Periodic and the Loose.

A Periodic sentence (called also a Period) is one that keeps the meaning in suspense and is not grammatically complete until the close.

<sup>1</sup> Quoted from Abbott's How to Write Clearly, p. 31.

A Loose sentence is one that continues running on after grammatical completeness has been reached, and when we think the sentence has come to an end. The distinction applies to simple sentences no less than to complex ones.<sup>1</sup>

Loose.

(1) We came to our journey's end at last, || with no small difficulty, after much fatigue, through deep roads and in bad weather.

(2) This was forbidden by good taste || as well as by judgment.

(3) This disposition saves him from offending his opponents, || and also from alienating his supporters.

(4) He kept himself alive with the fish he caught, || or with the goats he shot.

(5) The world is not eternal, || nor is it the result of chance.

(6) The Romans consider religion a part of virtue, || the Jews virtue a part of religion.

(7) His actions were frequently criticised, || but his character was above criticism.

(8) His word may be as good as his bond, || but we have still to ask how good his bond is.

Periodic.

(1) At last, with no small difficulty and after much fatigue, we came, through deep roads and in bad weather, to our journey's end.

(2) This was forbidden both by good taste and by judgment.

(3) This disposition saves him from offending his opponents on the one hand, and from alienating his supporters on the other.

(4) He kept himself alive either with the fish he caught or with the goats he shot.

(5) The world is neither eternal, nor the result of chance.

(6) While the Romans consider religion a part of virtue, the Jews, on the contrary, consider virtue a part of religion.

(7) Though his actions were frequently criticised, his character was above criticism.

(8) Granting that his word is as good as his bond, we have still to ask how good his bond is.

In the examples given on the left side of the table, the double stroke shows where the sentence could have stopped without leaving any sense of incompleteness in the mind of the reader. Up to that point the sentence is a Period. In the examples given on the right side, the word or phrase, by which the interest of the reader is held in suspense and the sentence changed from Loose to Periodic, is indicated by italics.

The distinguishing mark of a Period, then, is that the mind is kept in suspense (§ 250) until the sentence comes to an end. From the above examples it will be seen that suspense can be produced in four different ways at least, and there may be more :—

<sup>1</sup> The table of examples is quoted from Carpenter's Exercises in Rhetoric (Macmillan and Co., New York, 1894), p. 99. This author refers to Hill's Principles of Rhetoric, p. 153. I find, however, that the first, the fourth, and the sixth examples are from Whately's Rhetoric, p. 206.

(a) By putting adverbial or qualifying phrases before, and not after, the word that they are intended to qualify, as in example (1), (see § 259).

(b) By using correlative words and phrases, as in examples (2), (3), (4), (5). See remarks in § 251.

(c) By putting subordinate clauses before the main clause, as in examples (6) and (7), (see § 258).

(d) By using participial phrases, and making them precede the subject of the sentence, as in example (8).

261. Advantages of the Period.—In point of energy the Period has in most cases the advantage over Loose sentences. When we meet with qualifying clauses or phrases, our tendency is to look forwards rather than backwards. Our interest is thus roused to know what is coming. The Loose sentence is less stimulating and often disappointing. "An unexpected continuation of a sentence, which the reader had supposed to be concluded, is apt to produce in the mind a sensation of being disagreeably balked, analogous to the unpleasant jar which is felt when, in ascending or descending a flight of stairs, we meet with one step more than we had expected" (Whately).

Shaftesbury's strength lay in reasoning and sentiment more than in description, however much his descriptions have been admired.<sup>1</sup>

When this Loose sentence has been converted into a Period, the reader will at once perceive how much the energy is increased.

However much Shaftesbury's descriptions have been admired, his strength lay not so much in description as in reasoning and sentiment.

262. Occasional Inconvenience of the Period.—On the other hand, the Loose sentence, though its name implies something of reproach, is at times very useful, and many sentences would be spoilt rather than improved by an attempt to coerce them into Periods.

(1) As the sun at this time of the year sets as early as four o'clock, we had better start at once, if we are to get to our journey's end in daylight.

Here the rhythm is improved by placing the principal clause between the two subordinate clauses that qualify it. Moreover, the first subordinate clause does not give a full explanation of the reason for starting at once, and hence the second one does not come as "a disagreeable surprise."

<sup>1</sup> Bain's Rhetoric and Composition, p. 55.

- (2) Through great, low-lying fields of golden grain, over which the evening breezes swept with impetuous speed, blending the radiant yellow of the corn and the bright blood-red of the poppies in a glorious arabesque of gold and green and scarlet, the river stole.<sup>1</sup>

This sentence exemplifies the abuse of the Periodic style. The sentence would be greatly improved by commencing with "the river stole." Undue emphasis is given to the word "stole" by placing it last.

A Period may be so clumsily constructed that, in spite of the Periodic character being sustained to the very close, the reader's attention is never once roused. The following is an example:—

The reflections of such men are so delicate upon all occurrences which they are concerned in, that they should be exposed to more than ordinary infamy and punishment for offending against such quick admonitions as their own souls give them, and blunting the fine edge of their minds in such a manner that they are no more shocked at vice and folly than men of slower capacities.—Spectator, No. 6.

263. Rule of Unity.—Every clause or other part of a sentence should be made subservient to the unfolding of one leading thought. This is called the Rule of Unity. If several leading thoughts are thrown together, the sentence containing them should be distributed into as many separate sentences as there are leading thoughts. In point of grammatical accuracy, the string of thoughts may be "as coherent as a string of sausages; but sausages to be eaten must be separated" (Hodgson).

- (1) On looking back (at the House of Commons as it was thirty or forty years ago), I do think that in the past, in spite of angry controversy, there was not the vulgar personality which is now sometimes heard with regret.—Fort. Rev., Feb. 1898, p. 250.

The Unity of this sentence is marred by the two last words. The sentence should have ended with "heard." The regret expressed is irrelevant. Moreover, it renders the sentence ambiguous; for it might mean that vulgar personality is not always, but only sometimes, to be regretted. It might also mean that the angry controversies of a former day were not to be regretted, only the vulgar personality of the present day. There would be no breach of Unity and no consequent ambiguity, if the last clause were reworded thus: "which (we regret to say) is now sometimes heard."

- (2) But now we must admit the shortcomings, the fallacies, the defects, as no less essential elements in forming a sound judgment as to whether the seer and artist were so united in him as to justify the claim first put in by himself and afterwards maintained by his sect to a place beside the few great poets, who exalt men's minds and give a right direction and safe outlet to the passions through the imagination, while insensibly helping them towards balance of character and serenity of judgment by stimulating their sense of proportion, form, and the nice adjustment of means to ends.<sup>1</sup>—LOWELL, Among my Books.

---

<sup>1</sup> Carpenter's Exercises in Rhetoric, p. 103.

In all this jungle of words there seem to be at least two leading questions: (1) What are the claims of some one to be ranked among the few great poets? (2) What are the characteristics of a great poet? If this supposition is correct, there ought to be two sentences at least, which might be stated as follows:—

If we wish to form a sound judgment as to whether the seer and (the) artist were so united in him as to justify the claim, first put in by himself and afterwards maintained by his sect, to a place among the few great poets of our nation, his shortcomings, fallacies, and defects must be taken into account no less than his merits. By "great poets" we mean those men of exceptional genius who exalt men's minds and give a right direction and safe outlet to the passions through the imagination, while insensibly helping, etc., of means to ends.

Even now the second sentence is very ungainly. The first one is guilty of the omission of "the" before "artist." We have inserted "the" to save the sentence from being ungrammatical (see § 186, a).

264. Use of Parentheses.—A short parenthesis, if it is needed for explanatory purposes or to express a passing comment, may be admitted, but not otherwise. A long parenthesis constitutes too glaring a breach of Unity, and is not admissible on any terms.

Short parenthesis: admissible.

This gentleman (for I found he was treated as such by his audience) was entertaining a whole table of listeners with the project of an opera.—Spectator, No. 31.

By that one act a final stamp was given, not to Russian "policy."—that is far too limited an expression,—but to Russian evolution in Asia.—Blackwood's Magazine, Feb. 1898.

Long parenthesis: inadmissible.

This ill-favoured fraternity consists of a president and twelve fellows, the choice of which (?) is not confined by patent to any particular foundation (as St. John's men would have the world believe and have therefore erected a separate society within themselves), but liberty is left to elect from any school in Great Britain, provided the candidates be within the rules of the club as set forth in a table entitled the Act of Deformity, a clause or two of which I shall transmit to you.—Spectator, No 17.

<sup>1</sup> Hodgson's Errors in English, p. 186.

*Exercises.*I.—Convert the following Loose sentences into Periods :—

1. She was a phantom of delight,
When first she gleamed upon my sight.
2. Murder has no tongue, but it will speak.
3. The responsibility of managing such a large business was more than he could bear, as he had not been trained in book-keeping and office-accounts.
4. English may claim to be called the universal language, if any language deserves to be so called.
5. The order of nobility was exceedingly numerous in France before the outbreak of the Revolution, since all the children of a nobleman belonged to the class of their father, and the class was continually increased by the creation of new nobles.
6. Little good will be effected, notwithstanding the exertions that public-spirited individuals may make to dispel the ignorance and raise the moral tone of the lower orders, without the cordial co-operation of the government.
7. During his long imprisonment he was harassed with many bitter reflections, deprived of the consolations of friendship by the cruelty of the tyrant.
8. There was nothing out of place inside the house or outside.
9. William the Conqueror laid waste a tract of thirty square leagues in Hampshire, to make space for the New Forest, as it is still called.
10. On that occasion the men in the street behaved in a very unruly manner, and it was found necessary to read the Riot Act.
11. He has many irons in the fire and his affairs are getting into disorder.
12. I found all the shops closed next morning, as I went down the street.
13. We no longer understand the language of our stage, inasmuch that I have often been afraid, when I have seen our Italian performers chattering in the vehemence of action, that they have been calling us names and abusing us among themselves.—Spectator, No. 18.

II. Reconstruct the following sentences so as to enforce the rule of Proximity, or the rule of Priority, or the rule of Unity. If no rearrangement is considered necessary, give your reason :—

1. He returned to England in 1839, and next year he was persuaded to enter Parliament, but he soon lost his seat, and then he retired, and resumed his literary studies, and died suddenly in 1849.
2. To cut a long story short, I pulled the labouring oar for a few years, and saw every class of business, and earned money enough to keep me, till I found myself man enough to sail my own ship, and I stayed in Parliament Street for forty years.—Fortnightly Review, Feb. 1898, p. 240.
3. The improved revenue is due to a steady and uniform increase in demand for the products of the company, as will be gathered from the statement that sales for the thirteen and one-third months just completed exceed by 88·15 per cent the sales of the twelve months ended 30th June 1896.—Daily Telegraph, 1st Feb. 1898.

4. Mrs. Jennings entered the drawing-room where Elinor was sitting by herself, with an air of such hurrying importance as prepared her to hear something wonderful.—MISS AUSTEN.

5. I may, however, again state that the security was ample, and that I urged upon the Foreign Office that there were the strongest reasons in the interest of British trade and commerce, and of the position and influence of Great Britain in China, for the government most seriously considering the proposal.—Daily Telegraph, 7th Jan. 1898.

6. The very landlord's agent, who has been giving you all the landlord side of the question, when you come to the subject of evictions, breaks away and becomes an Irishman.

7. As a man must have no slavish fears and apprehensions hanging upon his mind, who will indulge the flights of fancy or speculation, and push his researches into the abstruse corners of truth, so it is necessary for him to have about him a competency of all the conveniences of life.—Spectator, No. 287.

8. Besides poverty and want there are other reasons that debase the minds of men who live under slavery, though I look on this as the principal.—Spectator, No. 287.

9. The prospect of being guillotined seemed to be singularly disagreeable to him, though he had helped a multitude of people to find that road out of the world with the utmost composure.

10. To the future of the agricultural labourer he looks forward with confidence, if the labourer will only be true to himself.—Times Weekly, 21st Dec. 1898.

11. Neither I nor they should wear handcuffs and see the inside of a jail, if I could help it.—JOSEPH ARCH.

12. In Prussia, nothing goes down with the public, that is to say, there is no independence of action or judgment, unless the crown or the government leads the way.—Daily Telegraph, 28th Jan. 1898.

13. It would, in my opinion, be scarcely possible to spend the public money for a better or more patriotic purpose, provided the movement is kept strictly undenominational.—LORD ROBERTS, 4th Feb. 1898.

14. Cutting our way through the undergrowth, we crept and clambered down the slippery slopes, till we reached the bottom of the glen and came to a moss-covered rock, from which a tiny spring issues and has made a pool below.—The Niger Sources, TROTTER.

15. And it is also pleasant to have heard Lord Lyndhurst, when ninety years of age, the son of Copley Fielding, who was born at Boston, U.S.A., an English subject before the Independence of America, speaking on a Canadian question, and his voice ringing as clearly as a bell.—Fortnightly Review, Feb. 1898, p. 250.

16. The political morality of the nation was undermined in the reign of Queen Anne by the corrupt practices of the court and the ministers, and not, as has been asserted, by the quarrels between Whigs and Tories, which involved some degree at least of political principle.

17. After a smooth and on the whole enjoyable voyage, the last part of which was through the cooler air of the Arabian Sea, we landed at Bombay, which is still suffering from the plague.

18. It is not without a degree of patient attention and persevering diligence greater than the generality are willing to bestow, though not greater than the object deserves, that the habit can be acquired of examining and judging of our own conduct with the same accuracy and impartiality as that of another.

19. Close upon two-thirds of the present work are devoted to the writer's earlier career in the northern hemisphere, and of the remainder, two chapters tell of his visits to Europe during his colonial career, although his public life in Europe extended only from 1836 to 1855, while his colonial career occupied close upon a quarter of a century. But the proportion is not perhaps ill-adjusted.—Times Weekly, 11th Feb. 1898, p. 92.

20. Natural historians tells us that no fruit grows originally among us, besides hips and haws, acorns and pig-nuts, with other delicacies of the like nature.—ADDISON.

21. At the same time, it was impossible to disprove the fact that there was a large body of lay public opinion in Ireland drawn from that section of the Catholics who could send their sons to a University, who were suffering a very serious educational disability.—Mr. Lecky's Speech, 17th Feb. 1898.

22. Mr. Ph. protested against people in the provinces, who, when they wanted a recreation ground, had themselves to pay for it, being taxed for the maintenance of the Royal Parks, which were really pleasure grounds for Londoners.—Daily Telegraph, 19th April 1898.

23. What! That there should be a return to fanaticism, an attempt to light up a religious war in this epoch of ours, one hundred years after the Revolution, in the heart of our great Paris, in the days of democracy, of universal toleration, at the very time when there is an immense movement being made everywhere towards equality, justice, and fraternity!—ZOLA.

24. The working of democratic institutions means one long training in enlightened altruism, one continual weighing of those larger experiences on which all successful conduct of social life depends, not of the advantage of the particular act to the particular individual at the particular moment.—WEBB, Studies in Democracy.

25. The will, in the testator's own handwriting, bears date 4th November 1871, of the Rev. Charles L. Dodgson (Lewis Carroll), student of Christ Church, Oxford, author of Alice in Wonderland and other works, who died at the Chestnuts, Guildford, on January 14th last, aged sixty-five years.—Daily Telegraph, 17th May 1898.

26. In the first place, there will be a derangement of business, which had just begun to emerge from a long and ruinous depression, which must affect most deeply every legitimate industry and employment that belongs to a time of peace.—Quoted in Daily Telegraph, 15th April 1898.

CHAPTER XVIII.—PURITY OF DICTION.

265. Purity defined.—When we speak of “pure air,” “pure gold,” or “pure water,” we mean air, gold, or water that has been cleared of all extraneous matter. Similarly, when we speak of "pure language," we mean language that has been cleared of all extraneous words and phrases. In this definition any word or phrase that does not belong to reputable, national, and present use is considered "extraneous."

Lord Chesterfield, in writing to his son, gave him the following advice regarding the choice of words:—"The first thing you should attend to is to speak whatever language you do speak in its greatest purity and according to the rules of grammar; for we must never offend against grammar, nor make use of words that are not really words."

Not really words—as the dross in ore is not really metal. The dross of language consists of the following kinds of extraneous matter:—

(1) Vulgarisms,—words or phrases that should be avoided even in conversation; such words are not "reputable."

(2) Colloquialisms,—words or phrases admissible in conversation, but not "reputable" enough for use in written composition, except in the dialogues of novels or in correspondence between friends and equals.

(3) Provincialisms,—words confined to some particular province or locality, and used chiefly by the lower classes; these cannot be considered either "national" or "reputable."

(4) Technical words,—used in professional or didactic manuals, but not used in general literature, and not generally understood; such words are "reputable" among the specialists who understand them, but they are not "national."

(5) Obsolete words,—such words are barred by the rule of Purity, because they are not "present"; and they are not "national," because they are not generally understood.

(6) Foreign words,—appropriate in their own language, but not naturalised in ours; such words are obviously not "national."

(7) Newly-coined words,—candidates for becoming "national," "reputable," and "present," but not established so far, and perhaps not deserving to become so.

Note.—Purity carried to an excess is called purism. Thus Macaulay says of Fox:—"He purified his language with a scrupulosity unknown to any purist."

266. Vulgarisms.—It may be difficult to draw the line between Vulgarisms, i.e. words or phrases to be avoided at all times, and Colloquialisms, i.e. words or phrases admissible in dialogue or in correspondence between friends and equals.

Such words or phrases as the following we place among the former class :—

Kid for “child.” That angry for “so angry.” You bet for “you may bet anything you like.” Awfully for “very.” He don't for “he doesn't). Too utterly utter. Quite plenty for “amply sufficient.” Kick the bucket for “die.” To sleep five persons and eat ten (“find sleeping-room for five and table-room for ten”).

267. Colloquialisms need not be exemplified at length. When used at the proper time and place, they are considered to give zest to conversation. Others use them, because they will not take the trouble to think of the proper words. Others use them very sparingly or not at all. The safest example to follow is the last.

Peckish for “hungry.” To be sat upon for “blamed,” “censured.” Do the handsome thing for “act a liberal or generous part.” Dance attendance for “go backwards and forwards to meet some one, who takes his own time for seeing you.” Boss for “head man.” Fluke for “lucky stroke.” Out of sheer cussedness for “without any reasonable purpose.” Masher for “lady-killer.” Put on the haw-haw for “assume an air of great personal importance.” End in smoke for “have no tangible result,” “come to nothing,” etc. Jiffy for “instant.”

268. Provincialisms.—Our earlier literature was in three markedly distinct dialects,—the Northern, the Midland, and the Southern. Provincialisms that have come down from dialects are old English rather than bad English. For instance, if we happen to hear vixen still used by rustics for the female of fox, or stag for the male of any animal, even of a duck, or ourn for ours, or childern for children, this is merely a survival of correct language, which has become antiquated and provincial.

The poems of Burns, and the dialogues in some of Scott's novels, are among the most recent specimens of the Northern dialect. The Lincolnshire dialect (chiefly Northern) is seen in Tennyson's Northern Farmer; the Southern in Barnes's Dorsetshire Poems; Cockney dialect in some of the conversations in Dickens's novels.

269. Technical Terms.—Such terms are avoided by good writers, if the book is intended for general, and not professional, readers. “I have often wondered,” says Addison, “how Mr. Dryden could translate a passage out of Virgil after the following manner :—

Tack to the larboard and stand off to sea,
Veer starboard sea and land.

“Milton makes use of ‘larboard’ in the same manner. When he is upon building, he mentions Doric pillars, pilasters, cornice, frieze, architrave. When he talks of heavenly bodies, you meet with ‘ecliptic and eccentric, the trepidation, stars dropping from the zenith, rays culminating from the equator’: to which might be added many instances of the like kind in several other arts and sciences.”—Spectator, No. 297.

Tennyson, in his allusions to geology, is more guarded; he does not talk of the Ichthysaurus:—

A monstrous eft once ruled the world, they say.

Dragons of the prime,

That tare each other in their slime,

Were mellow music match'd with him.

270. Obsolete Words.—Here we must distinguish between poetry, which retains old words, and prose, which discards them:—

Entered then into the church the Reverend teacher;

Father he hight, and he was in the parish.—LONGFELLOW.

But come, thou goddess, fair and free,

In heaven yclept Euphrosynè.—MILTON.

No mean recompense it brings to your behoof.—Ibid.

Bring the rathe primrose, that forsaken dies.—Ibid.

Beholden, phantasy, poesy, belike.

Impersonal verbs are becoming more and more scarce even in poetry. Our more recent poets appear to avoid them.

It irks me. It repents me. It likes me. It yearns me not (Hen.

V. iv. 3, 26). It would pity any living eye (Faërie Queene, 1, 6, 43). So like you, sir (Cymb. ii. 3, 59). Where it thinks best unto your royal self (Rich. III. iii. 1, 63).

Sometimes a whole class of words will disappear. For instance, we once had several words beginning with the negative prefix wan. All of these except wan-ton, “undisciplined,” would now be considered “impurities,” because they are obsolete, and there is no need to revive them.

Wanhope (despair); wanhrift (extravagance); wanluck or wanhap (misfortune); wanlust (indifference); wanwit (folly); wangrace (wickedness); wantrust (diffidence); wantruth (falseness); wanchance (ill-luck).

271. Foreign Words and Phrases.—It is a mark of affectation to use exotic French words, when English ones exist to express the sense:—

Amour propre (self-respect); à la mode (according to fashion); à l'ordinaire (in the ordinary way); à propos (with reference to);

arrière pensée (mental reservation); au fait (up to the mark);

au reste (besides); autre droit (another's right); bête noire

(black beast, bug-bear); bon soir (good evening); bon voyage

(good journey); bon jour (good day); bouleversement (catastrophe); émeute (quarrel); congé (dismissal); belles lettres (literature); tout ensemble (aggregate); cortège (train of attendants); fracas (brawl), etc.

But there are some Latin and Greek words that are well established, and could not easily be spared:—

Sine die (without a day, no day being fixed); ad interim (for the meantime, provisionally); ad nauseam (to an extent that causes disgust); alias (assumed name); alibi (elsewhere); ibid. (short for ibidem "in the same author"); alma mater (lit. "benign mother"); a priori (from the cause to the effect); a posteriori (from the effect to the cause); ad hominem (a personal argument; lit. "to the person"); effluvia (bad smells); phenomena (facts worthy of observation); criterion (test); analysis (breaking up into parts); cæteris paribus (other things being equal); in statu quo (as before); caveat (let him beware); ex officio (in virtue of his office); ultra vires (beyond his jurisdiction); de jure (by right); de facto (in point of fact), etc.

272. Newly-coined Words.—When new thoughts or new situations arise, new words must be found to express them, if none exist already. But the attempt sometimes made to expel long-established words of Romanic or Greek origin, "in order to make room for Teutonic ghosts," is ridiculous. A few examples of such ghosts are taken from a book on English Grammar,<sup>1</sup> which the author terms "Speechcraft," Grammar having been banished on account of its foreign origin:—

Fore-say (preface); speech-love (philology); speech-strain (emphasis); word-strain (accent); matterly (concrete); unmatterly (abstract); one-head thing-names (proper names); sundriness (difference); rank-words (ordinals); mark-word (article); onely (Singular); somely (Plural); out-showing mark-words (Demonstrative adjectives); mark-words of suchness (Adjectives of Quality); itches of suchness (Degrees of Comparison), etc.

Some curious words like the following are occasionally seen; but there is no need of them, and it is not safe to use them:—

Enthuse (a bad coinage from "enthusiasm"); devagation (deviation); seldomcy (coined by Trench, and accepted by no one); denigration (blackening the character of a man); illaudable (reprehensible); evidence (as a verb); averagely; gentlemanhood; preventative (apparently a blunder for "preventive"); donate (to give); deontology (science of duty, coined by Bentham), etc.

The following, however, have been accepted, because they were wanted:—

<sup>1</sup> Speechcraft, by Rev. W. Barnes, 1878.

After-witted (one who does not think of a thing till it is too late); unionist (a political title); altruist (one who upholds the principle of living for others); scientist (one who believes in nothing that is supernatural); aloofness (a distant attitude); objective (the point to which anything is directed); cable (verb, to telegraph by a submarine cable); wire (verb, to send a telegram); exploit (verb, to make the utmost use of); boycott (verb, to refuse to trade with); mellay (adapted by Tennyson from Fr. melée, a confused and disorderly conflict).

Exercise.

Point out any words in the following examples that seem to be opposed to Purity, and substitute suitable words in their places:—

1. The decline of Izzet Bey's influence over the Sultan receives new impulsion from the flight of his son, who was recently summoned from Paris, etc.—Times Weekly, 4th Feb. 1898.

2. The illustrations add to the handsome appearance of the volume, and perhaps to some extent supply its raison d'être.—Times Weekly, 4th Feb. 1898.

3. Even his famous mot about ambassadors is only a hasty and youthful epigram.—Times Weekly, 4th Feb. 1898.

4. He spent four years in the office of a very small firm of solicitors, whose clientèle were almost exclusively peers, country gentlemen, and people of high position.—Fortnightly Review, Feb. 1898, p. 240.

5. Not all the information of all the pundits in the British Museum would enable him to sell books, if he neglected, etc.—Fortnightly Review, Feb. 1898, p. 258.

6. She must be asked if she did not give the soubriquet of Demi-Dieu to Captain de Lallemaud.—Daily Telegraph, 8th Feb. 1898.

7. They propagate the wildest and most inaccurate rumours, but always appealing to the fanaticism of their entourage.—Daily Telegraph, 8th Feb. 1898.

8. Mr. Archer remarked that where our theatres were not disguised as gin palaces, they were sandwiched between them.—Daily Telegraph, 8th Feb. 1898.

9. Nor is it necessary to refer in detail to the attacks upon the Egyptian policy of the government: if ever there was a chose jugée, it is this.—Daily Telegraph, 9th Feb. 1898, p. 9.

10. Since the war between China and Japan, it seemed desirable that Germany should have a point d'appui in China for safeguarding her interests.—Speech from Berlin, 9th Feb. 1898.

11. People were shaking their fists at the fictionist, and cries were raised of "Throw him into the river."—Daily Telegraph, 9th Feb. 1898.

12. It is not every one who will take the same view that she herself does of her "mediumistic gifts."—Times Weekly, 11th Feb. 1898, p. 92.

13. Severe moralists have lately been exercised about the increased admiration, etc.—Daily Telegraph, 14th Feb. 1898, p. 9.

14. Quinine is a palliative, but not a preventative, of fever.

15. This remark was followed by a rencontre described as trifling on the official, but violent on the Nationalist, side.—Daily Telegraph, 25th Feb. 1898.

CHAPTER XIX.—PROPRIETY OF DICTION

273. Propriety defined.—Propriety of language means the using of words (1) in their proper senses, (2) in proper connections :—

(1) I doubt that he is ineligible on the score of age.

Here doubt is used for fear. This is an impropriety, because “doubt” does not signify “fear.”

(2) His life was shaking in the balance.

Here the impropriety consists in using the verb shake in a context from which it is debarred by idiom. The verb should have been “trembling.” The grammar is correct, and every word is used in its proper sense. But the connection is wrong.

Any sense or connection of words may be considered proper that has the concurrent authority of standard writers, who have lived near enough to our own time to be regarded as safe guides for present usage.

Note 1.—We are obliged to add the word concurrent, because a blunder made by a standard author does not justify even the humblest writer in following a bad example. For instance, Byron’s expression “There let him lay,” for “There let him lie,” is none the less an impropriety because it is used by a first-rate poet like Byron, who lived near our own time. Again, such a phrase as “the seldom use” cannot be tolerated, though it has the authority of an eminent scholar like the late Archbishop Trench.

Note 2.—We are also obliged to add the limitation “who have lived near enough to our own time,” etc. Our language has not been changeless for the last four centuries, or even for the last two centuries. Words have in some instances acquired new meanings, and phrases have acquired new forms. Some words have died out, others have come in or have been revived.<sup>1</sup> A writer, if he wishes to keep clear of “improprieties,” must conform to present usage. There are many modes of expression in Shakspeare and Milton, and even in so recent a writer as Addison, which cannot now be imitated with impunity.

SECTION 1.—COMMON ERRORS IN THE USE OF COMMON WORDS.

274.—Under this heading we have placed a miscellaneous collection of words and usages about which some persons are liable to make mistakes.

---

<sup>1</sup> Thus Campbell, who wrote less than 150 years ago, says that “all writers of any name have now ceased to use behest, tribulation, self-same” (Philosophy of Rhetoric, p. 171). Evidently these words have been revived since his time; for they are now in “present,” “reputable,” and “national” use.

Nouns.

(1) Concrete, Abstract.—If a noun can be used in either sense (see § 27), take care to use it in one sense only within the same sentence :—

He is a man of clear judgment ; but as regards this case I still think it was too severe for the offence. (For it say his sentence, or his verdict. It is here improper, because it stands for “judgment” in a concrete sense, whereas in the former clause “judgment” is used in an abstract sense.)

(2) Collective nouns must not be associated with adjectives that imply individual attributes, nor with verbs that imply individual action :—

The average population of England is tall. (For average population of England say the average Englishman or most Englishmen.)

Mankind seeks for happiness in both worlds. (For mankind say most men or men in general.)

(3) Abstract nouns must not be pluralised without authority (§ 29) :—

Leave off such stupidities. (For stupidities say acts of stupidity.)

(4) Possessive Case.—Be careful how you use this case with nouns denoting anything inanimate or not personified (see § 45) :—

Beware of life's shortness. } For the Possessive form substitute
Look at this letter's signature. } “of.”

(5) Apostrophe “s.”—If the apostrophe “s” is given to the ear, it should also be given to the eye. In other words, it must be written as it is pronounced :—

Epps' cocoa. (Write Epps's for Epps'.)

(6) Plurals in a Special Sense.—On this point see appendix to this chapter.

Pronouns.

(7) We, I.—If we is substituted for I, avoid coupling it with a singular noun :—

We did things in a much better way, when we were manager. (Either change we to I, or change were manager to held the office of manager.)

(8) I.—Take care to place the first personal pronoun last, if it appears in company with other nouns or pronouns :—

I and Herbert return to school to-morrow. (For I and Herbert write Herbert and I.)

(9) Them.—Avoid using this Demonstrative pronoun as if it were a Demonstrative adjective :—

Leave them books alone. (For them say these or those.)

(10) Myself, etc.—A Reflexive pronoun cannot be the subject to a verb :—

In October last George and myself spent ten days at Hampton Court. (For myself say I or I myself.)

(11) They.—This is less suitable than “those” as an antecedent to “who” :—

They who have large private means need not for that reason lead an idle life. (For they write those.)

(12) One, as an Indefinite Demonstrative pronoun. This must not be followed by “he,” “his,” or “him,” since a Definite Demonstrative cannot have an Indefinite for its antecedent :—

One must not be too confident of his own success. (For his write one's.)

(13) My, our, your, his, her, their.—The use of these Possessive pronouns as antecedents to a Relative, though defensible and used occasionally by good writers, is not common and had better be avoided :—

The more accurately we search into the human mind, the stronger traces we everywhere find of His wisdom who made it.—BURKE. (For His wisdom write the wisdom of Him.)

(14) Who, which (as subjects to a verb).—These must not be omitted like “whom,” “which” (objects) :—

I had several men in my ship died of calentures.—SWIFT. (Insert who before died.)

(15) Which, whom, that (objects to a verb).—When one of these words is the connective between two rather long clauses, it is better not to leave it out :—

The action for libel recently brought in the City Magistrates' Court by Miss ———, a nurse, against Mr. ———, in respect of a letter the latter had written to a relative who was being nursed by the plaintiff, terminated in favour of the defendant.—Daily Telegraph. (Insert which or that after a letter.)

(16) Which.—If this word stands for two different cases in the same sentence, it must be mentioned twice, once for each case :—

This is a point which is very important, and all men acknowledge to be so. (Insert which after and.)

(17) Which, that.—In a restrictive or limiting sense, “who” or “which” is less suitable than “that” (see § 83, Note):—

This is the house which Jack built. (Say that.)

(18) Same.—After “same” use as or that for the following Relative, not who or which (see § 81) :—

This is the same man who came yesterday. (Say that.)

(19) As.—Avoid the vulgarism of using as for “who” or “which” or “that,” unless it is preceded by “such” or “same” :—

This is not the book as I bought. (For as say that.)

(20) And which.—These words must not be used to introduce a Relative clause, unless another Relative clause similarly introduced by which has been expressed already :—

It is a doctrine not very easily adapted to his habitual creed, and which drops out of his mind whenever, etc. (Insert which is after doctrine, and leave out which after and.)

Note.—The second which is unnecessary in such a sentence as that here given, because it stands for the same case as the first one. A second which is necessary only when it is in a different case ; see (16).

Adjectives.

(21) A, an.—Observe the invariable rule, that the n of an must be written if it is pronounced, but not otherwise (see § 55).

|                             |   |                                |
|-----------------------------|---|--------------------------------|
| A clock is an useful thing. | } | For an write a . |
| He is an one-eyed man.      |   |                                |
| That is not a hotel.        | } | For a write an . |
| A historical record.        |   |                                |

Note.—In the last two examples the h is silent, or so nearly silent as to be inaudible, because the syllable following is accented.

(22) A, the.—Take care to repeat the article after and, when a separate person or thing is introduced by and (see § 186, a, Note) :—

The styles of a poet and historian are not the same. (Insert an after and.)

Note.—The sentence would be further improved by adding respectively after historian.

(23) Other.—Take care to use this word with a Comparative, and to abstain from using it with a Superlative :—

He is more learned than any person now living. (Insert other before person.)

Of all other scholars he is the most accurate. (Omit other.)

(24) Each other, one another.—Remember that the first is used for two things, and the second for more than two :—

His knees smote one against another.—Dan. v. 6. (For one against another say against each other, or the one against the other.)

(25) Other . . . but.—Avoid using the preposition but after other :—

He had no other object but to get his money. (For but say than, which is appropriate, since “other” is etymologically a Comparative adjective ; or omit other.)

(26) Few, little.—Remember that these are implied negatives (= not many, not much), unless they are preceded by a :—

Few men escaped, and these were rewarded. (Insert a before few.)
 Little hope remained, but that was soon disappointed. (Insert a before little.)

Also remember that "few" denotes number, and "little" quantity or degree.

To-day there is less than eight hours of full daylight. (For is less say are fewer).

(27) Any, either.—Observe that either is used for two things, and any for more than two :—

He was first groom, then coachman, then stable-boy; and he did not do well in either capacity. (For either say any.)

(28) Comparatives.—Use the Comparative in preference to the Superlative, when two things are referred to :—

This picture is the best of the two. (For best say better.)

(29) Comparatives in -or.—Avoid using "than" after Latin comparatives in -or :—

His work is superior and deserves to be better paid than yours. (Say superior to yours and deserves to be better paid.)

(30) Like.—Avoid the vulgarism of using this adjective as if it were a conjunction :—

A timid, nervous child like Martin was. (Say as or such as for like, or put what after like.)

Verbs.

(31) Shall, will.—Remember that these are Principal verbs in some persons and Auxiliaries in others (see § 103 and § 115).

I will be drowned; nobody shall save me. (Let shall and will change places.)

Will I accompany you? (For will say shall.)

(32) Present, Past.—Avoid putting an Historic Present (§ 112, e) in the same sentence with a Past Indefinite.

While the governor is thus quietly kept in bonds, the prisoners were triumphantly paraded through the streets. (For is say was, or change were to are.)

(33) Perfect Infinitive.—Use the Perfect form, when you wish to show that some expectation, supposition, or desire was not realised (§ 124). Use it also after the verb "said" in the Passive voice, when you wish to express past time (§ 124, Note). In all other connections use the Present form :—

They, supposing him to have been in the company, went a day's journey.—Luke ii. 44. (Correct.)

But for his illness he would have come. (Correct.)
 I should like to have seen him. (Correct.)
 I intended to have seen him, and I succeeded. (Wrong.)
 (In the last line change "to have seen" to "to see."
 He is said to have been once an honest man. (Correct.)

(34) Infinitive, Gerund.—The Noun-infinitive and the Verbal noun or Gerund are equivalent in sense, both being equivalent to Abstract nouns. But if the verb or other word going before requires a preposition, the Infinitive (with few exceptions) must not be used:—

He persisted to say this. (Change to in saying.)
 I insisted to have my fee paid. (Say on having.)
 I am confident to win. (Say of winning.)
 I assisted to do this. (Say in doing.)
 Disqualified to compete. (Say from competing.)

In some few contexts, however, the Infinitive is more idiomatic than the Gerund, even though the word going before usually requires a preposition:—

I have a great desire of seeing you. (Say to see.)

(35) Gerundial or Qualifying Infinitive.—When this is used to qualify an adjective, the Active voice is more common than the Passive:—

The road, on account of robbers, was difficult to be passed. (For to be passed write to pass.)

(36) Two Direct Objects to the same verb.—If the same verb does not suit one of the two objects mentioned, add a second verb which suits the other:—

Very few of the Sultans of Turkey have enjoyed a life of peace or a natural death. (After or insert did.)

(37) One Auxiliary with two Principal verbs.—Repeat the Auxiliary, if the voice of the two Principal verbs is not the same:—

The growth of tobacco has been established in India for the last 300 years and overspread the country. (Insert has before overspread.)

(38) Two Auxiliaries with one Principal verb.—When two Auxiliaries are used with the same Principal verb, take care to use the Principal verb in two forms, if one form is not sufficient:—

I never have, and I never will, accuse a man falsely. (After have insert accused, and cancel the comma after will.)

(39) Mixed use of verbs.—Repeat the full form of the tense in each clause, if the use of the verb is not the same in two successive clauses :—

Happily we have not and could not have seen a repetition of the scandalous scenes which took place at the Assize Court.—
Times Weekly, 8th April 1898, p. 213.

The sentence should begin, "Happily we have not seen," etc. The "seen" must be inserted. In the first clause "have seen" is the Present Perfect tense, Indicative mood; in the second clause "have seen" is the Perfect Infinitive, object to the verb could.

Adverbs.

(40) Quite.—(a) Avoid the impropriety of using this adverb as if it were an adjective and competent to qualify nouns. "Quite" means "perfectly," "entirely," and should not be used in any other sense or for any use other than adverbial :—

Quite an item. (A considerable item.)

Quite a place. (An important place.)

Quite a sensation. (A startling sensation.)

(b) Avoid the impropriety of using this adverb in the sense of "very" :—

Quite a unique and interesting document has been published here.
—Daily Telegraph, 13th Jan. 1898.

(Quite unique is nonsense; for there cannot be degrees of uniqueness. Erase quite and insert very between and and interesting.)

(41) Since, ago.—These adverbs mean "from the present time reckoning backwards." They must always be preceded by a verb in the Past Indefinite tense :—

My house has fallen down two weeks since. (Say fell.)

Note.—For the conjunctive use of since, see below (48).

(42) That.—Avoid the vulgarism of using that as if it were an adverb signifying "so."

I am that tired that I can scarcely walk. (Say so tired.)

(43) Scarcely, hardly.—Avoid the vulgarism of using a negative with these adverbs.

I don't hardly know how to answer you. (Omit don't.)

Prepositions.

(44) Sequence of Prepositions.—Take care that nouns, adjectives, verbs, and adverbs are followed by the right preposition, that is, the preposition required by idiom and by the sense :—

The three brothers divided the estate between them. (Say amongst.)

"Between" can be said of only two things.)

China's resistance of Japan was vain. (Say to.)

A sad picture was presented before our sight. (Say to.)
 All the examples can be reduced under three heads. (Say to.)
 Marred, as you see, with traitors.—SHAKESPEARE. (Say by.)
 I have no sympathy for his opinions. (Say with.)
 A testimonial of my industry. (Say to.)
 M'Arthur's history treats only with his own time. (Say of.)
 I do not concur with that. (Say with you in that.)
 Dutch is of the same origin with Anglo-Saxon. (Say as.)
 I prevailed with him to let me go. (Say on.)
 I never interfere with other men's affairs. (Say in.)
 I never interfere in other people. (Say with.)
 This is not the question which we were contending. (Add about.)
 His style is characterised with verbiage. (Say by.)

(45) One preposition for two.—If one preposition is not fit to do the work of two, fill up the gap with one that is fit:—

This fact did not add but detract from his merits. (Put to after add; we cannot say add from.)

(46) Than.—This must not be used after "different," nor after "prefer," nor after "scarcely":—

His ideas are different than those of the majority. (Say from.)

He had scarcely gone than a letter was brought in. (For scarcely say no sooner, or change than to when.)

I prefer to do this than that. (Say doing this to doing that.)

(47) Except, without, against.—Avoid the vulgarism of using these as conjunctions. (This is no longer allowed. Their former use as conjunctions was through the absorption of that or some other conjunction, which introduced a Noun-clause):—

Except ye repent. (Say unless.)

Without you apologise. (Say unless.)

Have it ready against I come. (Say my coming.)

Conjunctions.

(48) Since.—This word, when used as a conjunction, must be preceded by a Present Perfect tense and followed by a Past Indefinite:—

Two years passed since my father has died. (Say have passed for passed, and died for has died.)

(49) Not only . . . but also.—Take care that the first of these is followed by the same part of speech as the second (§ 248):—

He not only built a house, but also a stable. (Put not only before a house.)

(50) Both . . . and.—If a preposition occurs after both, repeat it after and:—

Excess of any kind is bad both for mind and body. (Insert for before body, or else say for both mind and body.)

(51) Than . . . as.—As will not do duty for than as well as for itself:—

My prospects are no better, and not even as good, as they were before. (Say my prospects are no better than they were before, and not even as good.)

(52) That.—This must not be used as a general hack, to save the repetition of when, though, if, whether, unless, etc. It is, however, a common trick with careless writers to misuse it in this way.<sup>1</sup>

If I do not speak of them, it is because they do not come within my subject, and not that they are lightly esteemed by me. (For that say because.)

(53) As.—Avoid the vulgarism of using as for that to introduce a noun-clause.

I do not know as I need say anything more. (Say that.)

(54) And that.—If this is used for introducing a noun-clause, take care that it is preceded by another noun-clause which also begins with that. When the first that has been mentioned, a second one need not be repeated unless the subject to the verb is changed.

(a) I fancied I should get on well by degrees and that I had a good chance of ultimate success. (Insert that after fancied, and omit that I in the subsequent clause.)

(b) There seemed to be some hope of his recovery and that he would live to make a fresh effort. (For of his recovery say that he would recover, and omit that he would in the subsequent clause.)

(c) Physicians declare lung-disease to be difficult to cure in England, and that the patient must go to a more equable climate. (Say that lung disease is difficult, etc. Here that must be repeated in the second clause, because the subject is changed.)

(55) Though, but.—Remember that though is a subordinative conjunction, while but is a co-ordinative one, and therefore more emphatic (see § 171).

He is an honest man, but poor; and honesty is always rewarded. (The context shows that in the first clause the emphasis is on the word honest. Hence but must be changed to though.)

(56) Whether . . . whether.—When contradictory alternatives are offered by a couple of verbs, repeat the word whether; otherwise simply say or:—

---

<sup>1</sup> A collection of authenticated examples is given in Hodgson's Errors in English, pp. 120, 121.

- (1) I beg to ask whether our minister at Peking has protested against, or in any way recognised, the claims made by the German minister and consul.—House of Commons, 10th August 1898. (Insert whether he has after or.)
- (2) I beg to ask whether our minister has protested against or in any way opposed the claims, etc. (This is correct, because protesting against and opposing, though not synonymous, are not contradictory.)

(57) Or.—When the noun following or is contrasted with the noun preceding it, put an article or a preposition, if possible, before the second noun:—

Has he gained a prize or scholarship? (Insert a before scholarship.)

Tell me whether he influenced you with promises or threats. (Insert with before threats.)

Exercise.

Correct any improprieties that may be found in the following sentences:—

1. The creed of Zoroaster assumes the coexistence of a malevolent and benevolent principle, which divide the sovereignty of the world between them.

2. The failure of the spring and autumn harvest in 1897 led to a serious famine in India that year.

3. Is that house in the distance a hospital or a hotel?

4. He mistook James' hat for his own.

5. Sir Roger was saying last night that he was of opinion none but men of fine parts deserve to be hung.—Spectator, No. 6.

Note.—For correction of this, see page 66, Note 2.

6. A coxcomb, flushed with many of these infamous victories (over young women), shall say he is sorry for the poor fools, protest and vow he never thought of matrimony.—Spectator, No. 288.

7. The jury summoned to attend the court was a clever body of men.

8. Mazzini did more for the emancipation of his country than any living man of his own time.

9. The squadron consisted of about 200 men, and divided the booty among themselves after the victory.

10. A masterly genius does not care what men say of him.

11. I heard the multitude's shout.

12. The stamina of a plant consists of the anther and filament.

13. The violences of a mob must be suppressed.

14. Bring them books down from the shelf.

15. No one as yet had exhibited the structure of the human kidneys, Vesalius having only examined them in dogs.—HALLAM.

16. The claim to inspiration, which is made for these persons and they would not perhaps claim for themselves, cannot be proved.

17. There were very few passengers who escaped without serious injury. (Why is this sentence ambiguous? remove the ambiguity.)

18. In Palestine at the time of Christ the three chief sects were the Pharisees, the Sadducees, and the Essenes ; and they thoroughly disliked each other.

19. My readers too have the satisfaction to find that there is no rank or degree among them who have not their representation in this club.—Spectator, No. 34.

20. You shall seldom find a dull fellow of good education, but if he happens to have any leisure upon his hands, will turn his head to one of those two amusements for all fools of eminence—politics or poetry.—Spectator, No. 43.

21. Your Englishman is just as serious in his amusements as in any act of his life.

22. I prefer a profitable occupation and which I can look back upon afterwards without regret.

23. There is no popular Life of Oliver Cromwell in print ; those by Guizot and Carlyle being too bulky for general use.

24. I have read of a man who was very rich, but he considered himself poor all the same.

25. On a subject in which the feelings of others are entitled to respect, one must keep his thoughts to himself.

26. How do you distinguish between a poet and orator, and what is there in common between them ?

27. I have few things more to talk about, but I have no time now ; you shall hear them to-morrow.

28. "A little knowledge is a dangerous thing," says Pope ; but with all due deference to Pope, even little knowledge is better than none.

29. My friend sent me a pair of turkeys to choose from ; but I returned them with thanks, and told him I did not want any of them.

30. Several neighbouring gentlemen contributed works, for which they had either given commissions direct to our most distinguished artists, or had purchased them during this exhibition at the Royal Academy.

31. You will perceive that this is the same horse which yourself possessed four years ago.

32. I do not think that the Squire and myself ever had better sport together than we had that day.

33. On comparing his gun with mine, they pronounced his to be the best.

34. In selecting this house in preference to any others, I had no other object but to get the one that was nearest the railway station.

35. In commerce it often happens that they who have abilities want capital, and they who have capital want abilities.

36. Were he still disposed to go there, my purse shall be open to him.

37. I shall have great pleasure in accepting your invitation.

38. If he has been the cause of all this trouble, it would weigh heavily on his conscience.

39. I have lived ten years of my life in Canada, but left it for good and all two years ago.

40. I never have and never will attack a man for speculative opinions.—BUCKLE.

41. Quite an innovation in the mode of dressing the hair has come into fashion this year.

42. My almost drunkenness of heart.—BYRON.

43. My success or otherwise will be communicated to me by post this evening.

44. From my point of view Grote is a greater historian than Gibbon, though his style is much less grand.

45. I really believe that except to doctors and clergymen, and the very few intimate friends who have seen me frequently, even my state of extremity has been doubted.—MISS MITFORD.

46. In his translation of the Iliad, Pope has sometimes given us a picture of a very different kind than what Homer intended.

47. It was in this situation of affairs that Hastings was made Governor-General of India.

48. Breaking a constitution by the very same errors, that so many have been broken before.—SWIFT.

49. The trees have cast their leaves a month ago.

50. I will not let thee go, except thou bless me.—Gen. xxxii. 26.

51. He not only gave them his advice, but a good deal of pecuniary help besides.

52. It is contrary both to justice and common sense to do such a thing as that.

53. This building is both superior in size and more suitable in design than any other town-hall that I have seen.

54. No one ever worked more regularly or so carefully as he.

55. We decidedly prefer reading the Swiss Family Robinson at this moment than the rather characterless Masterman Ready.—MISS YONGE.

56. The modern Germans are fond of metaphysics like the ancient Athenians were.

57. But scarce were they hidden away, I declare,
Than the giant came in with a curious air.—TOM HOOD.

58. I am not that fond of my books that I like to stay in the house reading them all the afternoon.

59. I consider him to be very clever, and that he will do great credit to his teachers.

60. If any such rash project were attempted and that any serious trouble came of it, the fault would be yours, not mine.

61. I pass over this subject in silence, because it does not come within my present purpose, and not that I feel at all incompetent to deal with it.

62. He is an industrious boy, but naturally rather dull, and industry is almost always rewarded in the long run.

63. Whether this conflagration was the work of an incendiary, or that some one employed by the firm was guilty of carelessness, will never be ascertained.

64. This statement was repeated and carefully impressed upon the audience.

65. The man as came here yesterday went away to-day.

66. That operation was first performed on rabbits; it is now performed with success on the human family.

67. It is interesting to observe the various substitutes for paper before its invention.

68. The virtuous and the vile, the learned and ignorant, the temperate and debauched, all give and return the jest.—BROWN'S Characteristics.

69. This bold statement of fact will be sufficient to show that the permanency of the Yukon goldfields is established beyond peradventure.—Liverpool Daily Post, 29th Jan. 1898.

70. How should I look to have any part of my desire herein satisfied, unless myself be careful to satisfy the like desire which is in other men?—HOOKER.

71. Air, when carefully tested, is found to contain something else than nitrogen and oxygen.—GEIKIE.

72. The misreading of a person's character is an error rather difficult to be avoided.

73. He is as likely to make a good living for himself as his brothers have done.

74. Driving down the street, his horse ran off, and he was thrown out.

75. There have been three famous talkers in Great Britain, either of whom would illustrate what I say about dogmatists well enough for my purpose.—HOLMES.

76. We already possess four times as great a trade with China as every other nation put together.—Report of G. Balfour's Speech, 4th Feb. 1898.

77. The Zulu chief, Dinizulu, after some years of exile in St. Helena, has now been reinstated, to rank as a hereditary chief.—Daily Telegraph, 8th Feb. 1898.

78. France has obtained a firm footing at Tonkin; England is settled at Hong-Kong for some time past; Russia is at the Amoor; and even Spain, and Portugal, and Holland have their resting-places in East Asia.—Daily Telegraph, 8th Feb. 1898.

79. No one would accuse the representative of an English newspaper as an Irishman desirous of exaggerating the distress and grievances of his country.—Dillon's Speech, 10th Feb. 1898.

80. Quite a record gallop fell to the Whaddon Chase from Wing, where Lord Orkney kept open house.—Daily Tel. 10th Feb. 1898.

81. We were no sooner sat down, but after having looked upon me a little while, she said, etc.—Spectator, No. 7.

82. It is difficult to imagine a rougher experience than that involved by his attempt to carry out the adventurous project of reaching Paris from New York by land.—Times Weekly, 11th Feb. 1898, p. 92.

83. It (the work of Abbé Dubois) records the impressions of an acute and a patient observer of the actual life of the Hindus.—Times Weekly, 11th Feb. 1898, p. 92.

84. The predicate of a sentence always is or contains a verb.

85. Few of his friends except myself knew of his being in the kingdom.

86. The public and private good are so far from being inconsistent that they promote one another.

87. He regretted that the pupil-teacher did not prevent the boys from writing so fast, as he noticed that is done in the absence of such immediate supervision as the master, otherwise engaged, would have prevented.

88. Men and women who have no object or aim than amusement.—Daily Telegraph, 16th Feb. 1898, p. 8.

89. Though these nine warships were built in different dockyards, the design of the whole nine is the same, with slight differences in points of detail.—Daily Telegraph, 16th Feb. 1898, p. 9.

90. Bounteous harvests in the Punjaub and in the wheat lands of the River Plate are expected to furnish supplies from the Southern Hemisphere to the extent of about 5,000,000 quarters, etc.—Daily Telegraph, 29th April 1898.

91. Mr. Gladstone was able to sit for a short while in an easy-chair on the small lawn by the side of the house, which is charmingly sheltered by quite a small pine forest.—Daily Tel., 22nd March 1898.

92. I shall leave this house at once without you put it in proper repair.

93. You will have to get that lesson by heart like I did.

94. He preferred to take a sweep-crossing than beg his bread from door to door.

95. The army liked their quarters so well, that neither officers nor soldiers was in any degree willing to quit them till they should be thoroughly refreshed.—CLARENDON.

96. The recent fighting has led many people to reconsider the whole question of the relations between the Cape, the Imperial Government, and the natives.—Review of Reviews, Feb. 1898, p. 147.

97. I am anxious for the time when he will talk as much nonsense to me as I have to him.—W. S. LANDOR.

98. From this coalition, and not from the spirit of its own laws and institutions, he attributed the harsh and ungenerous treatment of our fallen enemy, Napoleon Buonaparte.—MRS. FLETCHER.

99. The position of the Cabinet is exceedingly difficult between the danger of foreign and civil war, either of which may be precipitated by a simple error.—Telegram from Madrid, 14th April 1898.

100. The image and name of Goethe occurs to us at once when we try to evoke the man of most perfect brain who ever existed.—Fortnightly Review, May 1898, p. 766.

101. The condition of Mr. Gladstone, who is without pain, is not quite so favourable.—Daily Telegraph, 21st April 1898.

102. The nurses for the Spanish Royal family are always chosen from the peasantry of Asturias; a large number are sent for, and from them the most handsome of the province is finally selected.—Cassell's Family Magazine, Jan. 1898, p. 152.

103. By that time he will have come in contact with some of the most gifted genius of the earth.—Ibid. p. 158.

104. Here is a specimen from Hamlet which illustrates the unmethodical character conversation will assume when a principal interlocutor is pursuing a private train of thought with intense eagerness.—ABBOTT AND SEELEY, English Lessons for English Readers, p. 231.

105. The whole question is accordingly remitted to a committee, the composition of which has already been announced in our columns, who will consider and report upon with all convenient speed the proposals of the Government of India.—Times, 3rd May 1898.

106. Chung Chih Tung, Viceroy of Nankin, a thorough Chinaman, a Progressive, though disliking foreigners, but who has the unique distinction of being absolutely honest and incorruptible, has engaged German instructors for his army.—Daily Tel., 19th April 1898.

107. He gathered that the Government were not altogether satisfied with each other.—MORLEY, quoted in Daily Tel., 23rd June 1898.

108. Throughout the whole of the north-east of the Soudan trade and industry are reviving surely, but no doubt slowly.—Sir M. HICKS-BEACH, quoted in Daily Telegraph, 28th June 1898.

109. How could I hear such words, how could I meet such looks, from any other man but he?—MRS. CRAIK, The Ogilvies, ch. x.

110. No one is more fully alive than himself to the heavy burden of his responsibilities.—Standard, 11th August 1898, p. 4.

111. These agents should be authorised to (and capable of) discussing industrial questions, and of availing themselves of the best markets.—Daily Telegraph, 15th August 1898, p. 2.

112. At any other time, and in any other person, such an exhibition might have been conducive of pity.—Windsor Magazine, August 1898, p. 258.

113. The adulteration of food generally occurs in some wholesome form. Margarine is an excellent food substance, though it is not butter; the potato is very nourishing, but it should not be found in bread.—Daily Telegraph, 27th August 1898.

114. Would not a man of far inferior abilities than Bismarck have become cognisant from that moment of France's exact power of resistance?—Fortnightly Review, September 1898, p. 407.

SECTION 2.—WORDS USED IN WRONG SENSES OR WRONG CONNECTIONS.

275. Under this heading we have given, chiefly in alphabetical order, some examples of words that have within recent times been used in senses that do not belong to them, or in contexts, from which they are debarred by current idiom.

When the use of a word in a wrong sense has become so general that the acquired meaning is as commonly recognised as the proper one, it is doubtful whether we can still call this an Impropriety. It is much to be regretted, however, that words should be handled in this slovenly fashion; for our language gains nothing in wealth by the process, while it loses much in precision. To take a few examples:—

- (1) When he (Napoleon III.) was brought before the court in Paris, he demeaned himself with a dignity which diminished the childish absurdity and the ridiculous details of his attempt at Boulogne.—Daily Telegraph, 2nd Feb. 1898.

Here demean is used in its proper sense. It is derived from old French démener, to conduct, guide, or manage; and it is from this source that we get our noun demeanour, which signifies bearing, manner. Now, however, the phrase "demean oneself" is more commonly used in the sense of "lower oneself," owing perhaps to an absurd etymology which derived the word from Latin de, down, and English mean, base.

- (2) Free trade equalises advantages, making the advantage of each the advantage of all.<sup>1</sup>—ZINCKE.

This makes a good balance; but the words taken literally contain a contradiction. The italicised advantage is made to mean "benefit," "profit,"—a sense in which the word is often loosely used. But the first "advantage" is used in its proper sense, viz. a step in advance. It would be impossible for all men to be in advance of one another.

- (3) This is the theory, but how are we to replace the Emperor, when he has been displaced by such an event as Waterloo or Sedan? —HOMERTON.

Here replace is correctly used in the sense of "restore to his place," "put back," "reinstated"; and this is what the etymology of the word implies. Nevertheless, the word "replace" has come to be used in the sense of "displace," "take the place of," "supersede," and the blunder has become so common that it attracts no attention.

- (4) In the Attic commonwealth it was the privilege of every citizen to address the people.—SWIFT.

The italicised word taken in its proper sense involves a contradiction with "every." A privilege means a law or right in favour of some particular person or class. This cannot be the right "of every one." Yet the word privilege is now loosely used for any kind of right that can exist.

- (5) The confession that he made begins at the wrong end, and is thus literally preposterous, in the sense of putting that first which ought to be last.

The word preposterous is now loosely used in the sense of "absurd," in which sense it was not wanted, and should have been condemned as an Impropriety. Hence, when any one now uses the word in its proper sense of something being put first which ought to have been put last, he is obliged to explain himself by adding "literally," "in the sense of putting that first which ought to be last." It is much to be regretted that through the carelessness of writers our language has practically lost this expressive word.

276. Fixed Character of Phrases.—One great peculiarity about phrases is that they are fixed; that is, any change in the order of words or in the words themselves would amount to an "impropriety."

Thus we can say that a man is "saturated with selfishness," but not "soaked in selfishness"; or that a house is "pulled down," but not "drawn down"; or that a prophecy "came true," but not "became true"; or that some one's life was "cut short," but not "cut brief"; or that a tax "falls heavy," but not "falls burdensome"; or that a country is "laid waste," but not "placed waste"; or that a matter is "carried to extremes," but not "put to extremes"; or that some one's fate "trembled in the balance," but not "shook in the balance"; or that men "made merry," but not "made joyful"; or that they "mustered strong," but not "collected strong"; or that they "played some one false," but not "played him deceitful"; or that they "put a thing right," but not "placed it right"; or that money "runs short," but not "flies short"; or that men "steer clear of a danger," but not "swim or ride clear"; or that some one "stops short," but not "stays short"; or that some one "casts his eyes" upon a thing, but not "throws his eyes"; or that some one is "struck dumb," but not "struck mute"; or that a man "thinks fit" to do a thing, but not "thinks suitable" to do it.

<sup>1</sup> Hodgson's Errors in English, p. 3.

Exercise.<sup>1</sup>

Put correct words or phrases for those italicised below, and show in what their impropriety consists. If you see no impropriety, give your reasons:—

1. His writings did not meet with a very general acceptation.
2. If both were to aggravate their parents, as my brother and sister do mine, etc.—RICHARDSON.
3. My decided preference is for the fourth and last of these alternatives.—GLADSTONE.
4. An ancient man, strangely habited, asked for quarters.—SCOTT.
5. Lest a sudden peace should appreciate the money.—RAMSAY.
6. They have approached the Education Department for some purpose in which their interests are concerned.
7. In a few hours above thirty thousand men left his standard and returned to their ordinary avocations.—MACAULAY.
8. Though the intentions of any person should be ever so beneficent, yet if they fail in producing their effect, his merit seems imperfect.—BENTHAM.
9. The only danger that attends the multiplicity of publications is that some of them may be calculated to injure rather than benefit society.—GOLDSMITH.
10. Brodie made a scrawl on paper only to be equalled by the calligraphy of Elliotson.—CLARKE.
11. In the capacious recesses of his mind.—BANCROFT.
12. Mr. Bright attacked in parliament the ruinous expense of the army, and claimed that the young officers, with their scarlet and gold, were kept mainly for the amusement of the young ladies of the aristocracy.—Fortnightly Review, Feb. 1898, p. 243.
13. We must look higher for the climax of earthly good.—TAYLOR.
14. We commence judges ourselves.—COLERIDGE.
15. When the actual motions of the heavens are calculated in the best possible way, the process is difficult and complex.—WHEWELL.

---

<sup>1</sup> Out of the 123 examples here given, about 20 have been selected from Hodgson's Errors in English.

16. To persist in neglecting to have a child vaccinated is a breach of parental duty which nothing should be permitted to condone.—Times, 5th April 1878.

17. The compactness of the parts resting together doth much confer to the strength of the union.—GLANVILL.

18. Congenital lameness caused by a fall from the nurse's arms.

19. I have constantly seen one bull kill six or seven horses, and have heard of one that has killed as many as seventeen.—H. J. ROSE.

20. It contributed a good deal to confirm me in the contemptible idea I always entertained of Cellarius.—GIBBON.

21. He that is of a merry heart hath a continual feast.—Proverbs xv. 15.

22. In short, the facts are as nearly as possible the precise converse in every respect of what the press states.—Morning Star, 19th March 1866.

23. He accepted all these tales with a credible mind.

24. Next morning a severe frost set in which lasted ten days, and my field of turnips was absolutely decimated. Scarce a root was left untouched.—Scotsman, 19th Dec. 1859.

25. Her son would demean himself by a marriage with an artist's daughter.—THACKERAY.

26. A difference between them and another description of public creditors.—HAMILTON.

27. The school of Rousseau idealised the natural man and regarded all social influence as deteriorating from his original purity.—Contemporary Review, May 1879.

28. The printing of my letters is left entirely at your disposition.

29. I doubt some foul play.—SHAKESPEARE.

30. The balminess of the atmosphere occasioned by the effluvia of the gulf stream.

31. Their eldest historians are of suspected credit.—STILLINGFLEET.

32. His mission was to eliminate religion of all such and kindred rubbish.—CARRUTHERS.

33. It is our duty to endeavour the recovery of these beneficial subjects.—LORD CHATHAM.

34. His body behind the head becomes broad, from whence it is again extenuated all the way to the tail.—GREW.

35. With a reluctance not unnatural in a female.

36. We need not go any farther in this subject.—Edinburgh Review, Jan. 1842.

37. Her future life was virtuous and fortunate.—CHAMBERS.

38. A Herculean task.

39. Nature has impressed upon some animals deformity and horror.—Spectator.

40. The bodies were so charred that identity was impossible.

41. These perplexities require illumination.

42. Never was my life in such fearful imminence.—GILCHRIST.

43. He was a very curious individual.

44. If Persia had invaded Greece at this critical time, Greece would have fallen almost infallibly.—GROTE.

45. The French put Marshal Bazaine into prison, because they suspected his infidelity.

46. Innate depravity, due to early training and general recklessness of life.—A. GRIFFITHS.
47. He was a man of insatiable energy.
48. Most of our mistakes arise from the neglect to interrogate facts.
49. He has shown throughout a large amount of patience.
50. Have you heard the last news?
51. Dapple had to lay down on all fours before the lad could bestride him.—DASENT.
52. He repeated without hesitation a lengthened passage from one of the eclogues of Virgil.—KILLAN.
53. A regiment contains not less than 800 men.
54. He is a man of limited income.
55. A. made use of the same inaccuracy as B.
56. Mutual enmities are said to cement friendship.
57. What a nice story we heard yesterday!
58. In his youth he was a novitiate of the Franciscan order.
59. In such circumstances we are to procure leave to omit the observation of the rule.—JER. TAYLOR.
60. The rapid stream had overflowed its narrow banks.—BLACK.
61. At one o'clock we partook of lunch at the hotel.
62. He did not examine the wound till after the death of the party.—Letters of Junius.
63. The great difficulty of permeating the masses with sound ideas is the prevalent lack of elementary education.—JER. HEAD.
64. He thinks very highly of the perspicuity of his son's mind.
65. The plains of Tartary are pervaded by nomad hordes.
66. It is not so easy to mould the formed character of an adult as the plastic mind of a child.
67. The evidence furnished by this witness is very precarious.
68. It needed no ghost from the grave to predicate even then the success of the young D'Israeli in public life.—MADDEN.
69. We must take note of their defects as well as of their qualities.
70. He lent me a quantity of books.
71. The question proposed by Lord Beaconsfield was successfully opposed.
72. He could not retrieve his friend from the false notion that had possessed him.
73. That sight prompted him to risibility.
74. A small alteration of the stops will make the sentence quite clear.
75. His retirement from public life was spontaneous.
76. Our interest in Persia is synonymous with that of the Persians themselves.—A. ARNOLD.
77. His recovery from that illness transpired in a shorter space of time than any one expected.
78. The veracity of the Gospel narrative is unquestionable.
79. A verbal agreement is less binding than a written one.
80. His character is undeniable.
81. He is much addicted to the study of mathematics.
82. A man of evil life and soaked with selfishness.
83. The salt tax falls more burdensome on the poor than on the rich.
84. I apprehend that much good will result.

85. I feel sure that this fact portends some good.
86. He was the first to break the news of that happy event.
87. He received his full share of praise for the procedure in which he had been implicated.
88. He pocketed the praise so cordially given to him.
89. He richly deserved the reward they gave him.
90. To do what he bid was an act of sheer benevolence.
91. He is utterly fit for the duties that he has undertaken.
92. A bevy of gentlemen appeared on the scene.
93. He arrived at nine o'clock in broad moonlight.
94. The opinion that he expressed on the merits of the case was a foregone inference.
95. It is not fair in a trial to put a leading inquiry to a witness.
96. That is a moot question.
97. The two men fought in single conflict.
98. Our standing navy is much greater than our standing army.
99. Your house is scarcely a stone's fling from ours.
100. He is a sworn enemy of mine.
101. He also worked on most important public business, sitting as chairman of the Indian Railways Committee, a long and important investigation.—Fortnightly Review, Feb. 1898, p. 252.
102. After he had suffered great poverty and want, honest old George Stevenson and George Bidder conspired with others and made an annuity for him.—Fortnightly Review, Feb. 1898, p. 247.
103. He was an advanced middle-aged man of very large dimensions.—Fortnightly Review, Feb. 1898, p. 237.
104. An important decision was rendered by the judges.
105. How the new constitution will turn out for Crete in all its details, and who will have the pleasure of ruling this interesting island, can only be supremely indifferent to us.—Daily Telegraph, 9th Feb. 1898.
106. Millais, on the other hand, with a perspicuity rare in so young a man, regarded the movement as a school in which he would find the discipline that he felt he needed.—Fortnightly Review, Feb. 1898, p. 193.
107. A wicked and probably unveracious story is told of a critic who said, etc.—Fortnightly Review, Feb. 1898, p. 194.
108. Only the individual who has had practically to confront this problem can adequately appreciate its difficulties and perplexities; and if it presents a not swiftly conquerable solution to an educated person, to a defenceless and inexperienced girl it is little less than hopelessly unattainable.—Fortnightly Review, Feb. 1898, p. 202.
109. It is not for the likes of us Saxons and West Britons to formulate the measure, etc.—Review of Reviews, Jan. 1898, p. 9.
110. It is announced that the directors of the Crystal Palace have under consideration a definite scheme for the purchase of the property at Sydenham.—Daily Telegraph, 11th Feb. 1898, p. 6.
111. These obscurities will be unravelled shortly.
112. Must I submit to all this injury with impunity?
113. He gives me a lot of trouble.
114. All this happened while I was stopping away from home.
115. We have received news of great import.

116. Take care to part your hair in the centre.

117. On that subject he was literally out at sea.

118. They are meant no doubt to make the wrongdoer suffer in his proper person.<sup>1</sup>—Daily Telegraph, 16th Feb. 1898.

119. His plea for unity among Irishmen was underlined by the audience with repeated applause.—Daily Telegraph, 17th Feb. 1898.

120. German goods have taken possession of markets which were but recently innocent of their existence.—Nineteenth Century, Feb. 1898.

121. The writer deals this time with the question of crude materials.—Review of Reviews, Feb. 1898, p. 143.

122. It was summer all over Upper India, a season so entirely different from its congener in the British Isles.—Mariam, p. 2.

123. Spain stands convicted of a horrible crime, the Maine disaster, and we owe it to ourselves to vindicate the victims of the explosion from the charge that they were dead by their own hands, and to see that the perpetrators should not go unwhipped by justice.—Speech delivered in Congress, 14th April 1898.

APPENDIX TO CHAPTER XIX.—PLURALS IN SPECIAL SENSES.

(a) Two forms of Plural, each with a separate meaning :—

|         |   |           |  |
|---------|---|-----------|--|
| Brother | { | Brothers, | sons of the same mother.                      |
|         |   | Brethren, | members of the same society.                  |
| Cherub  | { | Cherubim, | angels of a certain rank.                     |
|         |   | Cherubs,  | images or models of a cherub.                 |
| Cloth   | { | Cloths,   | kinds or pieces of cloth (Distributive).      |
|         |   | Clothes,  | articles of dress (Collective).               |
| Cow     | { | Cows,     | individual cows (Distributive).               |
|         |   | Kine,     | cattle (Collective).                          |
| Die     | { | Dies,     | stamps for coining (Distributive).            |
|         |   | Dice,     | small cubes used in games (Collective).       |
| Genius  | { | Geniuses, | men of genius or talent.                      |
|         |   | Genii,    | fabulous spirits of the air.                  |
| Index   | { | Indexes,  | tables of contents.                           |
|         |   | Indices,  | signs used in algebra.                        |
| Pea     | { | Peas,     | (Distributive).                               |
|         |   | Pease,    | (Collective).                                 |
| Penny   | { | Pennies,  | = penny-pieces (Distributive).                |
|         |   | Pence,    | (sometimes Collective).<sup>2</sup>           |
| Staff   | { | Staves,   | sticks or poles.                              |
|         |   | Staffs,   | departments in the army.                      |
| Stamen  | { | Stamens,  | male organs of flowers (Distributive).        |
|         |   | Stamina,  | endurance, vigour, lit. threads (Collective). |
| Shot    | { | Shot,     | little balls discharged from a gun.           |
|         |   | Shots,    | discharges ; as, "he had two shots."          |

<sup>1</sup> This is a misleading translation of the Latin phrase in propria personâ.

<sup>2</sup> Hence six-pence has a Collective sense, denoting a single coin, which makes the noun appear to be Singular, so that we say a sixpence (Singular), sixpences (Plural).

(b) Different senses of Singular and Plural :—

| Singular.                            | Plural.   |
|---|--|
| Advice , counsel.                    | Advices , information.                            |
| Air , atmosphere.                    | Airs , demeanour.                                 |
| Ban , a curse (under a ban ). | Banns , announcement ( banns of marriage). |
| Beef , flesh of ox.                  | Beeves , cattle, bulls and cows.                  |
| Compass , range or extent.           | Compasses , an instrument.                        |
| Copper , a metal.                    | Coppers , pennies.                                |
| Domino , a kind of mask.             | Dominoes , the game so-called.                    |
| Force , strength or energy.          | Forces , army.                                    |
| Good , benefit.                      | Goods , movable property.                         |
| Iron , a metal.                      | Irons , fetters made of iron.                     |
| Minute , of time.                    | Minutes , of a meeting.                           |
| Physic , medicine.                   | Physics , natural science.                        |
| Return , coming back.                | Returns , statistics.                             |
| Salt , seasoning substance.          | Salts , smelling salts.                           |
| Sand , a kind of matter.             | Sands , a tract of sandy land.                    |
| Vapour , invisible steam.            | Vapours , dejection.                              |
| Vesper , evening.                    | Vespers , evening prayers.                        |
| Water , the element.                 | Waters , springs.                                 |

(c) Two meanings in the Plural against one in the Singular :—

| Singular.                                  | Plural.   |
|---|--|
| Colour , colours.                          | Colours { 1. Kinds of colour.2. Flag of regiment .             |
| Custom , habits.                           | Customs { 1. Habits.2. Toll or tax .                           |
| Element , simple substance.                | Elements { 1. Simple substances.2. Conditions of the air .     |
| Effect , result.                           | Effects { 1. Results.2. Goods and chattels .                   |
| Letter , { 1. Of alphabet.2. Epistle.  | Letters { 1. Of alphabet.2. Epistles .3. Learning . |
| Manner , mode or way.                      | Manners { 1. Modes, ways.2. Behaviour .                        |
| Number , as in counting.                   | Numbers { 1. As in counting.2. Poetry .                        |
| Pain , suffering.                          | Pains { 1. Sufferings.2. Trouble, care .                       |
| Part , portion.                            | Parts { 1. Portions.2. Abilities .                             |
| Prèmise , { a statement orproposition. | Premises { 1. Propositions.2. Buildings .                      |
| Quarter , a fourth part.                   | Quarters { 1. Fourth parts.2. Lodgings .                       |
| Spectacle , anything seen.                 | Spectacles { 1. Things seen.2. Eye-glasses .                   |

(d) Two meanings in the Singular against one in the Plural :—

|                 | Singular.                                  |                   | Plural.      |
|-----------------|---|-------------------|---------------------|
| Abuse    | { 1. Wrong use.2. Reproaches.                 | Abuses,    | wrong uses.         |
| Foot     | { 1. Part of body.2. Infantry.                | Feet,      | parts of body.      |
| Horse    | { 1. A quadruped.2. Cavalry.                  | Horses,    | quadrupeds.         |
| Issue    | { 1. Result.2. Offspring.                     | Issues,    | results.            |
| Light    | { 1. A lamp.2. Radiance.                      | Lights,    | lamps.              |
| People   | { 1. A nation.2. Persons.                     | Peoples,   | nations.            |
| Powder   | { 1. A medicinal mixture.2. Gunpowder.        | Powders,   | medicinal mixtures. |
| Practice | { 1. Habitual act.2. Professional connection. | Practices, | habitual acts.      |
| Stone    | { 1. A piece of rock.2. Fourteen pounds.      | Stones,    | pieces of rock.     |
| Wood     | { 1. A forest.2. Timber.                      | Woods,     | forests.            |

CHAPTER XX.—PERSPICUITY OR CLEARNESS OF DICTION.

277. Perspicuity.—Most of what has been said hitherto about punctuation, the normal order of words, inversion of the normal order, the structure of sentences, purity of diction, and propriety of diction, leads up to the subject of clearness or perspicuity; and much that we shall have to say about simplicity or ease of diction, and about brevity or terseness of diction leads up to the same subject. Of all qualities of style the one that is of most general use is Perspicuity; for if the writer does not make himself understood, he writes to no purpose.

“By perspicuity,” says Quintilian, “care is taken, not that the reader may understand, if he will, but that he must understand, whether he will or not.”

The original and once the only sense of the word “perspicuity” was “transparency,”—transparency of the medium through which objects can be seen. Afterwards, by a vigorous metaphor, it came to be applied, and was eventually restricted, to transparency of language,—language being the medium through which the thought or image intended by the writer can be seen by the reader, as light is the medium through which objects can be seen by the eye.

SECTION I.—GRAMMATICAL PRECAUTIONS.

278. Among the grammatical devices conducive to perspicuity the following deserve attention :—

(a) Repeat the Subject, if there is any fear of a wrong subject being construed with the next verb :—

He is endeavouring to help some friends, who are very grateful for his assistance, and (he) will not allow any one else to help them.

If the he had not been repeated, the word “who” might naturally have been considered the subject to the verb “will allow”; and this would have completely altered the sense. All ambiguity is removed by repeating “he.”

(b) Repeat a Preposition, if the nouns governed by it are at some distance apart :—

(1) As soon as he had the power, he took vengeance on all those persons, who had injured his friends and relatives, and especially (on) his cousin John.

If the on had not been repeated, the reader would certainly have considered that “cousin John” was intended to be an object to the verb “injured.”

(2) The concessions by China of Kiao-chau to Germany, and (of) Port Arthur and Ta-lien-wan to Russia, for terms of years, belong to a new development, etc.—Times Weekly, 8th April 1898.

The repetition of “of” (not given in the original) before “Port Arthur” improves the rhythm as well as the perspicuity.

(c) Repeat a Conjunction, if the verbs depending on it are at some distance apart :—

Some persons have maintained that Julius Cæsar did not destroy the republican constitution of Rome for the sake of making himself emperor; (that) the republic had, in fact, been destroyed already by the ambitious citizens who preceded him; and (that) he merely stepped into a position which had been left open for him by force of circumstances.

If the conjunction “that” is not repeated, the two last sentences might be taken to express the writer’s own opinion, and not that of “some persons” referred to in the first sentence.

(d) Repeat an Auxiliary verb, when the Principal verbs are far enough apart to give rise to ambiguity :—

My powers, such as they were, had been cultivated at Oxford from the age of nineteen, when I was still young enough to be moulded into the shape that my advisers considered best for me, and (had been) trained to the study of science in preference to that of ancient philosophy.

Unless the auxiliary "had been" is repeated, the word "trained" would naturally be regarded as the sequel to the word "moulded."

(e) Repeat the Verb or use the pro-verb do after the conjunctions "than" and "as," if the omission of the verb would cause any ambiguity :—

The Presbyterians of Scotland disliked the Independents led by Cromwell as heartily as (did) the Royalists.

The Presbyterians of Scotland disliked the Independents led by Cromwell more heartily than the Royalists (did).

The ambiguity of both sentences is removed by using the pro-verb "did."

(f) Antecedent clauses must not be mixed up with consequent ones :—

The prosperity of England will decline, if she loses her command of the sea, and other countries step into her place.

Does the last clause go with the consequent or with the antecedent? Begin with the antecedent or conditional clause first in any case, and then the sentence may be rewritten in two different ways, whichever meaning the writer may have intended :—

(1) If England loses her command of the sea, her prosperity will decline and other countries step into her place.

(2) If England loses her command of the sea and other countries step into her place, her prosperity will decline.

(g) Infinitives dependent on one word must not be mixed up with Infinitives dependent on another :—

He decided to take his daughter with him to the British Museum to see the Assyrian monuments and to compare them with the researches of Layard and Rawlinson.

This sentence might be rewritten so as to make at least three different senses :—

(1) He decided to go with his daughter to the British Museum that she might see the Assyrian monuments and compare them with, etc.

(2) He decided to take his daughter to the British Museum that they might see the Assyrian monuments and compare them with, etc.

(3) He decided to take his daughter with him to the British Museum, where she might see the Assyrian monuments, and he might compare them, etc.

SECTION 2.—THE OBSCURE.

279. Defective Expression.—Elliptical phrases or idioms, provided they are in current use and are generally understood, are unobjectionable. For instance, there is no lack of perspicuity in the sentence, "Do all you can," because the omission of the Relative pronoun as object to a verb, though unknown in other modern languages, is common in English. The same cannot be said, however, of ellipses that result from over-brevity or from rapidity of thought followed by carelessness of diction :—

- (1) He is inspired with a true sense of that function, when chosen from a regard to the interests of piety and virtue.—Guardian, No. 13.

A function cannot be a sense or sentiment. The wording should have been “a true sense of the dignity, or of the importance, of that function.”

- (2) You ought to contemn all the wit in the world against you.—Guardian, No. 53.

The writer means “all the wit that can be employed against you.”

- (3) He talks all the way upstairs to a visit.—Spectator, No. 2.

The writer perhaps means, “He talks all the way as he goes upstairs to pay a visit.”

- (4) Arbitrary power I look upon as a greater evil than anarchy itself, as much as a savage is a happier state of life than a slave at the oar.—Sentiments of a Church of England Man.

Neither a savage nor a slave can be called a state of life. The writer means “the life of a savage is happier than that of a slave.”

- (5) This courage among the adversaries of the court was inspired into them by various incidents, for every one of which the ministers, or, if that was the case, the minister alone is to answer.—Free Thoughts on the Present State of Affairs.

If that was the case! He means, “if there was but one minister.”

- (6) Never let the glory of our nation, who made France tremble, and yet has [the gentleness to be unable to bear opposition from the meanest of his own countrymen, be calumniated in so insolent a manner, etc.—Guardian, No. 53.

By “the glory of our nation,” he means “the man who was the glory of our nation,”—a fact that is by no means obvious on first reading.

- (7) His chapters on these themes, or the commercial prospects of Siberia, are the pleasantest in his book.—Daily Telegraph, 25th Jan. 1898.

The writer means apparently “or those on the commercial prospects,” etc.

- (8) The ship was insured for a voyage from Cassis to Constantinople with cement.—Syren and Shipping, 9th Feb. 1898.

It looks at first as if the ship was insured with cement. The sentence should be worded: “The ship, with a cargo of cement, was insured,” etc.

280. Bad Arrangement of Words.—The rules for the order of words, phrases, and clauses, with examples of their violation, have been given already in Chapters xv. and xvii. A few more examples may be given here, in illustration of the subject of obscurity :—

- (1) It contained a warrant for conducting me and my retinue to Traldragdubb or Trildrogdrib, for it is pronounced both ways, as near as I can remember, by a party of ten horse.—SWIFT.

The phrase by a party of ten horse must be construed with the gerund “conducting,” and should therefore be placed after the word “retinue.”

- (2) I perceived it had been scoured with half an eye.—Guardian, No. 10.

The phrase with half an eye must be construed with the verb “perceived.” The sentence should therefore be arranged as follows: “With half an eye I perceived it had been scoured”; or “I perceived with half an eye that,” etc.

- (3) The young man did not want natural talents; but the father of him was a coxcomb, who affected being a fine gentleman so unmercifully, that he could not endure in his sight, or the frequent mention of one who was his son, growing into manhood and thrusting him out of the gay world.—Spectator, No. 496, T.

The confused construction, together with the vile application of the word “unmercifully,” is such that this sentence might with equal justice be ranked under solecism, impropriety, or obscurity (Campbell).

281. Using the same Word in different Senses.—The same word should not be repeated in the same sentence, unless it is used in the same sense and in the same part of speech:—

- (1) Any reasons of doubt, which he may have in this case, would have been reasons of doubt in the case of other men, who may give more, but cannot give more evident, signs of thought than their fellow-creatures.—BOLINGBROKE, Essay 1, Sect. 9.

Here the first “more” is the Comparative degree of “many.” It should be changed to “more numerous,” to match the phrase “more evident”; or “more evident” might be changed to “clearer.”

- (2) One may have an air (demeanour) which proceeds from a just sufficiency and knowledge of the matter before him, which may naturally produce some motions of his head and body, which might become the bench better than the bar.—Guardian, No. 13.

Here which is repeated three times, each time with a different antecedent. This is tantamount to using the same word in three different senses in the same sentence.

- (3) They were persons of such moderate intellects, even before they were impaired by their passions.

The first they refers to “persons,” and the second to “intellects.” Their refers back again to “persons.”

282. Uncertain Reference of Pronouns.—Pronouns must not be used in such a way as to cause any doubt about what noun they stand for:—

(1) Such were the centaurs of Ixion's race,
Who a bright cloud for Juno did embrace.—DENHAM.

What is the antecedent to who?

(2) There are other examples of the same kind, which cannot be brought without the utmost horror, because it is supposed impiously, against principles as self-evident as any of those necessary truths, which are such of all knowledge, that the Supreme Being commands by one law what He forbids by another.—BOLINGBROKE.

What word does such here stand for?

(3) When a man considers the state of his own mind, he will find that the best defence against vice is preserving the worthiest part of his own spirit pure from any great offence against it.—Guardian, No. 19.

What does it (the last word in the sentence) refer to?

Note 1.—There is no uncertainty of reference, if the pronoun relates to a principal word, such as the subject of a verb or the object to one:—

But I shall leave this subject to your management, and question not but you will throw it into such light as shall at once, etc.—Spectator, No. 628.

Here it relates to “subject,” and not to the nearer word “management,” for two reasons—(1) because “subject” is a chief word, while “management” is a subsidiary one; (2) because the rhythm of the sentence requires that the verb “throw” shall have the same object as the verb “leave.”

Note 2.—If there is no other way of avoiding ambiguity, it is better to repeat the noun, as in the following example:—

The lad cannot leave his father: for if he should leave his father, his father would die.—Gen. xliv. 22.

283. Words changed without Change of Meaning.—

When words are changed, not to alter the sense, but merely to save a repetition of the same sound, they must not be set against each other antithetically, as if they were intended to be understood in different senses:—

Scarlet rhododendrons 60 feet in height are surrounded by trees 200 feet in elevation.<sup>1</sup>

Here height and elevation, though apparently balanced against each other by way of anthithesis or contrast, are intended to mean exactly the same thing. Instead of 200 feet in elevation we could say that reach to a height of 200 feet.

SECTION 3.—THE DOUBLE MEANING.

284. Equivocal Words and Phrases.—Our language abounds, as most other languages do, in equivocal words; and there is no harm in using them, so long as the sense is clear from the context. Thus, if some one says that "he rents his house at fifty pounds a year," no one would suppose that he means pounds in troy-weight or pounds in avoirdupois. Sometimes, however, the context fails to give the requisite clue, or gives it so imperfectly, that the reader is forced to read the sentence twice and reflect a little upon its contents, before he can be quite sure that he has understood it. Whenever an author's style exacts such reflection from his reader, he has committed an offence against perspicuity.

<sup>1</sup> Bain's Rhetoric and Composition, p. 247.

There is no part of speech which, if used incautiously, is not susceptible of a double meaning :—

(a) Prepositions :—

(1) I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life . . . shall be able to separate us from the love of God.—Romans viii. 38.

Does this mean God's love to us, or our love to God ?

(2) A little after the reformation of Luther.—SWIFT.

The natural meaning of the words "reformation of Luther" occurs to the mind much more readily than the intended by meaning, "reformation by Luther."

(3) If I cannot be commended for the beauty of my style, I hope I may be pardoned for its brevity.

Here the preposition "for" is used in two different senses: the first "for" means "on account of," while the second "for" means "in consideration of." What the author intended to express (but the meaning is not as obvious as it should have been) is, that the brevity of his style may be taken as a set-off to its want of beauty.

(b) Conjunctions :—

(1) They were both much more ancient among the Persians than Zoroaster or Zerdusht.

Or is here equivocal. The mention of both suggests that the writer names two distinct persons by Zoroaster or Zerdusht, by way of balance. It is not every reader who would know that or is here used to denote an alternative spelling of the same name. All ambiguity can be removed by inserting the parenthesis "(as he is also called)" after or. On other means of avoiding the ambiguity of or, see § 274 (57).

(2) I did not sing yesterday as I wished.

Owing to the ambiguity of as, this sentence may give opposite senses: either "I did sing yesterday, but not in the manner that I wished," or "I did not sing yesterday, though I wished to have done so."

(3) And seeing dreams are caused by the distemper of the inward parts of the body, etc.

It requires something of an effort to find out that seeing here is equivalent to seeing that or since,—a conjunction, not a participle.

(c) Pronouns :—

She united the great body of the people in her and their common interest.

Is her here Objective or Possessive? The sense would have been clear at a glance, if the author had said “in their and her common interest.”

(d) Nouns :—

(1) Your Majesty has lost all hopes of any future excises by their consumption.—Guardian, No. 52.

“Consumption” might be either Active or Passive. The sense appears to be “all hopes of levying any future excises on what they shall consume.” But this is anything but obvious.

(2) A man who has lost his eyesight has in one sense less consciousness.

The words italicised might mean either “in one organ of sense” (eye-sight) or “in one respect.” Which is it?

(e) Verbs :—

I have long since learned to like nothing but what you do.—Spectator, No. 627.

Is do here a pro-verb (§ 103) to save the repetition of like, or is it a notional verb (§ 88, Note) signifying “perform”?

(f) Adjectives :—

He has a certain claim to a share in that property.

Does certain here mean “undoubted,” or is it merely an Indefinite Demonstrative adjective? (see § 54).

(g) Phrases :—

Your character of universal guardian, joined to the concern you ought to have for the cause of virtue and religion, assure<sup>1</sup> me that you will not think that clergymen, when injured, have the least right to your protection.—Guardian, No. 80.

He aimed at nothing less than the crown.

I will have mercy, and not sacrifice.—Matt. ix. 13.

He writes as well as you. (The sense is ambiguous, because as well as may be either Co-ordinative or Sub-ordinative; § 170.)

Much conversation was going on about me.

The counsel for the defence spoke before the judge.

Fish can scarcely be got now at any rate.

I grieve much for his loss.

There seems to be no limit to the scolding of the housekeeper.

285. Ambiguous Construction.—Such ambiguities arise, not from the equivocal character of a word or a phrase, but from the careless arrangement or careless omission of words :—

(1) Solomon, the son of David, who built the temple of Jerusalem, was the richest monarch that ever reigned over the Israelites.

<sup>1</sup> Observe that here the grammar is wrong.

Is "Solomon" the antecedent to who, or is "David"? According to the rule given in § 244 the antecedent should be "David," but the writer means "Solomon."

- (2) I know that all words which are signs of complex ideas furnish matter of mistake and cavil.—BOLINGBROKE.

Is which here used in a Restrictive or in merely a Continuative sense? If the former, "all words" should be changed to "all those words," or that should be substituted for which (see § 83).

- (3) God heapeth favours on His servants ever liberal and faithful.

Do the adjectives liberal and faithful refer to God or to His servants? If to the former, say, "God, ever liberal and faithful, heapeth," etc.

- (4) The ecclesiastical and secular powers concurred in that measure. The high and mighty states of Holland are against us.

The second sentence is quite correct, because the same "states" are both "high and mighty." But are we to understand that the epithets "ecclesiastical and secular" relate to the same powers or to different powers? The careless omission of the before "secular" would compel us, if we did not happen to know better, to understand the phrase in the former sense. This is an instance of "impropriety" leading to a misunderstanding of the sense; see § 274 (22).

- (5) And thus the son the fervent sire addressed.

POPE'S Odyssey, Book xix.

Did the son address the father, or the father the son? We prefer to consider "son" the subject to the verb, because it stands first. The sense, however, would have been much clearer if the poet had said "his fervent sire" instead of "the fervent sire."

- (6) At least my own private letters leave room for a politician, well versed in matters of this nature, to suspect as much, as a penetrating friend of mine tells me.—Spectator, No. 43.

Here, except for the comma after much, the ambiguity of the sentence as it stands would be insoluble. All doubt would have been removed, if the author had observed the Rule of Proximity given in § 257. The sentence would then run as follows: "At least my own private letters, as a penetrating friend of mine tells me, leave room," etc.

- (7) I beseech you, sir, to inform these fellows, that they have not the spleen, because they cannot talk without the help of a glass, or convey their meaning to each other without the interposition of clouds.—Spectator, No. 53.

Is because intended to qualify the verb "beseech," or the verb "inform," or the verb "have," or the negative verb "have not"?

- (8) He has by some strange magic arrived at the value of half a plumb, as the citizens call a hundred thousand pounds.—Tatler, No. 40.

Does this mean that a hundred thousand pounds was denoted by a plumb, or by half a plumb?

Exercise.

Rewrite the following sentences, so as to make each of them more perspicuous than it is in its present form; or if more than one meaning is possible, express each meaning more distinctly. If no ambiguity exists, give your reason for thinking so:—

1. Providence, my son, has given you strength of body and cleverness of mind; but instead of this you waste your time in frivolity and idleness.

2. The workmen decided to come to terms with their employers, but to ask for the same wages as before, and accept as much less as they possibly could.

3. Allahabad, one of the principal cities in Northern India, is situated between the junction of the Jumna and the Ganges.

4. I prefer doing this to that.

5. Looking at his own warm overcoat, he could not help wishing that he could cover the poor, whom he saw shivering around him, with the same.

6. The farmstead was always the wooden white-painted house, of which the small country towns are composed.

7. A river adds much beauty to natural scenery; but a mountain is the thing that carries grandeur in its idea.

8. I doubt the application of the German military system to England.

9. Lisias promised his father never to abandon his friends.

10. A box-tree was planted between each plane-tree.

11. The insincerity of Charles I. was suspected by his people, and with good reason.

12. Both sides confidently predicted victory for their candidate, and up to the time when the last vote was recorded, it was difficult to decide whether victory lay with Conservatives or Liberals.—Daily Telegraph, 13th Jan. 1898.

13. This prevents their attending enough to what is in the Bible, and makes them battle for what is not in the Bible, but they have put it there.—M. ARNOLD.

14. Had I but served my God with half the zeal
I served my king, he would not in mine age
Have left me naked to mine enemies.—SHAKESPEARE.

15. Young Itylus, his parent's darling joy,
Whom chance misled the mother to destroy.

POPE'S Odyssey, Book xix.

16. I will spend a hundred or two pounds rather than be enslaved.—SWIFT.

17. My Christian and surname begin and end with the same letters.—Spectator, No. 505.

18. It has not a word but what the author religiously thinks in it.—Guardian, No. 4.

19. Mr. Dryden makes a very handsome observation on Ovid's writing a letter from Dido to Æneas, in the following words.—Spectator, No. 62.

20. As it is necessary to have the head clear as well as the complexion, to be perfect in this part of learning, I rarely mingle with the men, but frequent the tea-tables of the ladies.—Guardian, No. 10.

21. All orders not issued by the managing director must not be attended to.

22. The history of Natal during the past year has been, except for agricultural depression caused by rinderpest and locusts, the happy history of a colony which has none.—Times Weekly, 7th Jan. 1898.

23. To a barbarous and inhuman wit there cannot be a greater gratification than to stir up sorrow in the heart of a private person by secret charges, at the same time that he remains unseen and undiscovered.—Spectator, No. 23.

24. I must confess that we live in an age, wherein a few empty blusterers carry away the praise of speaking, while a crowd of fellows overstocked with knowledge are run down by them; I say overstocked, because they certainly are so as to their service to mankind, if from their very store they raise to themselves ideas of respect and greatness of the occasion, and I know not what, to disable themselves from explaining their thoughts.—Spectator, No. 484.

25. The German Mercantile Marine has, since 1871, more than trebled its capabilities; and since 1880 has more than doubled them.—Daily Telegraph, 27th Jan. 1898, p. 9.

26. The more faulty we consider the protective system to which Germany, in common with all the other Great Powers of Europe except Great Britain and the United States of America, adheres, the more surprising is the progress recorded.—Daily Telegraph, 27th Jan. 1898, p. 8.

27. Mr. B—— has issued invitations for a full-dress parliamentary dinner, and Lord ——, his colleague, has issued invitations for a full-dress banquet.

28. No one has now any idea of how the Powers will deal with the question of the evacuation of Thessaly, as it is certain that the Porte will not quietly abandon the only fertile province of Greece, if the selection of Prince George of Greece (for the governorship of Crete) is forced upon him.—Daily Telegraph, 28th Jan. 1898.

29. It is out of the question that Germany and Austria will join in measures of force against Turkey.—Daily Telegraph, 2nd Feb. 1898.

30. His (Hudson's) fall was like the crash of a cliff. He who had been slapping noble lords on the back and the king of his Company, was left a wreck on the shore, and deserted by all who had battered on him.—Fortnightly Review, Feb. 1898, p. 247.

31. In view of recent changes, and especially since the war between China and Japan, it seemed desirable that Germany should have a seaport there for safeguarding her interests.—Speech from Berlin, 9th Feb. 1898.

32. The hopes of parents are blighted, if their children are indolent, and the money spent on them is wasted.

33. He is a great admirer of the artist who painted that picture and lives in Brompton.

34. We have just heard that the two boys leave school at the end of next week, and hope that they will not return to the same school again.

35. Geddes is now one of the bright points of the world which lies in darkness, to which my spirit will often turn for light.—N. MACLEOD.

36. There is probably no one of this generation who bestows any thought upon the problems of history and politics, who will not acknowledge his indebtedness to Mr. Carlyle.—Times, 18th Nov. 1870.

37. They forget to consult, and, as far as they are not vicious, conform to the tastes, feelings, habits of those whose happiness they would promote, and think only of their own.—W. J. Fox.

38. Lord Chelmsford is put on his trial for an alleged mistake in the disposition of troops in war, and why not a police officer who has placed a young man's life in peril, and who but for public energy would have been executed?—W. E. STUTTER.

39. Sir Merton Peto spoke of the notion that the national debt might be repudiated with absolute contempt.—Spectator, 18th Nov. 1855.

40. Seldom has there been any great revolt of unskilled labour which attracted so much attention throughout the world, and which was fought out under circumstances of such constant peril of violence, which was brought to a close with so clean a sheet.—Review of Reviews, Feb. 1898, p. 127.

41. Antony was not less desirous of destroying the conspirators than his officers.

42. The amount which we annually devote to increasing our navy is, roughly speaking, identical with that expended by France, Russia, and Germany.—Daily Telegraph, 22nd April 1898.

43. The political demands of the party in power in Madrid have made it necessary for the political life of that party to resist in every form every attempt upon the part of the Cubans to secure their liberties, and to resist all attempts of other countries to assert them.—Fortnightly Review, June 1898, p. 858.

44. Fresh attempts should be made to give shelter to a harbour by laying out not a few large, but a large number of small, floating breakwaters.—Geograph. Journal, May 1898.

45. By a narrow majority the Australian Federal Convention has reversed its decision making it compulsory for the Federation to take over the debts of the individual states.—Daily Telegraph, 3rd Mar. 1898.

46. It was part of the work of Alfred the Great to create little by little the love of country in place of the old love of tribe. He might, like the King of Mercia, have fled to Rome and religious life; in fact, he fought them for nine long years, growing every year weaker.—Times Weekly, 25th Feb. 1898.

47. The trial resulted in the binding over of the two boys who were charged with the stealing and the acquittal of the man who was charged with receiving.—Daily Telegraph, 8th August 1898.

CHAPTER XXI.—SIMPLICITY OR EASE OF DICTION.

286. Simplicity described.—Simplicity of diction means the use of plain and easy words in preference to uncommon, affected, or difficult ones. The following description of the merits of simplicity is worth quoting:—

It is by means of familiar words that style takes hold of the reader and gets possession of him. It is by means of these that great thoughts get currency and pass for true metal, like gold and silver which have had a recognised stamp put upon them. They beget confidence in the man who, in order to make his thoughts more clearly perceived, uses them; for people feel that such an employment of the language of common life betokens a man who knows that life and its concerns, and who keeps himself in contact with them. Besides, these words make a style frank and easy. They show that an author has long made the thought or the feeling expressed his mental food; that he has so assimilated them and familiarised them, that the most common expressions suffice him in order to express ideas which have become every-day ideas to him by the length of time they have been in his mind. And lastly, what one says in such words looks more true; for of all the words in use none are so clear as those which we call common words, and clearness is so eminently one of the characteristics of truth, that often it even passes for truth itself.—JOUBERT, quoted in Arnold's "Essays on Criticism."

An affected loftiness of style, i.e. a style the opposite to simple, has been called "euphuism" from a book named Euphues by Lyly (A.D. 1579).

287. Long Words and Periphrases.—Fine writing to express ordinary facts is a vulgarism,—the mark of an ill-informed mind, that seeks to hide its emptiness under big words and phrases, like the drum in the fable, that gave a booming sound, but was found on inspection to be hollow within. Nothing is gained by saying in all human probability for "most likely" or "most probably"; lunar effulgence for "moonlight"; the tender passion or the amorous affection for "love"; pharmaceutical chemist for "apothecary"; caudal appendage for "tail"; the nasal organ for "nose"; skilful agriculturist for "good farmer" or "good husbandman"; partake of lunch for "take lunch" or "lunch" (verb); inebriate or dipsomaniac for "drunkard"; minatory expressions for "threats"; ruminating for "chewing the cud"; location for "site"; ton-sorial artist for "barber" or "hair-cutter"; expression for "word"; adumbrate for "foreshadow"; to donate for "to present" or "give"; culinary department for "kitchen"; maternal relative for "mother"; the lower extremities for "legs" or "feet"; potables for "drinkables"; arcana for "secrets"; pedagogue for "teacher"; impeccable for "faultless"; germane for "relevant" or "allied"; infructuous for "fruitless," "barren of results"; apologue for "fable"; the sacred edifice for "the church"; the sacred day of hebdomadal rest for "Sunday"; animadversion for "blame" or "censure"; vituperation for "abuse"; exacerbate for "embitter"; multitudinous for "manifold"; incarnadine for "dye red"; evangel for "gospel"; contumacy for "obstinacy"; exemplar for "model"; cleptomaniac for "thief"; eventuate for "come to pass"; circumambient air for "surrounding air"; dis-embogues its waters for "empties its waters"; metamorphosis for "change"; precipitate for "throw down," etc.

288. Hackneyed allusions and quotations.—It is better to give persons and things their plain names than to express them by allusions or quotations, which are hackneyed, pointless, and irrelevant. A writer adds nothing either to the clearness of his sentences, or (if this be his object) to his reputation for learning, by saying the father of history for "Herodotus"; the blind old bard for "Homer"; the sublime author of "Paradise Lost" for "Milton"; the swan of Avon for "Shakspeare"; the Stagirite for "Aristotle"; the father of ecclesiastical history for "Eusebius"; the first Christian emperor for "Constantine the Great"; the apostle of the circumcision for "St. Peter"; the great lexicographer for "Johnson"; the bard of Mantua for "Virgil"; the queen of the night or the crescent satellite of the earth for "the moon"; the glorious lamp of day for "the sun"; the fragrant weed for "tobacco"; the cup that cheers but not inebriates for "tea"; more honoured in the breach than the observance for "better avoided"; the seven-hilled city or the eternal city for "Rome"; the modern Babylon for "London"; the land of Prester John for "Abyssinia"; Caledonia stern and wild for "Scotland"; few and far between for "rare"; plods his weary way for "plods"; the green-eyed monster for "jealousy"; durance vile for "imprisonment"; the altar of Hymen for "marriage"; training the young idea to shoot for "teaching"; the gentle art of Izaak Walton for "angling" or "fishing"; a disciple of Bacchus for "drunkard," etc.

Campbell's fine lines on Poland lose some of their effect through his calling Poland by the far-fetched and little-known ancient name of "Sarmatia":—

O bloodiest picture in the book of Time!
Sarmatia fell unwept, without a crime.

Pleasures of Hope.

289. Simple facts to be told in simple terms.—A narrative loses much of its effect, if it is not told in words that express the natural feelings of the writer. Dr. Johnson, in the course of his tour to the Hebrides, expressed himself as follows in a letter to a friend :—

When we were taken upstairs, a dirty fellow bounced out of the bed on which one of us was to lie.

But in the "Journal" that he prepared for the press, the same incident is dished up for the public in the pompous terms quoted below :—

Out of one of the couches on which we were to repose there started up at our entrance a man as black as a Cyclops from the forge.

The same writer, when asked for his opinion on the comedy called the Rehearsal, said without any restraint or premeditation :

It has not wit enough to keep it sweet.

Then, correcting himself, he added in more formal, but less effective, terms :

It has not vitality enough to preserve it from putrefaction.

290. Simplicity marred by a clash of negatives.—When two or more negatives come together in the same sentence, we cannot easily catch their combined effect. "No men are immortal" is not so easily grasped as its more simple equivalent "All men are mortal."<sup>1</sup>

(1) There can be no doubt that nothing will be done.

Write :—It is certain that nothing will be done.

(2) I doubt whether the reverse be not the case.

Write :—I scarcely think so, or I doubt it.

(3) If we cannot recall at pleasure a single idea, we are not less unable to recall a whole train of ideas.

Write :—If we cannot recall a single idea, we are equally or more at a loss to recall a whole train of ideas.

(4) The loss of blood destroys strength.

This is less easily taken in by the mind than the more positive form—"Blood is the source of strength."

(5) Do not do to others what you would not wish them to do to you.—CONFUCIUS.

This is less direct than, "Do unto others as you would be done by."

291. Simplicity sometimes unsuitable.—A simple and direct statement is sometimes avoided for the sake of euphemism. Thus Cicero, to avoid saying that Milo's servants killed Clodius, employs the following periphrasis :—

They did that which every master would have wished his servants to do in such an emergency.—Pro Milone.

---

<sup>1</sup> Bain's Rhetoric and Composition, Part I. p. 256.

Sometimes a periphrasis is used in preference to a single word, because it suits the argument or sustains the gravity of the subject better than a single word or a short sentence could do:—

(1) Shall not the judge of all the earth do right?

Here "the judge of all the earth" is a circumlocution for God; and the context is well served by using it.

(2) The very source and fount of day
Is dashed with wandering isles of night.—TENNYSON.

A roundabout, but impressive, way of saying that even the sun has spots.

Simplify the following sentences. If no simplicity is required in any case, give your reason:—

1. He breathed his last in indigent circumstances.
2. At ten P.M. the fatal noose was adjusted to the criminal's neck, and he was launched into eternity.
3. A vast concourse of people collected to witness the event.
4. Votes were taken by members exhibiting their hands above the heads of dissentients.
5. The rider was precipitated from his horse, but he met with no serious injury.
6. Your meaning does not come within my comprehension.
7. They called into immediate requisition the services of the physician who was accustomed to attend the family.
8. "I am under the impression," said Mr. Micawber, "that your peregrinations in this metropolis have not as yet been extensive, and that you might have some difficulty in penetrating the arcana of the Modern Babylon in the direction of the City Road,—in short," said Mr. Micawber, in another burst of confidence, "that you might lose yourself.—I shall be happy to call this evening, and install you in the knowledge of the nearest way."—DICKENS.
9. The contest of boats terminated in a victory to our crew.
10. I enjoy a post-prandial nap in a chair made for ease of posture.
11. An unwise man, if he is possessed of means, soon parts company with them.
12. Clouds of passion which might obfuscate the intellects of meaner females.—SCOTT.
13. She was tripping it on the light fantastic toe most of last night.
14. The actual cost of the barrages at Assouan and Assirt (in Egypt) will be £2,000,000.—Daily Telegraph, 24th Feb. 1898.
15. Sarah Bernhardt is recuperating from the operation she underwent a week ago.—Ibid. 25th Feb. 1898.
16. Nature seemed to tremble under the fierce rays of the incandescent luminary.—Mariam, p. 2.
17. During the month the hebdomedal figures of the fatalities directly due to this undoubted scourge (influenza) have been 43, then 40, followed by 73, and now 88.—Daily Telegraph, 2nd Feb. 1898.

18. What I was proposing to do was to facilitate the granting of municipalities to communities that are deserving of that honour. But it is no way germane to such proceedings that I should strike off that County Council which was the object of legislation ten years ago.—LORD SALISBURY, 3rd Feb. 1898.

19. Mr. Wheeler introduced an old friend, and brought up the apologue of the body and its members.—LORD SALISBURY, 3rd Feb. 1898.

20. This happy consummation was adumbrated last night at a social gathering of the London Spiritualist Alliance.—Daily Telegraph, 8th Feb. 1898.

21. He has vanished with the order of things in which he existed: his lamp cannot be relumed.—Fortnightly Review, Feb. 1898, p. 259.

22. The railway officials did not like to turn the station into an abattoir.—Daily Telegraph, 8th Feb. 1898.

23. We learn without immoderate surprise that there is reason to apprehend the breakdown of the negotiations for a Chinese loan.—Times Weekly, 11th Feb. 1898.

24. The sartorial art is quite as difficult as the culinary.

25. Experienced members of the feathered tribe are not entrapped with husks of corn.

26. In Queensland the Labour party has antagonised even the more advanced portions of the community.—Review of Reviews, Jan. 1898, p. 86.

27. The ballot-box is no longer the panacea which it appeared in the eyes of the multitude only twenty years ago.—Review of Reviews, Jan. 1898, p. 6.

28. This is not a time for twiddling our thumbs over the banalities of worn-out factions.—Review of Reviews, Jan. 1898, p. 7.

29. Having lately conversed much with the fair sex on the subject of your speculations (which since their appearance in public have been the chief exercise of the female loquacious faculty), I found the fair ones possessed with a dissatisfaction at your prefixing Greek mottoes to the frontispiece of your late papers.—STEELE, Spectator, No. 296.

30. All the ill offices and defamatory whispers, which take their birth from domestics, would be prevented, if this charity could be made universal: it would create endearing dependencies; and the obligation would have a paternal air in the master, who would be relieved from much care and anxiety from the gratitude and diligence of an humble friend attending him as his servant.—STEELE, Spectator, No. 294.

31. His incessant vigilance for the promotion of piety disposed him to look with distrust upon all metaphysical systems of theology and all schemes of virtue and happiness purely rational; and therefore it was not long before he was persuaded that the positions of Pope, as they terminated for the most part in natural religion, were intended to draw mankind away from revelation, and to represent the whole course of things as a necessary concatenation of indissoluble fatality; and it is undeniable that in many passages a religious eye may easily discover expressions not very favourable to morals or to liberty.—JOHNSON'S Life of Pope.

32. The peruser of Swift wants little previous knowledge: it will be sufficient that he is acquainted with common words and common things; he has neither to mount elevations nor to explore profundities.—JOHNSON'S Life of Swift.

CHAPTER XXII.—BREVITY OR TERSENESS OF DICTION.

292. Brevity.—It has been shown in § 252 that occasions may arise, in which repetition adds force to a sentence. As a general rule, however, brevity gives as much force to a sentence as diffuseness takes from it. A word that does no good does harm. "If a thought can be expressed in five words, there is a waste of strength in employing ten" (Bain). Attention given to superfluous words represents a loss of attention that might have been given to the matter.

China must go forwards or go to pieces.

This short sentence is more pointed than the following, and it contains as much :—

China must bring herself up to date and adopt the methods and appliances of modern science, or submit to seeing her territory divided among the different nations of Europe.

293. I. The Choice of Words.—The most obvious, and yet the most difficult, mode of attaining brevity is to choose such words as express the greatest amount of meaning in the smallest space. This is the language of proverbs. The best known quotations from distinguished authors are usually those that say the most in the fewest words :—

Thou knowest that Joab shed the blood of war in peace.—1 Kings ii. 5.

The virtuous woman eateth not the bread of idleness.—Prov. xxxi. 27.

Man is the only animal that blushes, or that needs to blush.—
MARK TWAIN.

Nor love thy life, nor hate; but what thou livest

Live well; how long or short permit to Heaven.—Par. Lost.

The power of fortune is confessed by the miserable; the happy ascribe all their success to merit.—SWIFT.

The desire of the slothful man killeth him; for his hands refuse to labour.—Proverbs xxi. 25.

The progress of civilisation has been from status to contract.—
MAINE.

The slothful hideth his hand in his bosom; it grieveth him to bring it again to his mouth.—Proverbs xxvi. 15.

There are several safeguards against temptation, but the surest is cowardice.—MARK TWAIN.

I am too proud to be vain.—SWIFT.

A grief too deep for tears.—SHELLEY.

Ring out the feud of rich and poor.—TENNYSON.

(The short phrase "the feud of rich and poor" covers the ground of two of the great social-questions of the day—the conflicts of labour and capital, the jealousies of class-feeling.)

294. II. Grammatical Devices.—In the examples given below, the words enclosed in brackets show the longer form, in which the sentence may be supposed to have been expressed prior to condensation:—

(1) Using Abstract nouns for clauses:—

The boldness of Gama's manner (= Gama's manner was so bold that it) alarmed the King of Calicut, and made him submit to the Portuguese demands.

Mr. Casaubon's words had been quite reasonable; yet they had given her a vague, instantaneous sense of aloofness on his part (= that his thoughts and pursuits were not in sympathy with her own).—GEORGE ELIOT.

(2) Condensing two sentences into one by means of apposition:—

Vasco de Gama, the celebrated Portuguese admiral (= was a celebrated Portuguese admiral, and) was the first to round the Cape of Good Hope.

He put all his prisoners to death—a cruel and barbarous act (= which was a cruel, etc.).

(3) Condensing two Co-ordinate sentences into one by using a participle or by omitting one of the verbs:—

Caesar, having now completed the conquest of Gaul, determined (= had now completed the conquest of Gaul, and so he determined) to invade Britain.

Hannibal led his forces over the Alps into the plains (= and entered the plains) of Italy.

(4) Placing a noun before another noun or before an adjective, to avoid a periphrasis:—

Eye-service (= service done when there is some one to see it, but not otherwise).

Penny-wise and pound-foolish (= saving a slight expense, to incur a much heavier one in the long run).

Hat-box (a box for carrying a hat).

(5) Using an adjective to express what would otherwise have to be expressed by a phrase or clause:—

Colonial Office (the office in which the affairs of the Colonies are administered).

The Liberal policy (the policy of the Liberal party).

Physical science (the science that treats of physics).

The evidence of language is irrefragable (=so conclusive that nothing can shake it).—MAX MÜLLER.

(6) Substituting a participle for a Subordinate clause:—

Pursued (=because he was pursued) on all sides, he was forced to surrender at last.

Slow rises worth by poverty depressed.—POPE.

(When it is depressed by poverty.)

The shepherd, having counted (=after he had counted) the sheep, left the field.

(7) Stating a fact by implication, instead of stating it explicitly and at full length:—

The spread of England's power to new continents is largely due to the adventurous spirit of her people.

This is shorter than saying:—

The people of England are of an adventurous spirit, and this is one of the chief causes that have led to the spread of her power to new continents.

(8) Giving a noun the form of a participle to avoid using a phrase:—

Landed aristocracy (owning large estates of land).

A gifted man (a man of unusual gifts or ability).

A strong-minded woman (a woman of unusual courage).

A one-eyed horse (a horse with only one eye).

(9) Forming Compound words (see further details in Chap. xxiv.):—

Geography is a mind-expanding subject (=a subject that expands the mind).

Red-hot (=so hot as to become red in colour).

(10) The use of prefixes and suffixes:—

His conduct was un-man-ly (=unworthy of a man).

His conduct was woman-ish (=worthy of a woman, but not worthy of a man).

He is a dull-ard (more than usually dull).

An ex-judge (a man who was once a judge).

An examin-ee (a person undergoing examination).

Absentee-ism (the habit of not living on one's estate).

Christen-dom (the aggregate of nations professing the Christian faith).

Critic-aster (an unworthy and incompetent critic).—SWINBURNE.

Grievance-monger (one who makes a habit of complaining about some grievance).

To beauti-fy (to make beautiful). To dark-en (to make dark).

295. Offences against Brevity.—The four chief offences against brevity are—(1) tautology, (2) pleonasm or redundancy, (3) verbosity, and (4) prolixity.

(1) Tautology.—This consists in employing superfluous words in the same grammatical relation.<sup>1</sup> In the following examples the superfluous words are those enclosed in brackets :—

In the Attic commonwealth it was the privilege (and birthright) of every citizen (and poet) to rail (aloud and) in public.—SWIFT.

Integrity hath many advantages over dissimulation (and deceit) : it is much the (plainer and) easier, much the safer (and more secure) way of dealing in the world ; it has less of trouble (and difficulty), of entanglement (and perplexity), of danger (and hazard) in it ; it is the shortest (and nearest) way to our end (carrying us thither in a straight line), and will hold out (and last) longest.—TILLOTSON.

Note.—Cases may arise, however, in which tautology is useful. Its usefulness as an aid to impressiveness has been shown already in § 252. It may also be an aid to perspicuity, when the full meaning cannot be expressed by a single word, as in the three following examples :—

(1) The tribes and castes of India.—SHERRING.

Neither of the italicised words expresses all that is wanted ; for there are tribes which are not strictly castes, and castes which are not strictly tribes. The two words are not quite synonymous. It is therefore necessary to mention both.

(2) Oh happiness ! our being's end and aim !
Good, pleasure, ease, content, whate'er thy name.—POPE.

Different shades of meaning are expressed in end and aim ; also in good, pleasure, ease, content.

(3) As science makes progress in any subject-matter, poetry recedes from it.—NEWMAN.

The word subject is used in such a variety of senses that the word matter has been tacked on to it to prevent what in certain connections would be an ambiguity.

(2) Redundancy or Pleonasm.—This consists in employing superfluous words that are not in the same grammatical relation. Wherever it is possible, the superfluous words in the following examples are shown in brackets :—

He had the (entire) monopoly of the whole trade.

He (voluntarily) offered to stand security.

I must decline (to accept) your offer.

The judge ordered that the property be restored (again) to its rightful owners.

He has made a (new) discovery.

Charles V. of Spain and Francis I. of France (mutually) encouraged each other to extirpate the heretics.

I went home full of (a great many) serious reflections.—Guardian, No. 34.

<sup>1</sup> This definition of Tautology has been adopted from Bain's Rhetoric and Composition, and some of the examples under this head have been selected from the same source.

If he happens to have any leisure (upon his hands).—Spectator, No. 43.

The everlasting club treats all other clubs with (an eye of) contempt.—Spectator, No. 73.

Flavia, who is the mamma, has all the charms and desires of youth still (about her).—Spectator, No. 206.

Let them throw as much (foul) dirt at me as they please.—Craftsman, No. 232.

Let observation with extensive view

Survey mankind from China to Peru.—JOHNSON.

How many are there, by whom these tidings of good news were never heard?—BOLINGBROKE.

The dawn is overcast; (the morning lowers;
And heavily in clouds brings in the day.)—ADDISON.

In the late Franco-German war it is difficult to say who were the (first) aggressors.

Over-expression is not only a loss to energy, but by leading to wrong suggestion, may become a bar to perspicuity:—

A square is a four-sided figure having all its sides equal (and parallel) and all its angles right angles.

The words and parallel must not be added; for they might suggest that the sides of a right-angled figure could be equal without being parallel.

(3) Verbosity.—This consists in using a multiplicity of words, by the weight of which the sentiment, far from being strengthened, is like David in Saul's armour, encumbered and oppressed:—

For seeing those things which are equal must needs have all one measure, if I cannot but wish to receive all good, even as much at every man's hand as any man can wish unto his own soul, how should I look to have any part of my desire herein satisfied, unless myself be careful to satisfy the like desire which is in other men?—HOOKER.

This is a very languid and clumsy way of saying:

I cannot expect to have my own desires satisfied, if I pay no need to those of other men.

Or we might quote the terse couplet of Pope:—

His safety must his liberty restrain:
All join to guard what each desires to gain.

(4) Prolixity.—A tedious style clogged with twaddling details, amongst which it is not easy to catch the main point at a glance, is said to be prolix,—a fault quite distinct from wordiness or verbosity. In prolixity it is not redundancy of words that harasses the reader, but the enumeration of unnecessary facts:—

(1) On hearing this news he got off his chair, went out of the room, took down his hat, brushed it, put on his greatcoat, went round to the stable, saddled his horse, mounted, and, after giving a few directions to the cook, rode off into the town.

A prolix way of saying :—

On hearing this news he rode off at once into the town.

- (2) Last year a paper was brought here from England called a dialogue between the Archbishop of Canterbury and Mr. Higgins, which we ordered to be burnt by the common hangman, as it well deserved, though we have no more to do with His Grace of Canterbury than you have with the Archbishop of Dublin, whom you tamely suffer to be abused openly and by name by that paltry scoundrel of an observator; and lately upon an affair wherein he had no concern, I mean the business of the missionary of Drogheda, wherein our excellent prelate was engaged and did nothing but according to law and discretion.—SWIFT.

What can we make of such a sentence as this? A number of paltry details strung together in any order without any point or purpose.

296. Short Sentence between two Long Ones.—It is often expedient to wedge a short and pithy sentence in between two long ones, especially if these are in antithesis to each other. In such a case the little word but is hardly sufficient to express the transition from one bulky sentence to another :—

Without force or opposition, chivalry subdued the fierceness of pride and power; it obliged sovereigns to submit to the soft collar of social esteem, compelled stern authority to submit to elegance, and gave a dominating vanquisher of laws to be subdued by manners. But now all this is to be changed. All the pleasing illusions which made power gentle and obedience liberal, which harmonised the different shades of life, and which by a bland assimilation incorporated into politics the sentiments that beautify and soften private society, are to be dissolved by this new conquering empire of light and reason. All the decent drapery of life is to be rudely torn off. All the superannuated ideas furnished from the wardrobe of a moral imagination, which the heart owns and the understanding ratifies, as necessary to cover the defects of our naked shivering nature and to raise it to dignity in our own estimation, are to be exploded as a ridiculous, absurd, and antiquated fashion.—BURKE.

297. Over-brevity.—“I labour to be brief,” said Horace, “and become obscure.” Perspicuity should be the first consideration, and this must not be sacrificed to brevity :—

Lady Ellesmere. Without translating, gentlemen must not talk Latin, nor smoke, nor swear, in the presence of ladies.

Ellesmere. She thinks now she has been very epigrammatic. The men may swear, if they translate it? The commonest form of muddlement in sentences is occasioned by the endeavour to be brief. You apply two or three nominatives to one verb, or two or three verbs to one nominative, which do not agree together, if you look at them separately. What she did mean was,—that in the presence of ladies men must not smoke without permission, must not swear at all, and must not quote Latin without translating it.—HELPS'S Realmah.

298. Condensation.—In condensing a sentence, take care that the shortened sentence expresses precisely the same point as the original :—

I have been told that, if a man that was born blind could obtain to have his sight for but only one hour, during his whole life, and should, at the first opening of his eyes, fix his sight upon the sun when it was in its full glory, either at the rising or setting of it, he would be so transported and amazed, and so admire the glory of it, that he would not willingly turn his eyes from that first ravishing object, to behold all the other various beauties this world could present to him.<sup>1</sup>—IZAAC WALTON.

This has been abridged as follows :—

It is said that, if a man born blind could obtain his sight for but one hour, the glory of the sunset or the sunrise, should he happen to behold it, would entrance him beyond all the other beauties of the world.

This abridgment, however, appears to miss the point. It implies that, after comparing the glory of the sunset or the sunrise with the other beautiful objects of the world, he would be more entranced by the sunset or sunrise than by anything else ; whereas Izaak Walton's meaning seems to be that he would not take the trouble even to look at anything else. We should therefore condense the passage in the following way :—

I have been told that, if a man born blind could obtain his sight for but one hour, and should happen to fix his first gaze upon the rising or the setting sun, he would be so transported by the brilliancy of that one spectacle, that he would have no curiosity to see any of the other beauties that this world could present to him.

Exercises.

I. Eliminate any superfluous words that you may find in the following ; if you find nothing superfluous, give your reason :—

1. He instituted a strict investigation and inquiry into the circumstances attending the bankruptcy of that insolvent firm.

2. Less time is required for this business, but more must be given to that.

---

<sup>1</sup> Bain's Rhetoric and Composition, p. 39. The abridged version which we have quoted, and which we do not consider an equivalent, is by the same author. Izaak Walton, it may be here noted, should have inserted the before the word "setting" ; see § 274 (57).

3. The meeting gave one unanimous vote in favour of re-electing him as their chairman.

4. It was the universal opinion of all who saw him that he looked none the worse after his prolonged and obstinate attack of fever.

5. The literature of England should be studied in chronological order, beginning with the most ancient books and coming down gradually to the most recent.

6. Lampons and satires, that are written with wit and spirit, are like poisoned darts, which not only inflict a wound, but make it incurable.—Spectator, No. 23.

7. This week is in a manner set apart and dedicated to serious thoughts.—Spectator, No. 23.

8. The immediate reason which led Louis XIV. to convoke the Assembly of 1682, was in order to strengthen his hands in the contest he was carrying on with Pope Innocent XI.

9. The highest actual bid for your horse was £15, but I did not let it go at that price, which I considered much too low.

10. Without a logical head a critic is perpetually puzzled and perplexed amidst his own blunders, mistakes the sense of those he would confute, or, if he chances to think right, does not know how to convey his thoughts to another with clearness and perspicuity.—Spectator, No. 291.

11. Payment of a dividend for the past half-year, at the rate of 20 per cent per annum, making 20 per cent for the year, is recommended by the directors of the Machinery Trust, Limited.—Daily Telegraph, 29th Jan. 1898.

12. There cannot be a greater gratification to a barbarous and inhuman wit, than to expose whole families to derision, while the traducer remains unseen and undiscovered.—Spectator, No. 23.

13. The matter being thus reduced within clearly-defined limits, and prepared for business-like discussion, it was submitted to the deliberations of a committee of Imperial and Colonial delegates.—Times Weekly, 21st Jan. 1898, p. 34.

14. It was her firm belief that to the coldness, the independence, and the want of the adoring faculty generally in women, were due the sole causes of matrimonial disagreement.—MRS. LYNN LINTON.

15. I am persuaded that if we go further we shall fare worse, and the longer we go on, the more heavily we shall suffer.—SIR JOHN LUBBOCK.

16. I trust the session of 1898 will not pass without something being done to place our West-Indian Colonies in a position and condition which shall ensure for them the best possible industrial prosperity.—Fortnightly Review, Feb. 1898, p. 320.

17. These responsibilities, these obligations, these duties can be adequately, effectively, and economically fulfilled on the lines that I have indicated.—Fortnightly Review, Feb. 1898, p. 320.

18. Never did Atticus succeed better in gaining the universal love and esteem of all men.—Spectator, No. 467.

19. A quite unique compliment was paid to the navy.—Daily Telegraph, 14th Feb. 1898.

II. Condense the following sentences, or correct over-brevity, if you find any :—

1. In defiance of all this, they make their selection in favour of the deplorable cheerlessness and dreariness of their own apartment to the airy, spacious, well-warmed wards of a hospital.—AYTOUN.

2. To talk to a man of moral corruption to elevate himself by contemplating the abstract conception of holiness, is somewhat a similar absurdity as to ask a man born blind to admire the beauty of colour.—Contemporary Review, July 1869, p. 404.

3. The truth of it is, there is nothing in history which is so improving to the reader as those accounts which we meet with of the deaths of eminent persons, and of their behaviour in that dreadful season.—Spectator, No. 289.

4. Whatever it can be clearly seen that parents ought to do or forbear for the interests of children, the law is warranted, if it is able, in compelling to be done or forborne, and is generally bound to do so.—J. S. MILL.

5. The results of administrative economy in the eastern colonies (of Australia) have made themselves felt with satisfactory effect.—Times Weekly, 7th Jan. 1898.

6. These orders being illegal, they are generally communicated verbally.—J. S. MILL.

7. During our stay in town one young man had his cheek cut open; another his under-lip nearly taken off; a third his scalp cut in two; and a fourth the tip of his nose so thoroughly excised that the end of his nasal organ lay upon the ground.—HENRY MAYHEW.

8. In all human probability England will maintain her present commercial supremacy over other nations, if a greater degree of attention is paid than heretofore to the demands of technical education.

9. The avenue to commercial prosperity between England and China has always passed through the treaty ports.

10. There was a Parliamentary surrender at discretion to stop further inquiry and save the plotters, big and little, from condign and most deserved punishment.—Recollections of O'Connell.

11. At the Royal Academy there is what we may call a full measure of pictures—a measure pressed down and overflowing; at the New Gallery a rather meagre “special selection” of Rossettis, upon what principle made it is difficult to say.—Fortnightly Review, Feb. 1898, p. 189.

12. The greater number of the works produced by the Pre-Raphaelite brotherhood were not strongly medieval in feeling.—Fortnightly Review, Feb. 1898, p. 194.

13. A severe and tyrannical exercise of power must become a matter of necessary policy with kings, when their subjects are imbued with such principles as justify and authorise rebellion.

14. Proposals having for their object to secure increased strength and efficiency in the army, and for amending the present conditions of military service, will be submitted to you.—Queen's Speech, 8th Feb. 1898.

15. The guinea places were better filled than the half-guinea, and not a jot better.

16. De —— had a painful complaint, which, sometimes keeping him awake, made him sleep perhaps, when it did come, the deeper.—DE QUINCEY.

17. It is a remarkable fact, that though probably there were more writers of Provençal poetry during these two centuries than there ever were in a similar period in any other land, they have not left a single masterpiece: they have vanished and made no sign.—R. S. WATSON.

18. In another column there appears an article discussing the influence conflict between the United States and Spain would have on British commerce.—Daily Telegraph, 18th April 1898.

19. We have now to think as we never before had of keeping old customers and attracting new.—Times Weekly, 25th Feb. 1898.

20. In the great railway, which is being constructed not so much in the interests of trade as in civilisation, he sees nothing but foolish expenditure.—Report of Mr. Curzon's Speech in "Times Weekly," 4th March 1898.

CHAPTER XXIII.—ELEGANCE OF DICTION.

299. What is required by Elegance.—Elegance or beauty of diction requires two things—(1) “that all homely and coarse words or phrases shall be avoided, even at the expense of brevity; (2) that in respect of the sound of sentences there shall be a smooth and easy flow of words” (Whately).<sup>1</sup>

300. Refinement of Diction.—Elegance in the first sense, i.e. the avoidance of coarse words and phrases, is secured—(a) sometimes by circumlocution (§ 373); (b) sometimes by using a less common word, which, though it expresses the same thing, appears to express it in a less offensive form, because it is less common; (c) sometimes by the decent obscurity of a foreign word or phrase, as in example (2):—

(1) An uglier phrase was now coming on the stage; I mean what is now the national oath of England.

(2) Ejfluvia, a Latin Plural noun, used to avoid the word “stinks.”

301. Smoothness of Diction: Euphony.—This kind of elegance is generally called euphony,—that quality of style which pleases the ear. The writer himself must have a good ear, if he wishes to know what will please the ear of his readers. A few hints, however, are herewith offered for guidance:—

(1) Avoid ending a sentence with a short and pointless word:—

The walls of the fortress, battered with guns from the ships and artillery from the shore for a space of eight hours, fell.
(Write, “came down with a crash.”)

(2) Avoid using two constructions, when it is possible to use one:—

<sup>1</sup> Whately's Rhetoric, Part III. chap. iii. p. 213.

They suspected that he had been bribed and given an unjust sentence. (Here there is an abrupt and misleading transition from the Passive voice to the Active. Write : "They suspected that he had received a bribe and given an unjust sentence.")

(3) Avoid using the same form of participle more than once in the same clause or phrase :—

Yesterday the vestry of St. George, Hanover Square, decided to seal the memorial to be presented to the Duke of Devonshire, praying for the introduction of a bill in the next session of Parliament providing for the creation of metropolitan municipalities.—Daily Telegraph, 21st Jan. 1898. (Write, "which should provide for the creation.")

(4) Avoid using the same word twice in a different connection :—

To enable us to make the necessary arrangements, it is necessary for us to hear not later than noon on Friday, 21st current.—Daily Telegraph, 20th Jan. 1898. (Write "requisite" for the first "necessary.")

(5) Avoid using the same word twice in different senses :—

He means to take advice as to the best means of testing the fact. (Write "method" or "mode" for the second "means," or "intends" for the first one.)

We (the writer) will now explain how we (men in general) are led into making such a mistake.

(6) Avoid using words of nearly the same sound within a short interval, unless the play upon words is intentional :—

The action for libel brought by Miss —, a nurse, against Mr. —, in respect of a letter the latter had written to a relative, terminated in favour of the defendant.—Daily Telegraph, 27th Jan. 1898. (Write "which he" for "the latter.")

If all local authorities affected acted in the same manner, ratepayers might receive some benefit from unity.—Daily Telegraph, 8th Feb. 1898. (Write "concerned" for "affected.")

(7) Avoid mixing Present participles too freely with Verbal nouns, as the frequent repetition of -ing not only has a bad sound, but may lead to some confusion in the mind of the reader :—

The Epistle to the Hebrews, bearing in its title a special form of address, is yet universal in its drift, as designing to convince all mankind of the necessity of seeking for happiness in a future life and avoiding all things leading men to sin. (Write : "The epistle to the Hebrews, though it bears in its title a special form of address, is yet universal in its drift, as its aim is to convince all mankind of the necessity of seeking for happiness in a future life and avoiding everything that may lead men to sin.")

(8) Avoid using a string of Relatives in the same sentence :—

The doctrine in question only appears a paradox, because it has usually been so expressed as apparently to contradict these well-known facts ; which, however, were equally well known to the authors of the doctrine, who therefore could only have adopted from inadvertence any form of expression which could to a candid person appear inconsistent with it.—J. S. MILL. (Write “the said facts” for the first “which.”)

Few, indeed, are those who still linger among us who took an active part in the great movement of 1848.—Review of Reviews, April 1898, p. 343.

(9) Avoid using adverbs close together for qualifying different words, if they can be separated without loss of idiom :—

In fact, those who study such matters closely, already, I think, perceive the tentative beginnings, etc.—Fortnightly Review, Feb. 1898, p. 261. (Write, “perceive already, I think.”)

(10) Avoid using verbs in different tenses without necessity :—

The lion roared to a false note, and then rates the jackals for yelping in unison.—Daily Telegraph, 5th Feb. 1898.

(11) Adverbs or adverbial phrases that qualify the same word should be separated by some intervening word, if the construction admits of it :—

He, at four o'clock p.m., in spite of his contract, obstinately and with some acrimony declared that he would not work another hour. (Write : “At four o'clock p.m. he, in spite of his contract, declared obstinately and with some acrimony that he would not work another hour.”)

(12) Avoid awkward constructions to which the ear is not accustomed :—

Flying visits to settlements of Finns, Poles, Bohemians, and Russians, located along the Northern Pacific, disclosed them to have attained a degree of Americanisation, etc.—Harper's Magazine, Feb. 1898. (Write, “disclosed the fact that these foreign settlers had attained,” etc.)

302. Play upon Words.—Euphony as well as point is sometimes produced by repeating the same words in a different meaning or in a different relation :—

Evil (=evil consequences) be to him that evil thinks (=imputes misconduct).

Bad (=unlucky) accidents happen to bad (=unskilful) players.

The right (noun) divine of kings to govern wrong (adj.).—POPE.

These are all practical and practicable measures.—Fortnightly Review, Feb. 1898, p. 317.

If the ministers had comprehended as much as they apprehended, they would have saved the nation a good deal of money.—Pulteney's Speech.

I comprehend that gentleman, though I do not apprehend him.—

Walpole's Reply.

When our vices leave us, we flatter ourselves that we have left our vices.—French Proverb.

When reason is against a man, he will be against reason.—Proverb.
He who never changes his mind has no mind to change.—Ibid.

Playing upon words, if this adds nothing either to force or clearness, produces not euphony, but a jingle. The following lines in Paradise Lost have been condemned by a distinguished critic :<sup>1</sup>—

And brought into the world a world of woe.
This tempted our attempt and wrought our fall.
At one slight bound high overleapt all bound.

Exercise.

Improve the euphony of the following sentences :—

1. This brings me to the question—the most important of all—of the final aims of British policy in the Far East.—Fortnightly Review, Feb. 1898, p. 329.

2. So it is that I must be forced to get home partly by stealth and partly by force.—SWIFT.

3. I look upon it as my duty, so far as good health enabled me and as long as I keep within the bounds of truth, of duty, and of decency, to do, etc.—SWIFT.

4. Buildings should not be put up unless in conformity with the bye-laws, unless we wish to encourage the jerry-builder.—Middlesex County Times, 23rd July 1898.

5. Two great sins, one of omission and the other of commission, were committed by him.

6. Far and wide the plain of the Vardu softened by a delicate blue haze, and in the extreme distance a thread of silver light—the Gulf of Salonica—stretches.

7. That Pre-Raphaelism was not, any more than any other, the school in which the doctrine of art for art's sake was being forced upon its students, may be conceded.—Fortnightly Review, Feb. 1898, p. 196.

8. Of the western provinces which obeyed the Cæsars, Britain was the last that was conquered, while they (the Cæsars) gave it away before any other province.

9. Wit should be used as a shield for defence, rather than as a sword to wound others.

10. Knowledge in one of its senses is synonymous with sensation.

11. If the profession of anything is good for anything, practice is better.

12. It is a remarkable fact that some of the most remarkable men in ancient times combined warlike pursuits with political ambition.

13. The blessings of fortune are the lowest; the next are the bodily advantages of strength and health; but the superlative blessings, in fine, are those of the mind.

<sup>1</sup> Addison takes exception to such "jingle" in Spectator, No. 297.

14. A. came here daily; every other man came every other day.

15. Innumerable failures occur every day in the numerous careers of life.

16. As one peruses the accounts, as they are issued, the outlook seems to be very serious.

17. We should cease persisting in trying to put a quart into a pint pot.—Review of Reviews.

18. Your not having hitherto paid the tithe, should such be the case, and the fact that the sum you are now called upon to pay does not rateably correspond with any previous payment made by you, cannot be raised as an objection.—Tithe-collector's Notice.

19. The friendless state that he was in, and that he wished to die, made every one pity him.

20. Accident having opened a new and most congenial career to him, and having become a great favourite of, and of much use to, Mr. Nash, he ultimately accompanied his patron to London.—C. J. MATHEWS.

21. Perhaps we might venture to add, that it is hardly explicable, except as a portrait drawn by a skilful hand guided by love, and by love intensified by the consciousness of some impassable barrier.—LESLIE STEPHEN.

22. We believe the freedom and happiness of a people are not the result of their political institutions, but that their political institutions are, in a great degree, the result of their own temper and aspiration.—PARNELL.

23. I have a book printed at Antwerp, and which was once possessed by Adam Smith.

24. Burns is a handy man with his fists, and maintains, after long experience, that he would prefer to rely on the clenched hand to defend himself in a mêlée to any weapon yet invented.—Review of Reviews, Feb. 1898, p. 129.

25. Mr. J. H. C. said that there had been innumerable instances of bribery in the Guardians' Boards, leading to their supersession by the Government by paid guardians.—Daily Telegraph, 28th Apr. 1898.

26. It is the men who have bridged the ocean with the steamship, who have tunnelled the mountains and severed the isthmus, who have made the empire.—Ibid. p. 130.

27. Notwithstanding his illness, and that he had lost nearly all his money, he still kept the business going, hoping for better times.

28. Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria, who since the murder of M. Stambuloff, from which time the relations between Austria and Bulgaria changed considerably for the worse, has not appeared at the Vienna Court, was received in a long audience to-day at noon by the Emperor.—Daily Telegraph, 8th March 1898.

29. The first suggestion I would make is that usurers all over the country, who trade under false names and pretend to be banks, and issue circulars and prospectuses which are false and fraudulent, and who use these names for the purpose of securing contracts with borrowers in order to defraud them by a system of usury, should be dealt with.—Evidence of Sir G. Lewis, 11th March 1898.

30. The first thing the usurers do is to see who are the relatives of the young borrower. In the S. C. case we had a man whose bills were discounted because a nobleman took them to them.—Ibid.

31. Our ministers cannot understand that England is sick of the parish pump and sickest of all of the Manchester school.—Review of Reviews, April 1898, p. 354.

32. The Americans are perhaps sincere in saying that the United States are not contemplating seizing Cuba in order to annex it.—Times Weekly, 6th May 1898, p. 276.

33. In 1874, though not then prepared to advocate the disestablishment of the Scotch Church, though he admitted an established church in a minority is an anomaly, he yet strenuously opposed when the Church Patronage Scotland Bill was before Parliament to invest this Church with powers never before entrusted to an ecclesiastical body.—Middlesex County Times, 4th June 1898.

34. The step was only decided upon at the very last moment; indeed, for reasons upon which it is unnecessary to dwell, it had appeared but a few hours previously utterly and absolutely impossible that it could be taken before to-day at the earliest.—Daily Telegraph, 16th June 1898, p. 7.

35. With a ministry without any authority any sudden course of action may be looked for.—Daily Telegraph, 23rd June 1898, p. 9.

36. When a person has attracted to himself by an elevated moral bond several other persons, when he dies, it always happens that the survivors, often divided up to that time by rivalries, beget a strong friendship the one for the other.—Translation from RENAN'S "Apostles."

37. This army is incapable because of sickness of marching anywhere except to the transports.—Telegram quoted in "Daily Telegraph," 8th August 1898.

38. The rest of the evening was devoted to voting away the nation's money, etc.—Standard, 9th August 1898.

39. The Carlists possessed an army of their own, now disbanded, but many of whose officers would expect to be reinstated in their former positions.—Fortnightly Review, 1st August 1898.

40. He discourses more or less discursively upon the various changes, etc.—Review of Reviews, August 1898, p. 165.

41. If there is one thing that strikes one more than another, it is His Majesty's ardent desire for peace.—Times, 31st August 1898.

PART III.—ENLARGEMENT OF VOCABULARY: FIGURES OF SPEECH.

CHAPTER XXIV.—ENLARGEMENT BY COMPOSITION.

303. Sources of Enlargement.—Besides the borrowing of foreign words (which in English make up about two-thirds of the vocabulary), there are at least eight home-sources from which the vocabulary has been or can yet be enlarged :—

(1) Provincial or local words becoming national : (rather rare). A few examples are given below :—

Pony, gruesome, canny, feckless, force (waterfall), glint, gloaming, (all from Scotland). Fun (a slang word in Dr. Johnson's time). Tory (an Irish word for "bog-trotter," first used in a political sense in 1679). Whig (short for "whiggamor," a Scotch word for "driver"; first used in a political sense in 1679).

(2) Proper names acquiring a general sense : (not uncommon). Older examples are numerous ; as milliner (a man of Milan) ; lumber-room (a room where the Lombard brokers stowed away their pledges). The following examples are recent :—

A gladstone bag. To lynch (from an American judge named Lynch). A davy-lamp (from the inventor). To boycott (from a Captain Boycott, so treated in Ireland). To bowdlerise (to expurgate ; from Bowdler's expurgated edition of Shakspeare). A hansom cab (from the inventor).

(3) Revival of obsolete words : (rare) :—

Love-some (Tennyson). Burgeon (Scott). Holts (the wooded tops of hills—Tennyson). Sough (the whistling of wind through trees). Over-lord (suzerain—Freeman). Worsen (to make worse—Southey, Gladstone). Aloofness (George Eliot).

(4) Doublets : words derived from the same original elements, but possessing different forms, to each of which there is a different meaning. In our vocabulary we have at least four hundred and thirty words which have one or more different forms with differentiated meanings :—

Wile, guile. Antic, antique. Chance, cadence. Aptitude, attitude. Prune, plum. Bank, bench. Gabble, jabber. Brown, bruin. Etiquette, ticket.

(5) Compound words : described in the present chapter.

(6) The use of prefixes and suffixes ; see Chapter xxv.

(7) The use of metaphors }
 (8) The use of metonymy } see Chapter xxvi.

304. Compounds.—When two or more words are joined together, the word so formed is called a Compound ; as ink-pot, drinking-water, cod-liver-oil.

Compound words are subdivided into—

I. Unrelated, or those in which the Simple words are not connected together by any grammatical relation. (These have been also called Juxta-positional.)

II. Related, or those in which there is some grammatical relation between the component words. (These have been also called Syntactical.)

SECTION 1.—UNRELATED OR JUXTA-POSITIONAL COMPOUNDS.

305. In all compounds of this class the word that stands first defines the one that stands second :—

Thus “horse-race” means that kind of race which is run by horses, and not by boats or by men or by anything else. But “race-horse” means that kind of horse which is used for racing, and not for ordinary riding, or for drawing a carriage.

In a triple compound, as “cod-liver-oil,” the same rule holds good : here cod qualifies liver, and cod-liver qualifies oil.

306. Compound Nouns can be formed as follows :—

(1) A noun preceded by another noun :—

Oil-lamp, lamp-oil ; ear-ring, ring-finger ; rail-way, way-side.

(2) A noun preceded by a Gerund :—

Cooking-stove, looking-glass, drinking-water, bathing-place.

Note.—The -ing is not always used ; as in wash-house, not washing-house ; grind-stone, not grinding-stone, etc.

(3) A noun preceded by an adverb :—

By-word, by-path, under-tone, under-wood, up-land, in-land.

307. Compound Adjectives can be formed as follows :—

(1) An adjective preceded by a noun, denoting—

(a) Some point of resemblance :—

Snow-white (= white like snow), blood-red, coal-black, sky-blue.

(b) Some point of reference :—

Air-tight (=tight against air), fire-proof, head-strong, heart-broken, book-learned, top-heavy, colour-blind, blood-thirsty.

(c) The cause or source of the quality :—

Home-sick (=sick for home), purse-proud, heaven-born.

(d) The extent or measure of the quality :—

Skin-deep (=deep as the skin), world-wide, breast-high, life-long.

(2) A noun (with suffix -ed) preceded by a noun :—

Chicken-hearted, hook-nosed, ox-tailed, web-footed, cow-houghed.

(3) An adjective or participle preceded by an adjective :—

Red-hot, dark-brown, bright-blue, dead-alive, luke-warm.

308. Compound Verbs can be formed as follows :—

(1) A verb preceded by a noun :—

Hen-peck, brow-beat, top-dress, back-bite, hood-wink, way-lay.

(2) A verb preceded by an adjective :—

Safe-guard, rough-hew, white-wash, rough-shoe, dumb-founder.

SECTION 2.—RELATED OR SYNTACTICAL COMPOUNDS.

309. Compound Nouns can be formed as follows :—

(1) A verb Transitive followed by its Object :—

A tell-tale (one who tells tales), a cut-throat, a pick-pocket.

(2) A verb Transitive (with suffix -er or -ing) preceded by its Object :—

Shoe-maker, tax-payer ; engine-driving, house-building, etc.

Note.—The “er” and the “ing” are not always used, as in tooth-pick, not tooth-picker ; blood-shed, not blood-shedding.

(3) A verb qualified by an adverb :—

(a) When the adverb precedes the verb :—

An out-turn, an out-look, an out-fit, an up-start, an in-let.

(b) When the adverb is placed after the verb :—

A run-away, a cast-away, a break-down, a break-up, a fare-well.

Note.—Some compounds of this class have two forms : set-off or off-set ; turn-out or out-turn ; look-out or out-look.

(4) A noun qualified by an adjective :—

A noble-man, a half-penny, a mad-man, a sweet-heart, mid-day.

(5) A noun qualified by a participle :—

(a) Present Participle :—

Humming-bird, loving-kindness, spinning-top, finishing-stroke.

Note.—the “ing” is not always used ; as in screech-owl, not screeching-owl ; glow-worm, not glowing-worm.

(b) A verb with the force of a Past or Passive participle :—
Hump-back = humped-back ; lock-jaw = locked-jaw.

(6) A noun qualified by a Possessive noun :—

Sales-man (for sale's-man), bats-man, oars-man, Tuesday, kins-man, herds-man, crafts-man, bees-wax, states-man, sports-man.

Note 1.—In some compounds the apostrophe is retained before the s :—stone's-throw, king's-bench, cat's-paw, heart's-ease, land's-end. The noun spokes-man has been formed by a false analogy.

Note 2.—The following compounds, since the first noun is not Possessive, are of the Unrelated or Juxta-positional class :—boat-man, sea-man, oil-man, wood-man, cart-man, plough-man, etc.

(7) A noun in apposition with a noun or pronoun :—

Washer-woman ; he-goat, she-goat ; man-servant, maid-servant.

310. Compound Adjectives can be formed as follows :—

(1) A noun preceded and qualified by an adjective :—

Evil-hearted, hot-headed, long-tailed, one-sided, red-coloured.

(2) A noun as object to the Pres. part. of a Trans. verb :—

A heart-rending sight ; a time-serving man ; a soul-stirring story.

(3) A noun as object to some preposition :—

An over-land (over the land) journey ; an underhand trick.

311. Verbs can be compounded with adverbs :—

(a) When the adverb precedes the verb : (uncommon) :—

Back-slide, cross-question, over-awe, under-state, with-hold.

(b) When the verb precedes the adverb. This is very common.

The two words are written separately ; as turn out, come on, etc. (But in don (= do on), doff (= do off) they are compounded.)

312. Phrase Compounds.—Such compounds are sometimes used as nouns, and sometimes as adjectives :—

Forget-me-not (noun) ; hand-and-glove (friends that fit each other as closely as hand and glove) ; man-of-war ; would-be (adj. used for one who intended to be or do something, but was stopped) ; barrister-at-law ; note-of-hand ; ticket-of-leave ; Jack-o'-lantern ; hole-and-corner (adj. clandestine) ; son-in-law ; four-in-hand ; spic-and-span new (lit. spike and spoon new ; new as a nail or spike just made, or a spoon (chip) just cut).

313. Spelling of Compounds.—In words of two or more syllables the accent is usually thrown back on the first syllable, and in many cases this has the effect of altering the spelling :—

Bon-fire from bone-fire. Hus-band from house-band (lit. house-dweller). Hus-sif or hus-sy from house-wife. Nos-tril from nose-thril. Star-board from steer-board. Tad-pole from toad-poll. Fort-night from four-teen-night. Vin-yard from vine-yard. Fur-long from furrow-long. Sus-sex from South-sex, etc.

In some words, however, the change of sound produced in this first syllable by the accent is not accompanied by any change in the spelling:—

Black-guard. Cup-board. Break-fast. Two-pence, three-pence, four-pence, five-pence. Row-lock (sounded as rullock).

CHAPTER XXV.—ENLARGEMENT BY PREFIXES AND SUFFIXES.

314. Prefixes, Suffixes, Affixes.—A prefix (Lat. præ, “before”) is a particle placed at the beginning of a stem; a suffix (Lat. sub, “after”) is a particle placed at the end of one. The name “affix” (Lat. ad, added to either side) may be given to either. (Some writers use “affix” for “suffix.” It is more convenient, however, to have a word like “affix,” which with etymological propriety can stand for either “suffix” or “prefix.”)

Prefixes alter the meanings of words, while suffixes alter their functions.

There is a radical difference of meaning between teach and unteach; bid and for-bid; con-vert and sub-vert; pro-ceed, pre-cede, suc-ceed, ac-cede, se-cede, con-cede, ex-ceed, inter-cede, and re-cede.

On the other hand, suffixes form nouns, adjectives, verbs, and adverbs, and hence they change the function of a word, that is, they make it of one part of speech or another. Thus the stem dark becomes a noun in dark-ness, a verb in dark-en, and an adverb in dark-ly and dark-ly.

315. Sources of Affixes.—The sources from which our affixes have come are three in number:—

- I. Teutonic (which consists of Anglo-Saxon forms, together with a few Norse, Frisian, and Dutch ones).
- II. Romanic (which includes Latin, French, and Italian).
- III. Greek (partly direct, partly through French or Latin).

Our Teutonic affixes have been sometimes called “English.” The name “Teutonic,” however, appears to be preferable for two reasons. (a) If by “English” we are to understand Anglo-Saxon, some of our Teutonic affixes are not of English origin; for instance the -kin of “firkin” and the -scape of “landscape” are Dutch; the un- of “unto” is Frisian; the -sk of “bask” and “busk” is Norse, having been imported by the Danes. (b) All affixes, which have become naturalised in our language, whatever their origin may have been, are now entitled to be called “English.” Our vocabulary abounds in hybrids; that is,

Teutonic stems with Romanic or Greek affixes, and vice versa. "Cottager," for example, is made up of three elements: (1) the Norse word cot (still in common use) furnishes the stem; (2) the first suffix -age is Romanic, having come to us from Latin through French; (3) the second suffix -er might be either from Anglo-Saxon ere, an agent or doer, or from Latin -arius, French -aire, -ier, or -er, which also denotes agent or person. The suffix -ery in "fish-ery" is itself a hybrid, made up of the Teutonic -er, as in "fish-er," and the Romanic y, as in "famil-y," "stud-y."

SECTION I.—TEUTONIC PREFIXES.

316. A- (on, in): a-bed, a-shore, a-sleep, a-way, a-stir, a-float.

A- (off, up, from): a-rise, a-wake, a-fresh, a-light, a-rouse, a-new.

Intensive:—a-muse, a-weary, a-shamed, a(c)-cursed, a(c)-knowledge.

After-: after-wards, after-witted, after-thought.

Al- (all): al-one, l-one, al-most, al-so, al-ready, al-together.

At- (to): at-one, at-onement, a-do (for at-do).

Be- (by): (1) It forms Transitive verbs out of nouns or adjectives: be-calm, be-dew, be-friend, be-fit, be-numb, be-guile, be-fool, be-night.

(2) It forms Transitive verbs out of Intransitive: be-moan, be-speak.

(3) It gives an intensive force to verbs: be-daub, be-smear, be-seech, be-get, be-stir, be-sprinkle, be-stow, be-take, be-deck.

(4) It forms a part of some nouns, adverbs, and prepositions: be-half, be-quest, be-low, be-neath, be-sides, b-ut, be-fore, be-tween (twain).

Note.—In the word "be-head" the "be" has a privative sense.

By- (on the side): by-path, by-word, by-stander, by-election.

For- (thoroughness): for-bear, for-lorn.

For- (privative or depreciatory): for-swear, for-get, for-bid, for-sake.

Fore- (before): fore-cast, fore-tell, fore-see, fore-head, fore-lock, fore-thought, fore-runner, fore-stall, fore-man, fore-ground, fore-leg.

Forth-: forth-coming, forth-with.

Fro- (from): fro-ward (opp. to to-ward).

Gain- (against): gain-say (speak or say against).

In-: in-to, in-sight, in-land, in-let, in-mate, in-come.

Mis- (wrongly): mis-deed, mis-lead, mis-take, mis-judge, mis-lay.

N- (negative): n-one, n-either, n-ever, n-or, n-illy willy.

Off- (of or off): off-ing, off-spring, of-fal, off-shoot.

On-: on-set, on-slaught.

Out-, ut-: out-cast, out-side, out-landish, out-look, out-come, out-let, out-break, out-post, out-house, out-cry; ut-ter, ut-most.

It makes Intransitive verbs Transitive: out-live (= live beyond), out-run (= run ahead of), out-shine (surpass in brightness), out-vote (= defeat by votes), out-weigh (= surpass in weight).

Over- (above, beyond): over-eat, over-flow, over-hear, over-coat, over-charge, over-step, over-awe, over-look, or-lop (for over-lop).

Thorough-, through-: thorough-fare, through-out, through-ticket.

To- (to, for): to-day, to-night, to-gether, to-ward, un-to-ward, to-morrow.

Twi- (double): twi-n, twi-ce, twi-light, twi-ne.

Un- (not): un-truth, un-real, un-wise, un-told, un-ripe.

Un- (back, reversal): un-bolt, un-tie, un-lock, un-twine, un-do.

Note.—In the word “un-loose,” the “un” is merely intensive.

Un- (up to): un-to, un-til.

Under: under-go, under-stand, under-hand, under-ling, under-neath, under-mine, under-sell, under-take.

Note.—This prefix also denotes deficiency, or too little: under-paid, under-fed, under-valued, etc.

Up-: up-right, up-ward, up-on, up-lands, up-hold, up-shot.

Well- (in good state): wel-fare, wel-come.

With- (against, back): with-draw, with-hold, with-stand.

Note.—In with-drawing room, the with has been dropped.

SECTION 2.—TEUTONIC SUFFIXES.

Nouns.

317. An Agent or Doer:—

-er, -ar, -or: bak-er, do-er, li-ar, tail-or, sail-or, cloth-i-er, court-i-er, law-y-er, saw-y-er.

-ster (fem.): spin-ster. It is not Feminine, but merely marks the agent in song-ster, malt-ster, trick-ster, young-ster, huck-ster.

-en (fem.): vix-en, formerly the feminine of “fox”; now denotes a cunning and spiteful woman.

-herd (keeper): shep-herd, swine-herd, cow-herd, neat-herd.

-man (person): wo-man, post-man, fish-er-man (double suffix).

-monger (dealer): ballad-monger, coster-monger, iron-monger.

-nd (old ending of present participle); fi-nd, frie-nd, erra-nd, wi-nd, husba-nd.

-ter, -ther, -der: daugh-ter, fa-ther, mo-ther, spi-der (spin-der), ru(d)-der (from row).

-wife (woman): fish-wife, mid-wife.

-wright (workman): ship-wright, wheel-wright, cart-wright.

318. Abstract Nouns, marking state, action, condition.

-craft: witch-craft, priest-craft, handi-craft.

-dom: wis-dom, king-dom, free-dom, martyr-dom, serf-dom.

-hood, -head: god-head; man-hood, child-hood, neighbour-hood, mother-hood, widow-hood.

-ing: learn-ing, writ-ing, walk-ing.

-ledge, -lock: know-ledge, wed-lock.

-ness: good-ness, holi-ness, wit-ness (from wis or wit).

-red: hat-red, kind-red.

-red (reckoning): hund-red.

-ric: bishop-ric. (This denotes jurisdiction.)

-ship, -scape: friend-ship, lord-ship, wor-ship; land-scape.

-ter: laugh-ter, slaugh-ter (from slay).

-th: heal-th, steal-th, bread-th, dep-th, wid-th, tru-th, leng-th.

-t or -d: heigh-t, sigh-t; dee-d (from do), cu-d (from chew).

319. Diminutives :—

-el, -l, -le : sack, satch-el ; corn, kern-el ; scythe, sick-le ; nave, nav-el ; spark, spark-le ; speck, speck-le ; freak, freck-le ; fow-l, hai-l.

Note.—In the following words these suffixes denote the means or result of some action :—shov-el (a thing to shove with), gird-le, spind-le from spin, shutt-le from shoot, hand-le, thimb-le from thumb, sadd-le from sit, sett-le from sit or set, bund-le from bind.

-en : chick-en (from cock), kitt-en (allied to cat), maid-en.

-ie, -y : bird-ie, lass-ie, bab-y, dadd-y, Will-ie, Aun-ie, mann-i-kin, lamb-i-kin. (Endearment.) The last two are double diminutives.

-ing : farth-ing, tith-ing, shill-ing, whit-ing, wild-ing.

-kin : lamb-kin, fir-kin, Peter-kin or Per-kin, nap-kin, bump-kin.

-ling : duck-ling, gos-ling, dar-ling, strip-ling, suck-ling, seed-ling.

-ock : hill-ock, bull-ock, padd-ock (from park), humm-ock (hump).

320. Miscellaneous :—

-en, -on (that which acts) : hav-en (have), mai-n (may), wag-on, wai-n (weigh).

-fare (going) : war-fare, thorough-fare, wel-fare, chaf-fer (cheap fare).

-lock, -lic (plant) : hem-lock, house-leek, gar-lic.

-stead (place) : home-stead, bed-stead, in-stead of, Hamp-stead.

-tree (sawn timber) : axle-tree, roof-tree.

321. Adjectives.

-ed (form of Past Part.) : wretch-ed, letter-ed, land-ed, gift-ed, ragg-ed.

-en (made of) : wood-en, braz-en, earth-en, silk-en, wax-en.

-en (Past Part.) : drunk-en, hew-n, op-en (that which is up).

-ern (direction to) : east-ern, north-ern, etc.

-fast (firm) : stead-fast, shame-fast (for shame-fast).

-fold (repeated) : two-fold, mani-fold, hundred-fold.

-ful (full of) : fear-ful, play-ful, hope-ful, wil-ful, truth-ful.

-ish (somewhat like) : girl-ish, whit-ish, self-ish, brut-ish, snobb-ish, wolf-ish, pal-ish, snapp-ish. (This suffix often implies contempt.)

-ish (nationality) : Engl-ish, Span-ish, Turk-ish, Fren-ch (Frank-ish).

-less (without) : shame-less, house-less, hope-less, cease-less, sleep-less, cause-less, resist-less, worth-less.

-like : god-like, war-like, lady-like, business-like.

-ly (like) : god-ly, love-ly, king-ly, sick-ly, kind-ly, friend-ly.

-most (superl.) : fore-most, in-most, ut-most, hind-most, etc.

-ow, -w : call-ow, fall-ow, mell-ow ; fe-w, ra-w, slo-w, tr-ue.

-some (full of, inclined to) : game-some, win-some, burden-some, trouble-some, hand-some, frolic-some, quarrel-some.

-teen, -ty (ten) : nine-teen, twen-ty, thir-teen, etc.

-th (order) : six-th, seven-th, etc.

-ther (comparative) : far-ther, fur-ther, whe-ther, o-ther.

-ward (turning to) : fro-ward, south-ward, down-ward, for-ward, way-ward, heaven-ward, home-ward.

-y (pertaining to, abounding in) : hill-y, storm-y, bush-y, rock-y, wooll-y, smok-y, wood-y, trust-y, feather-y.

322. Adverbs.

- ling, -long (-wise, manner): head-long, dark-ling, side-long.
 -ly (like): sad-ly, careful-ly, bad-ly, on-ly.
 -meal (division): piece-meal, inch-meal, limb-meal (Shaks.).
 -n: whe-n, the-n-ce, he-n-ce. (There are two suffixes in thence, hence. For the second one see -s, -ce below.)
 -om: seld-om, whil-om. (This was once a Dative case-ending.)
 -re: whe-re, the-re, he-re.
 -s, -ce: need-s, twi-ce, beside-s, el-se, on-ce (sign of Possessive).
 -ther: whi-ther, thi-ther, hi-ther.
 -ward, -wards (turning to): for-ward, up-wards, down-wards.
N.B.—The adv. is usually formed by “wards”; the adj. by “ward.”
 -way, -ways: al-ways, straight-way, any-way, no-way.
 -wise (manner, mode): other-wise, no-wise, like-wise.

*Verbs.*323. Frequentative (sometimes in augmentative sense):—

- er: ling-er from lough, flutt-er from flit, falt-er from fail, clamb-er from climb, shimm-er from shine, glitt-er from glint, sputt-er from spout, hank-er from hang, spatt-er from spot.
 -k: tal-k from tell (questioned by some), har-k from hear, stal-k.
 -le, -l: dibb-le, spark-le, start-le, knee-l, crack-le, shuff-le, cack-le, wrigg-le, pratt-le, dazz-le, draw-l, nibb-le, sniv-el (from sniff).
 -on, -om, -m: bloss-om from blow, glea-m from glow, sea-m from sew, reck-on, blaz-on.

324. Causative or Factitive:—

- en: fatt-en, short-en, length-en, gladd-en, black-en, thick-en.
 -se: clean-se, rin-se, glimps-se (Rare).
 -le: start-le (start), jost-le (joust), stif-le (stiff).

SECTION 3.—ROMANIC PREFIXES.

325. A-, ab-, abs- (away from): ab-hor, ab-use, ab-surd, ab-nor-mal, abs-tract, abs-ent, abs-cond, abs-tain; a-vert, a-void.

Ad- (to): By assimilation ac-, af-, ag-, al-, an-, ap-, ar-, as-, at-.

ad-vice, ad-join, ad-monish, ad-ore, ad-here, ad-opt.

ac-custom, ac-cept, ac-cede, ac-cuse, ac-quire.

af-flict, af-fix, af-fection, af-filiate, af-fable, af-firm.

ag-grieve, ag-gravate, ag-gregate, ag-gressor, ag-grandise.

al-lege, al-lot, al-lure, al-low, al-lay, al-leviate.

an-ounce, an-nex, an-noy, an-nul, an-nililate.

ap-proach, ap-pear, ap-point, ap-peal, ap-pease, ap-pal.

ar-rive, ar-rears, ar-rest, ar-rogant, ar-ray, ar-range.

a-spect, a-scribe, a-spire: (here the d has been lost).

as-sent, as-sert, as-sume, as-certain, as-sail, as-sets.

at-tend, at-tain, at-tract, at-tach, at-tempt, at-tack.

Ambi-, amb-, am- (around): ambi-dexterous, ambi-tion, am-putate.

Ante-, anti- (before): ante-chamber, ante-cedent, anti-cipate.

Bene- (well): bene-fit, bene-volent, bene-diction, hence ben-ison.

Bi-, bis-, bin-: bi-ped, bis-cuit, bi-sect, bi-ennial, bin-ocular.

Circum-, circu- (around): circum-ference, circu-it, circum-stance.

Com-, con-, co- (with): by assimilation, col, cor, cog, etc.

Com-pete, com-bat, com-merce, com-pact, com-mand, com-ply.

Con-tend, con-trive, con-flict, con-cur, con-fluence, con-sonant.

Co-alesce, co-heir, co-habit, co-eternal, co-exist, co-here.

Col-lapse, col-lege, col-lect, col-league, col-lision, col-lateral.

Cor-rupt, cor-rect, cor-rode, cor-respond, cor-roborate.

Cog-nate, cog-nizance, cog-nition.

Coun-sel, coun-cil, coun-tenance.

Contra-, contro-, counter- (against): contra-dict, counter-act, contra-st, contro-versy, counter-feit, counter-part, counter-sign.

De- (down): de-scend, de-grade, de-crease, de-jected (down-cast).

„ (reversal): de-camp, de-throne, de-tach, de-plete, de-odorise.

„ (astray): de-viate, de-lude, de-face.

„ (intensive): de-liver, de-clare, de-file, de-fend, de-fraud.

Note.—De (down) and ad (up) are sometimes contrasted:—de-preciate, ap-preciate; de-scend, a-scend; de-clivity, ac-clivity. Sometimes de is used in contrast with en or in:—de-throne, en-throne; de-camp, en-camp; de-cline, in-cline.

Dis-, di-, dif- (asunder, not): dis-honour, dis-please, dis-ease, dis-locate, dis-like: di-verse, di-gest, dif-fer, dif-ficult.

„ (reversal): dis-close, dis-mount, dis-arm, dis-appear, dis-continue, dis-enchanted, dis-illusion, dis-franchise.

„ (intensive): di-minish, di-rect, dis-annul, dis-sever.

Ex-, e-, ef- (out of, from): ex-alt, e-lect, ex-pel, ex-amine, c-ducate; ef-fort, ef-fulgence, ef-fervesce; ex-king, dethroned king.

Extra (beyond): extra-ordinary, extra-work, stra-nger.

In-, en-, em- (in, into, on): in-vert, in-vade, in-pose, im-press, im-pute, il-lusion, ir-ruption, ir-rigate, en-tice, em-ploy, em-brace, em-bark, em-barrass. In-close or en-close, in-dorse or en-dorse, in-quire or en-quire, in-trust or en-trust, in-twine or en-twine, in-circle or en-circle, in-bitter or em-bitter.

Note.—This prefix, placed before a noun or adjective, makes a Transitive verb:—en-dear, en-rich, en-large, en-slave, en-title, em-body, im-peril, en-danger.

In- (not): in-firm, in-fant (not speaking), ig-noble, il-legal, im-pious, ir-regular, ir-rational, ig-nominy, il-literate, im-passive.

Note.—The Latin “in” and the Teutonic “un” are so much alike, that some words are spelt both ways:—in-frequent or un-frequent, in-cautious or un-cautious, in-stable or un-stable.

Inter-, intro-, enter- (within): inter-course, inter-preter, inter-rupt, inter-pose, intro-duce, intro-spection, enter-tain, enter-prise, intel-lect.

Juxta- (near): juxta-position.

Male-, mal- (ill, badly): mal-factor; mal-treat, mal-ignant.

Mis- (from Lat. minus, less): mis-chief, mis-creant, mis-nomer.

Ne-, neg-: ne-farious, neg-lect, neg-ative.

Non- (not): non-sense, non-existent, non-age, non-compliance.

Note.—“Non” is much less emphatic than “in” or “un.” Compare “non-christian” and “un-christian”; “non-professional” and “un-professional.” Non-sense and non-entity are exceptional.

Ob- (in front of, against): ob-ject, ob-stinate, oc-cupy, oc-casion, of-fer, of-fend, op-pose, op-press, os-tensible, o-mit.

Per-, pel- (through): per-force, per-spire, per-form, pel-lucid.

Note.—Per, like the Teutonic for, sometimes passes from the notion of thoroughness to that of going too far or in a wrong direction:—

Per-vert, per-sist, per-jure, per-fidy, per-ish, per-dition.

Pene- (almost): pen-insula, pen-ultimate.

Post- (after): post-date, post-script, post-pone, post-humous.

Pre- (before): pre-dict, pre-caution, pre-pare, pre-justice.

Preter- (beyond): preter-natural, preter-ite.

Pro-, por-, pol-, pur- (forth): pro-ject, pro-pose, pro-noun, pro-mise, por-tend, pol-lute, pur-pose, pur-sue, pur-port, pur-loin.

Quasi- (pretence): a quasi-judge (a sham or pretended judge).

Quondam- (formerly): a quondam-judge (a former judge).

Re-, red- (back, again): re-join, re-act, re-new, red-ecm, red-ound, red-undant.

Note.—The insertion of a hyphen alters the meaning. Compare “recover” and “re-cover”; “rejoin” and “re-join”; “redress” and “re-dress”; “reform” and “re-form”; “recollect” and “re-collect”; “recount” and “re-count”; “return” and “re-turn.”

Retro- (backward): retro-spect, retro-grade, retro-cession.

Se-, sed- (apart): se-clude, se-parate, sed-ition, se-cret, se-cure.

Semi-, demi- (half): semi-circle; demi-god, demi-official.

Sine- (without): sine-cure.

Sub- (under, after): sub-ject, suc-cour, suc-cess, suf-fer, suf-fice, sug-gest, sub-committee, sus-tain, sus-pend, sup-port, sur-reptitious.

Note.—In words like “sub-tropical” the “sub” means “rather.” In “sub-judge” it denotes lower rank. In sub-marine (under the sea) and sub-terrestrial (under the earth) the “sub” is prepositional.

Subter- (beneath): subter-fuge.

Super-, sur- (above, over, beyond): super-structure, super-ficial; sur-face, sur-pass, sur-vive, sur-charge, sur-feit, sur-mount.

Trans-, tra- (across): trans-figure, trans-gress, trans-form, trans-it, trans-mit, trans-late, trans-parent, tra-verse, tra-dition, tra-duce.

Tri- (three): tri-angle, tri-lateral, tri-nity.

Ultra- (beyond): ultra-liberal (very liberal, adverbial sense), ultra-marine (beyond the sea, prepositional sense).

Un-, uni- (one): un-animous, uni-form, uni-corn.

Vice-, vis- (instead of): vice-regent, vis-count, vice-roy.

326. Disguised Prefixes (Latin or French).

Ante- (before): an-cestor for ante-cessor.

Bi- (twice): ba-lance.

Con-, co- (together): cus-tom, cur-ry (verb), co-ver, co-venant, co-unt (verb and noun), cou-ch, co-st.

Dis-, di- (apart): des-cant, des-patch, de-feat, de-luge, s-pend.

Ex-, e- (out): a-mend (but e-mendation), a-bash, a-fraid, a-ward, as-tonish, es-cape, es-ehcat, es-say, is-sue, s-ample, s-carce, s-corch.

Extra- (outside): stra-nge, stra-nger. (Stem formed from prefix.)

In- (not): en-emy (hence adj. in-imical), an-oint.

Intra- (within): entr-ails. (Here the prefix is made the stem.)

Juxta- (near): joust, jost-le. (The prefix is made the stem.)

Non- (not): um-pire (old French, nom-per).

Per- (through): par-don, par-amount, par-son, pil-grim.

Post- (after): pu-ny (Fr. puis-né, Lat. post-natus).

Pre- (before): pre-ach, pro-vost.

Re- (back): ren-der, r-ansom, r-ally, ru-nagate (re-negatus).

Retro- (back): rear-guard.

Sub- (under): so-journ, sud-den, s-ombre (sub or ex umbrâ).

Super- (above): sopr-ano, sover-eign (older spelling, sovr-an).

Trans- (across): tres-pass, tre-ason, tra-ffic.

Ultra- (beyond): outr-age. (Here the prefix is made the stem.)

SECTION 4.—ROMANIC SUFFIXES.

Nouns.

327. Agent:—

-ain, -en, -an: capt-ain, chieft-ain, guardi-an, citiz-en, librari-an.

-ant: merch-ant, serv-ant, brig-and, confid-ant, depend-ant.

-ard, -art: cow-ard, wiz-ard, drunk-ard, slugg-ard, bragg-art.

-ary, -ar, -aire: dignit-ary, mission-ary, secret-ary; vic-ar, schol-ar; million-aire, doctrin-aire.

-ate, -ite, -it: candid-ate, advoc-ate, Israel-ite, Jesu-it.

-ee, -y: trust-ee, devot-ee, pay-ee; deput-y, jur-y, lev-y, attorn-ey.

Note.—These words have a Passive signification. Thus “trust-ee” means one who is trusted: “jur-y” means one who is sworn. But there is no Passive meaning in the words “absent-ee” (one who is absent), “refug-ee” (one who has taken refuge).

-eer, -ier: engin-eer, auction-eer, volunt-eer; sold-ier, financ-ier.

-ent: stud-ent, presid-ent, pati-ent, rod-ent.

-ess (fem.): song-str-ess, poet-ess, tigr-ess, lion-ess.

-ine, -in: libert-ine, gobl-in, cous-in, pilgr-im.

-ive, -iff: capt-ive, fugit-ive, nat-ive, plaint-iff, cait-iff, bail-iff.

-on: fel-on, glutt-on, mas-on, sculli-on, drag-on.

-our, -eur, -or, -er: savi-our, emper-or, govern-or, preach-er, robb-er, act-or, doct-or, monit-or, cens-or, ancest-or, amat-eur, connoiss-eur.

328. Abstract Nouns:—

-acy, -cy: priv-acy, accur-acy, intric-acy, secre-cy, bankrupt-cy.

-age: bond-age, cour-age, hom-age, marri-age, pilgrim-age.

Cost of action: post-age, freight-age, broker-age, halt-age.

Result of action: break-age, leak-age, mess-age, pill-age.

Agent: person-age (a person of importance).

-al, -als: refus-al, propos-al, tri-al, nupti-als, credent-ials.

-ance, -ence: disturb-ance, endur-ance, repent-ance; obedi-ence, innoc-ence, abs-ence, pres-ence, depend-ence, dilig-ence, pati-ence.

-ancy, -ency: const-ancy, brilli-ancy, ten-ancy; excell-ency, reg-ency, urg-ency, frequ-ency, insolv-ency, emerg-ency, innoc-ency.

-el, -le, -ele: quarr-el, sequ-el, tut-el-age, client-elle, cand-le.

-ess, -ice, -ise: serv-ice, larg-ess, rich-es, prow-ess, merchand-ise, exerc-ise, just-ice, pract-ice, coward-ice, avar-ice, not-ice.

-eur: grand-eur, liqu-eur. (The last is not an abstract noun.)

-ity, -ty: fals-ity, real-ity; cruel-ty, frail-ty, boun-ty, un-ity.

-lence: pesti-lence, vio-lence, viru-lence, turbu-lence, opu-lence.

- ment : conceal-ment, enchant-ment, nourish-ment, nutri-ment.
- mony : cere-mony, acri-mony, matri-mony, testi-mony.
- our, -or : fav-our, hon-our, err-or, langu-or, col-our.
- ry, -ery : chival-ry, poet-ry ; slav-ery, treach-ery, cook-ery.
- sion : conver-sion, cohe-sion, occa-sion, compul-sion, proces-sion, illu-sion, man-sion, colli-sion, confu-sion, admis-sion.
- tion, -son, -som : benedic-tion, beni-son ; po-tion, poi-son ; redemp-tion, ran-son ; ora-tion, ori-son ; tradi-tion, trea-son.
- tude : longi-tude, apti-tude, alti-tude, multi-tude, servi-tude.
- ure : creat-ure, verd-ure, meas-ure, vest-ure, seiz-ure, agricult-ure.
- y : harmon-y, stud-y, victor-y, miser-y, industr-y, env-y.

329. Collectives ; Nouns of Place :—

- ade : colonn-ade, balustr-ade, cavalc-ade, brig-ade, crus-ade.
- age : assembl-age, plum-age, foli-age, vill-age, hermit-age, cott-age.
- ary, -arium : libr-ary, gran-ary, semin-ary, sanctu-ary, gloss-ary, diction-ary ; sanit-arium, aqu-arium.
- ery, -ry : machin-ery, caval-ry, jewel-ry, gent-ry, tenant-ry, infant-ry, station-ery, shrubb-ery, bak-ery, cemet-ery, spic-ery, rock-ery.
- ory : fact-ory, dormit-ory, arm-ory, territ-ory, observat-ory.

330. Diminutives :—

- aster : poet-aster, ole-aster, pil-aster.
- el, -le, -elle : dams-el, cast-le, mod-el, citad-el, mors-el, parc-el, bagat-elle. (Fem-ale from Fr. fem-elle, Latin fem-ella.)
- et, -let : lock-et, lanc-et, pock-et, tick-et, turr-et, coron-et, thick-et ; brace-let, stream-let, brook-let, leaf-let, rivu-let, ring-let, root-let.
- ette : etiqu-ette, statu-ette, cigar-ette, wagon-ette, brun-ette.
- icle, -cule : art-icle, part-icle, animal-cule, curr-icle, curr-iculum, cut-icle, corpus-cle, pinna-cle, cod-icil, domi-cile.
- ot : fag-ot, chari-ot, parr-ot, magg-ot, ball-ot, piv-ot.
- ule : glob-ule, pill-ule, nod-ule, caps-ule.

331. Miscellaneous :—

- ace : popul-ace, pinn-ace, men-ace, pal-ace, sp-ace, grim-ace.
- and, -end : vi-and or vi-ands, leg-end, divid-end, rever-end.
- cre, -chre : lu-cre, sepul-chre, massa-cre (formed in imitation).
- en, -om, -n : ali-en, ven-om, chai-n.
- ern : tav-ern, cav-ern, lect-ern, lant-ern, cist-ern.
- ic, -k, -ge : fabr-ic, rust-ic, mus-ic ; cler-k, sil-k ; ser-ge.
- il, -ile, -le : pup-il, imbec-ile, sea-l, ais-le, quadr-ille, bac-illus.
- in : marg-in, orig-in, virg-in.
- o : studi-o, grott-o, incognit-o.
- oon, -one (augmentative) : ball-oon, bass-oon, tromb-one.
- ter, -tre : clois-ter, thea-tre, lus-tre, spec-tre, fil-ter, mons-ter.

332. Adjectives.

- acious : ten-acious, loqu-acious, mend-acious, cap-acious.
- al : loy-al, leg-al, roy-al, reg-al, equ-al, mort-al, vit-al.
- an, -ane, -ain : hum-an, hum-ane ; cert-ain ; pag-an, Rom-an.
- aneous : simult-aneous, instant-aneous, contempor-aneous.
- ant, -ent : vac-ant, indign-ant, ramp-ant, pati-ent, innoc-ent, curr-ent, confid-ent, tru-ant, vagr-ant.

Note.—When -ant and -ent are seen in pairs of words, as “confidant, confident,” “dependant, dependent,” the latter is an adjective and the former is a noun.

- ar : sol-ar, lun-ar, regul-ar, singul-ar, vulg-ar, vernacul-ar.
- ary, -arious, -arian : contr-ary, ordin-ary, necess-ary, tempor-ary, solit-ary; nef-arious, greg-arious; agr-arian, humanit-arian.
- ate : fortun-ate, separ-ate, desol-ate, priv-ate, accur-ate.
- ble, -able : sta-ble, fee-ble, terri-ble; mov-able, laugh-able, eat-able (edible-ble), service-able, lov-able, drink-able. (Passive sense.)
- ble, -ple : dou-ble, tre-ble; sim-ple, tri-ple. (Signifies “fold.”)
- eel, -il, -le : gent-eel, gent-le, civ-il, fra-il, cru-el, subt-le.
- erious : delet-erious.
- escent : conval-escent, efferv-escent, incand-escent, adol-escent.
- ese : Chin-ese, Malt-ese, Burm-ese, Siam-ese, Portugu-ese, Geno-ese.
- esque : pictur-esque, grot-esque, burl-esque.
- ete, -eet : compl-ete, obsol-ete, discr-ete, discr-eet.
- fic : terri-fic, horri-fic, beati-fic, sopori-fic, honori-fic. (Active sense.)
- ian : Austral-ian, Ind-ian, Christ-ian.
- ic, -ique : publ-ic, rust-ic; un-ique, obl-ique, ant-ique.
- id : ac-id, pall-id, squal-id, rig-id, plac-id, morb-id.
- ile : serv-ile, frag-ile, doc-ile, puer-ile, fac-ile, juven-ile.
- ine : div-ine, infant-ine, leon-ine, can-ine, clandest-ine.
- ite : oppos-ite, favour-ite, exquis-ite.
- ive : act-ive, capt-ive, sport-ive, relat-ive, nat-ive, posit-ive.
- lent : pesti-lent, vio-lent, turbu-lent, fraudu-lent, corpu-lent.
- monious : sancti-monious, queri-monious, cere-monious.
- ory, -orious : compuls-ory, transit-ory, curs-ory, dilat-ory; lab-orious, cens-orious. (Generally in an Active sense.)
- ose, -ous : verb-ose, joc-ose; monst-rous, danger-ous, glori-ous, ponder-ous, dexter-ous, courte-ous.
- und, -ond : rubic-und, morib-und, vagab-ond.
- urn : tacit-urn, aub-urn.
- y : test-y, mass-y, hast-y, joll-y.

333. Verbs.

- ate : agit-ate, captiv-ate, moder-ate, stimul-ate, cre-ate.
- esce : efferv-esce, coal-esce, acqui-esce. (Growing or becoming.)
- fy : magni-fy, signi-fy, simpli-fy, modi-fy, terri-fy. (Transitive.)
- ish : fin-ish, nour-ish, pun-ish, publ-ish, van-ish.
- ite, -it : exped-ite, cred-it, mer-it, inhab-it.
- y : marr-y, sall-y, carr-y.

SECTION 5.—GREEK PREFIXES.

334. Amphi- (about, on both sides) : amphi-theatre, amphi-bious.

An-, am-, a- (not, without; like English un-) : an-archy, a-theism, a-pathy, am-brosial, a-trophly, an-omalous.

Ana-, an- (up to, again) : ana-tomy, ana-logy, ana-lysis, an-eurism.

Anti-, ant- (against) : anti-podes, anti-pathy, ant-agonist.

Apo-, aph- (from) : apo-logy, apo-state, apo-strophe, aph-orism.

Arch-, archi- (chief, head) : arch-heretic, arch-enemy; archi-tect.

Auto-, auth- (self) : auto-graph, auto-biography; auth-entic.

Cata-, cath-, cat- (down): cata-ract, cath-edral, cata-strophe, cat-echism.

Dia- (through): dia-meter, dia-logue, dia-dem, dia-gonal.

Di- (in two): di-ssyllable, di-phthong, di-lemma.

Dys- (ill): dys-peptic, dys-entery.

Ec-, ex- (out, from): ex-odus, ec-centric, ec-lipse, ec-logue.

En- (in): en-thusiasm, em-phasis, el-lipsis, en-comium.

Endo- (within): endo-gamous, endo-genous.

Epi-, eph-, ep- (upon): epi-gram, ep-och, epi-taph, eph-emeral, epi-stle.

Exo- (without): exo-gamous, exo-tic.

Eu-, ev- (well): eu-phony, eu-phemism, ev-angelist.

Hemi- (half): hemi-sphere.

Hepta-, hept- (seven): hepta-gon, hept-archy.

Hetero- (different): hetero-dox, hetero-geneous.

Hexa- (six): hexa-meter.

Homo-, hom- (same): homo-geneous, hom-onym.

Hyper- (above): hyper-bole, hyper-critical (critical to a fault).

Hypo-, hyph- (under): hypo-crite, hypo-thesis, hyp-hen.

Meta-, meth-, met- (after, substitution): meta-phor, meth-od, met-onymy.

Mono-, mon- (single, alone): mono-graph, mon-archy, mon-astery, mon-k.

Pan-, panto- (all): pan-theist, pan-oply, pan-orama, panto-mime.

Para-, par- (beside): para-phrase, para-ble, par-allel, para-site.

Penta- (five): penta-meter, penta-polis.

Peri- (around): peri-meter, peri-phrasis, peri-od.

Poly- (many): poly-syllable, poly-theist, poly-glot.

Pro- (before): pro-gramme, pro-logue, pro-phet, pro-boscis.

Pseudo-, pseud- (false): pseudo-critic, pseud-onym.

Syn- (with): syn-thesis, syn-tax, sym-pathy, syl-lable, sys-tem.

Tele- (afar): tele-graph, tele-phone, tele-gram.

Tri- (thrice, or three): tri-pod, tri-syllable, tri-sect.

335. Latin and Greek equivalent Prefixes.

| Latin.                  | Greek.               | Meaning. |
|--------------------------------|-----------------------------|-----------------|
| Ambi- , amb-iguous      | Amphi- , amphi-bious | On both sides   |
| Ab- , ab-solute         | Apo- , apo-logy      | From            |
| Ex- amine               | Ec- , ec-stasy       | Out of          |
| In- , in-spection       | En-, Em- , em-phasis | Into, in        |
| Semi- , demi-, demi-god | Hemi- , hemi-sphere  | Half            |
| Super- , supervise      | Hyper- , hyper-bole  | Above           |
| Sub- , sub-stantive     | Hypo- , hypo-thesis  | Under           |
| Pro- , pro-portion      | Pro- , pro-phet      | Before or for   |
| Tri- , tri-angle        | Tri- , tri-pod       | Thrice          |

SECTION 6.—GREEK SUFFIXES.

Nouns.

336. Agent :—

-ac : mani-ac, demoni-ac.

-ant : gi-ant, adam-ant, eleph-ant.

-ast : enthusi-ast, iconocl-ast, gymn-ast, encomi-ast.

- ic : heret-ic, scept-ic, crit-ic, cler-ic (=clerk).
 -ist : dent-ist, the-ist, egot-ist, alarm-ist, extrem-ist, optim-ist.
 -ite : Israel-ite, erem-ite or herm-it, anchor-ite or anchor-et.
 -ot : patri-ot, zeal-ot, idi-ot (big-ot, doubtful).
 -te, -t : prophe-t, poe-t, plane-t, aposta-te, come-t.

337. Abstract Nouns :—

- asm : enthusi-asm, pleon-asm, sarc-asm, ch-asm.
 -ic, -ics : log-ic, mag-ic, mus-ic ; eth-ics, mathemat-ics, polit-ics.
 -ism : patriot-ism, barbar-ism, magnet-ism, the-ism, critic-ism.
 -sis, -sy, -se : drop-sy, pal-sy ; paraly-sis, ba-sis ; eclip-se, ellip-se.
 -y : monarch-y, philosoph-y, democrac-y, energ-y.
 -ysm : catacl-ysm, parox-ysm.

338. Diminutives :—

- isk, -esque : aster-isk, obel-isk ; statu-esque, burl-esque.

339. Miscellaneous :—

- ad, -id : myri-ad, dec-ade, mon-ad, Ili-ad, Æne-id.
 -m, -mme : theore-m, proble-m, telegra-m, progra-mme, cli-me, cli-m-ate.
 -oid : anthrop-oid, negr-oid, metall-oid, tabl-oid.
 -ter, -tre : cen-tre, me-tre, diame-ter, scep-tre.

340. Adjectives.

- astic : pleon-astic, ecclesi-astic, sarc-astic, dr-astic.
 -esque : arab-esque, grot-esque, pictur-esque.
 -ic : dramat-ic, cosm-ic, com-ic, trag-ic, polit-ic, authent-ic.
 -istic : eulog-istic, evangel-istic, patr-istic.

341. Verbs.

- ise : civil-ise, scrutin-ise, fertil-ise, real-ise, theor-isc.

342. Some General Results.

(a) Affixes denoting a moderate degree of some quality :—

- ish, Teutonic : black-ish (rather black), sweet-ish (rather sweet).
 -ly, Teutonic : clean-ly (disposed to be clean), sick-ly (liable to be sick).
 Sub-, Romanic : sub-acid (rather acid), sub-tropical (slightly tropical).

(b) Suffixes denoting a high degree of some quality :—

- ful, Teutonic : plenti-ful, wonder-ful, taste-ful, truth-ful.
 -ous, -ose, Romanic : verb-ose, numer-ous, fam-ous, odi-ous.

Note.—The equivalence of these suffixes is seen from the fact that the same stem sometimes takes both forms :—

Plenti-ful, plente-ous. Beauti-ful, beaute-ous. Bounti-ful, bounte-ous. Piti-ful, pite-ous. Joy-ful, joy-ous. Grace-ful, graci-ous.

(c) Prefixes denoting the undoing of something done :—

- Un-, Teutonic : un-bolt, un-tie, un-lock, un-fold.
 De-, Romanic : de-throne, de-camp, de-tach.
 Dis-, or di-, Romanic : dis-mount, dis-appear, dis-arm.

(d) Affixes denoting a negative :—

For-, Teutonic : for-bid.

-less, Teutonic : hap-less, law-less, hope-less.

N-, Teutonic : n-one, n-ever, n-either, n-or.

Un-, Teutonic : un-happy, un-safe, un-ready.

Dis-, di-, Romanic : dis-quiet (opposite to quiet), dif-ficult (not easy), dif-fident (not confident), dis-honour.

In-, Romanic : in-human, ir-regular, im-moral, il-legible.

Ne-, neg-, non-, Romanic : ne-farious, neg-lect, non-sense.

A-, or an-, Greek : a-pathy, an-archy, am-brosial.

(e) Suffixes indicating the Feminine gender :—

-ster, Teutonic : spin-ster. (Only one word.)

-en, Teutonic : vix-en. (Only one word.)

-ess, Romanic : lion-ess, temptr-ess, tigr-ess.

(f) Prefixes indicating something bad :—

Mis-, Teutonic (from miss) : mis-take, mis-deed, mis-hap.

Male-, mal-, Romanic : male-factor, mal-treat.

Mis-, Romanic (from minus) : mis-use, mis-fortune.

Dys-, Greek : dys-entery, dys-pepsia.

(g) Prefixes indicating something good :—

Well-, Teutonic : wel-fare, wel-come, well-being.

Bene-, Romanic : bene-volent, bene-fit, bene-diction.

Eu-, Greek : eu-phemism, ev-angelist, eu-phony.

(h) Affixes for forming Transitive verbs :—

Be-, Teutonic : be-friend, be-calm, be-moan, be-little.

-en, Teutonic : dark-en, length-en, hast-en, lik-en.

-le, Teutonic : start-le, jost-le, stif-le.

-se, Teutonic : clean-se, rin-se, glimp-se.

-fy, Romanic : magni-fy, modi-fy, stupe-fy.

In-, en-, Romanic : im-peril, en-dear, em- or im-bitter.

-ise, Greek : human-ise, brutal-ise, galvar-ise.

(i) Suffixes having a depreciatory force :—

Teutonic for forming Nouns :—

-craft : priest-craft, state-craft, witch-craft.

-erel, -rel : mong-rel, dogg-erel, dott-erel, wast-rel.

-ling : hire-ling, ground-ling, under-ling, world-ling, weak-ling.

-monger : ballad-monger, crotchet-monger, grievance-monger.

-ster : trick-ster, young-ster, rhyme-ster.

Romanic for forming Nouns :—

-ard : cow-ard, drunk-ard, slugg-ard, dot-ard.

-aster : poet-aster, critic-aster.

Teutonic for forming Adjectives :—

-ish : Rom-ish, woman-ish, child-ish, baby-ish, upp-ish, slav-ish.

Romanic for forming Adjectives :—

-ile : puer-ile (child-ish), infant-ile (baby-ish), serv-ile (slav-ish).

(j) Suffixes having an augmentative force :—

Teutonic :—

-er (frequentative verb) : sputt-er, be-spatt-er, wand-er, etc.

-le (freq. verb) : dabb-le, grumb-le, wagg-le, etc.

Romanic :—

-ard (excess to a fault) : blizz-ard, lagg-ard, drunk-ard.

-oon, -one (augment. noun) : ball-oon, bass-oon, tromb-one.

(k) Suffixes denoting patronymics :—

Teutonic :—

-ing : Vik-ing, k-ing (A.S. cyn-ing), Brown-ing, Mann-ing.

-kin : Peter-kin (hence Per-kin), Sim-kin (Simon-kin), Wil-kin-s.

-son : Ander-son, Collin-son, David-son.

I. Write short sentences illustrating the difference of meaning in each of the following pairs of Abstract nouns formed with different suffixes :—

(a) Teutonic suffixes :—

Dearth, dearthness.

Drought, dryness.

Hardness, hardihood.

Sleight, slyness.

Sloth, slowness.

Truth, trueness.

Witness, wisdom.

(b) Romanic suffixes :—

Acquitt-ance, acquitt-al.

Appar-it-ion, appear-ance.

Benefact-ion, benefic-ence.

Committ-al, commiss-ion.

Compos-ure, compos-it-ion.

Content-ment, content-ion.

Continu-ance, continu-at-ion.

Creat-ure, creat-ion.

Degener-at-ion, degener-ac-y.

Depart-ment, depart-ure.

Destin-y, destin-at-ion.

Dispos-al, dispos-it-ion.

Eject-ment, eject-ion.

Expos-ure, expos-it-ion.

Fixt-ure, fix-ity.

Fract-ure, fract-ion, frag-ment.

Impost-ure, impos-it-ion.

Impress-ment, impress-ion.

Intim-at-ion, intim-ac-y.

Luxury, luxuriance.

Observ-ance, observ-at-ion.

Post-ure, posit-ion.

Propos-al, propos-it-ion.

Protest-er, protest-ant.

Serv-i-tude, serv-ice.

Signific-ance, signific-at-ion.

Stat-ure, stat-ion.

Tempera-ment, tempera-ture.

Vac-ancy, vac-at-ion.

(c) Romanic and Teutonic suffixes :—

Appropriate-ness, appropriat-ion.

Apt-ness, apt-i-tude.

Close-ness, close-ure.

Complete-ness, complet-ion.

Direct-ion, direct-ness.

Distinct-ness, distinct-ion.

Exact-ness, exact-ion.

False-hood, fals-ity, false-ness.

Human-ity, humane-ness.

Ingenu-ity, ingenu-ous-ness.

Just-ness, just-ice.

Lax-ity, lax-ness.

Pall-or, pale-ness.

Proced-ure, proceed-ing.

Quiet-ude, quiet-ness.

Remiss-ness, remiss-ion.

Secure-ness, secur-ity.

Till-age, til-th.

(d) Greek and Romanic suffixes:—

|                         |                         |
|-------------------------|-------------------------|
| Barbar-ism, barbar-ity. | Formal-ism, formal-ity. |
| Commun-ism, commun-ity. | Vulgar-ism, vulgar-ity. |
| Fatal-ism, fatal-ity.   |                         |

II. Show by an example the difference of meaning, if any, in each of the following pairs of adjectives formed with different suffixes:—

|                                |                             |
|--------------------------------|-----------------------------|
| Beneficial, beneficent.        | Judicial, judicious.        |
| Ceremonious, ceremonial.       | Luxurious, luxuriant.       |
| Childlike, childish.           | Masterly, masterful.        |
| Comic, comical.                | Momentary, momentous.       |
| Comprehensive, comprehensible. | Notable, notorious.         |
| Congenial, congenital.         | Official, officious.        |
| Contemptible, contemptuous.    | Ordinal, ordinary.          |
| Continual, continuous.         | Permissive, permissible.    |
| Corporate, corporal.           | Politic, political.         |
| Credible, creditable.          | Popular, populous.          |
| Definite, definitive.          | Respective, respectful.     |
| Dramatic, dramatical.          | Reverend, reverent.         |
| Elemental, elementary.         | Sanatory, sanitary.         |
| Exceptional, exceptionable.    | Sensitive, sensible.        |
| Expedient, expeditious.        | Sensual, sensuous.          |
| Godlike, godly.                | Silvery, silvern.           |
| Illusive, illusory.            | Spirituous, spiritual.      |
| Imaginary, imaginative.        | Temporal, temporary.        |
| Imperial, imperious.           | Tragic, tragical.           |
| Industrial, industrious.       | Transit-ory, transit-ional. |
| Ingenious, ingenuous.          | Verbal, verbose.            |
| Innocent, innocuous.           | Virtual, virtuous.          |

III. Substitute a single word (an adjective) for the words printed below in italics:—

- (a) This writing is such as cannot be read.
- (b) The plan you mention cannot be put into practice.
- (c) He is one who cannot according to the rules be elected.
- (d) That herb is fit to be eaten.
- (e) The colour is beyond my perception.
- (f) You are liable to be called to account for your actions.
- (g) The plan you propose is open to objections.
- (h) That word is no longer in use.
- (i) This is a bird of passage.
- (j) Your office is one for which no salary is paid.
- (k) His motive was merely to get some money.
- (l) His position was beyond all hope of improvement.
- (m) His manners are more like those of a woman than of a man.
- (n) He is one who takes no trouble about his work.
- (o) His style is too full of words.
- (p) He is inclined to find fault.
- (q) A wolf is an animal that cannot be tamed.
- (r) That problem is one which is never likely to be solved.
- (s) His character has an evil reputation.

- (t) The use of opium is likely to do much injury.
 (u) That impression is too vivid ever to be effaced.
 (v) He is unable to pay his debts.

IV. To each of the verbs, nouns, or adjectives given below, add some Abstract suffix or suffixes:—

Serve, coward, right, grand, err, miser, apt, victor, acrid, just, merchant, trick, pass, seize, try, judge, compel, admit, victor, repent, regent, bankrupt, accurate, poor, rely, captive, fragile, facile, felon, sole, assist, scarce, secret, defy, father, real.

V. Form Diminutive nouns out of the following by adding to each of them its appropriate Diminutive suffix:—

Animal, code, pouch, brook, poet, cigar, vase, lance, globe, mode, pill, bill, car, cellar, statue, part, song, sign, table, home, wagon, hump, park, maid, cut, lamb, hill, change, bird, lad, scythe, corn.

VI. Point out the six different senses of the suffix "age" as exemplified in the following words:—

Herbage, hermitage, courage, postage, breakage, personage.

VII. Describe the uses of the suffix "-en" as exemplified in the following words:—

Maiden, flaxen, vixen, fatten, drunken, kitten, alien, rotten, golden, oxen, haven.

VIII. In the following sentences, the meaning of the word to which "re-" has been prefixed depends upon whether a hyphen has or has not been placed between the prefix and the verbal root. Substitute some other verb or phrase in each sentence:—

- (1) { I have never remarked this before.
The box must be re-marked.
- (2) { My losses were soon recovered.
The chairs must be re-covered.
- (3) { He has rejoined his post.
He has re-joined the two planks.
- (4) { Their wrongs were soon redressed.
The doll must be re-dressed.
- (5) { His character was reformed.
The classes were re-formed.
- (6) { I cannot recollect this.
You must re-collect all the coins that have been lost.
- (7) { I will not recount my sorrows.
You had better re-count all these coins.
- (8) { You must return that book.
Having turned the verse into prose, he re-turned the prose into verse.
- (9) { This has been reserved for future use.
The summons, which he could not then receive, must be re-served upon him.
- (10) { A. went out of office and was replaced by B.
A. has been re-placed in his appointment.

IX. Define and distinguish the three meanings of the prefix "sub-" in the following words:—

(a) Sub-terranean, sub-montane ; (b) sub-acid, sub-tropical ; (c) sub-judge, sub-deputy.

X. Show the difference of meaning implied in the following words by the prefix "non-" and the prefix "in-" or "un-":—

(a) Non-active, inactive ; (b) non-effective, ineffective ; (c) non-Christian, unchristian ; (d) non-famous, infamous ; (e) non-professional, unprofessional ; (f) non-judicial, unjudicial.

XI. Form sentences showing the difference of meaning between—

Confidant, confidant ; dependant, dependent ; pendant, pendent ; plaintive, plaintiff.

XII. Show what prefixes are disguised in the following words:—

Cost, essay (trial), spend, pilgrim, sudden, sovereign, outrage, trespass, sojourn, umpire, entrails, deluge, ancestor, balance, anoint, sombre, provost, runagate, puny.

XIII. Distinguish the suffixes in each of the following pairs:—

Hatred, hundred ; hemlock, wedlock ; learning, farthing ; freckle, spindle ; seedling, darkling ; friend, reverend.

XIV. Distinguish the suffix "-ther" in each of the following:—

Other, father, hither.

XV. Distinguish the prefix "a" in each of the following:—

Aspect, apathy, avert, afresh, afloat, arise, ado, amend.

XVI. Separate the stem from the affixes (prefixes or suffixes) of the following words, and the affixes from each other:—

Undenominationalism, valetudinarian, unsophisticated, renegade, instrumentality, disproportionate, talkativeness, protestantism, absenteeism, accidentally, miscreant, indentures, intoxicate, interest, intellectual, demonetise, telephone, introspection, captivate, insignificant, homogeneous, inaccessible, procedure, likelihood.

CHAPTER XXVI.—FIGURES OF RHETORIC.

343. Figure of Speech defined.—A Figure of Speech or Rhetoric is a deviation from the plain and ordinary use of words with a view to increasing or specialising the effect.

Thus we can say, "There are six pillars on either side of this colonnade." Here the word pillars is used in its ordinary and literal sense.

Again, we can say, "This law is one of the pillars of the commonwealth." Here pillar is used in a figurative or non-literal sense, and signifies "main support."

344. Figures of Speech classified.—The three main classes of figures have their origin in the three chief faculties of the human intellect, viz. (1) comparison or the perception of resemblance, (2) discrimination or the perception of difference, and (3) association or the impression of contiguity.<sup>1</sup>

I. When like objects come under our notice, we are struck with the resemblance. The figures named Simile, Metaphor, and Allegory are based on similarity or resemblance. These figures constitute Class I.

II. When unlike objects come under our notice, we are struck with the difference. The figures named Antithesis, Epigram, and the Condensed Sentence are based on contrast or difference. These constitute Class II.

III. When two impressions occurring together become permanently associated in the mind, the thought of the one calls up the thought of the other, as a storm suggests shipwreck, wealth suggests gold, etc. This is called the law of Contiguity, and is the foundation of memory or the retentive faculty. The figures of speech named Metonymy, Synecdoche, and the Transferred Epithet are based upon Contiguity. These constitute Class III.

Besides the above, there is a Fourth Class consisting of miscellaneous figures, which though not based on any one faculty like the three classes just named, involve some deviation from the ordinary use of words, and are therefore rightly included among Figures of Speech.

Class I.—Figures based on Resemblance.

345. Simile: lit. "a thing like" (neuter of Latin similis, like).—A simile is the explicit statement of some point of resemblance conceived to exist between two things, that differ in other respects.

Observe, in the simile and in all other figures based upon resemblance, the comparison is, not between things of the same kind, but between things of different kinds. Thus there is no figure, if we compare a camel with a dromedary, but only when, for example, we compare it with a ship and call it "the ship of the desert." Again, there is no simile if we compare Burke with

<sup>1</sup> Bain's Rhetoric and Composition, Part I. p. 135.

Cicero, Napoleon with Alexander, or the Russian Empire with the Roman Empire. These are all good parallels. But, as the comparisons are literal—that is, between objects of the same kind—there is nothing figurative about them.

Errors, like straws, upon the surface flow ;

He that would search for pearls must dive below.—DRYDEN.

The tribes (on the North-west frontier of India) hung upon the flanks of our retreating columns like wasps.—Review of Reviews, Jan. 1898, p. 5.

They flourished the interests of the national defence, like a Medusa's head, to frighten off the men.—Daily Telegraph, 24th Feb. 1898.

A simile is especially effective, when some abstract thought or series of thoughts is illustrated by means of some concrete parallel. Keats, having read several translations of Homer into English verse, and not being satisfied with any of them, found a new world suddenly opened out before him on seeing the translation by Chapman (A.D. 1598), and expressed his feelings under the following simile :—

Then felt I like some watcher of the skies,
When a new planet swings into his ken ;
Or like stout Cortez, when with eagle eyes
He stared at the Pacific,—and all his men
Looked at each other with a wild surmise,—
Silent, upon a peak in Darien.

From such examples as the above it will be seen that a simile is usually introduced by some words, such as like, as, as—so, which draw attention to the likeness. But this is not necessary. All that is necessary to the simile is that both sides of the comparison shall be distinctly stated :—

Whenever I hear the member for N— speak about East Africa, I am reminded of one of those mirrors in which we see everything upside down, and in which things are presented in a topsy-turvy condition.—Mr. Curzon's Speech, 4th March 1898.

The repose of repletion may not be a very heroic attitude to a great nation like the English ; but even a lion sleeps after a full meal.—Review of Reviews, Jan. 1898, p. 8.

346. Metaphor : lit. a transfer (Gr. meta, across ; phor-e, carrying).—A metaphor is a potential or implied simile. In a simile both sides of the comparison are distinctly stated ; whereas in a metaphor one side is stated, but not the other. Thus when we say, “He curbs his passion,” we mean that he restrains his passion, as a man would curb a restless horse. If both sides of the comparison were to be given, this is how the simile would be expressed.

Our eldest son is the star (brightest member) of the family.
 His rash policy let loose the dogs of war.
 Hold fast to the anchor of faith.
 The news you bring is a dagger to my heart.
 The town was stormed after a long siege.
 He was fond of blowing his own trumpet (praising himself).
 He swam bravely against the tide of popular applause.
 Can'st thou not minister to a mind diseased,
Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow?—SHAKESPEARE.

347. Personal Metaphors.—A metaphor is personal, when it speaks of inanimate objects as if they were living.

A treacherous calm ; a sullen sky ; a frowning rock ; pitiless cold ; cruel heat ; a learned age ; the thirsty ground ; a virgin soil.
 Every hedge was conscious of more than what the representations of enamoured swains admit of.—Tatler.
 The childhood of the world ; the anger of the tempest ; the deceit- fulness of riches. Wine is a *mock*er.

Oh mother Ida ! many-fountained Ida !

Dear mother Ida, hearken ere I die.—TENNYSON.

Our unwearied and unsubsidised allies, the waves.—STEAD.

When empire in its childhood first appears,

A watchful fate o'ersees its tender years !—DRYDEN.

Everything smiled on him. Familiarity breeds contempt.

Perhaps the vale

Relents awhile to the reflected ray.—THOMSON.

The voice of thy brother's blood crieth unto me from the ground.—

Gen. iv. 10.

Weary wave and dying blast
Sob and moan along the shore ;
 And all is peace at last.

348. Sustained Metaphors.—The resemblance expressed by a metaphor is usually limited to a single point. Occasionally, however, a metaphor can be sustained through a series of kindred images.

Let us (since life can little else supply
 But just to look about us and to die)
 Expatriate free o'er all the scene of man,
 A mighty maze, but not without a plan ;
 A wild, where weeds and flowers promiscuous shoot ;
 A garden tempting with forbidden fruit,
 Together let us beat the ample field,
 Try what the open, what the covert yield ;
 The latent tracks, the giddy heights explore
 Of those who blindly creep or sightless soar.—POPE.

We believe that the embers of municipal patriotism have never ceased to burn and glow in these smaller communities, into which, by historical and physical necessity, London has been divided. We will do nothing to quench these embers. Rather we will tend them and fan them, until over the whole of those communities they have shed an equal and a vivifying light and warmth.—Duke of Devonshire's Speech, 15th February 1898.

349. Confusion of Metaphors.—Metaphors borrowed from more than one source must not be combined in the same phrase or clause. The mixing of metaphors, far from increasing the effect, weakens it by the sense of incongruity that it excites.

Savoy and Nice, the keys of Italy and the citadel in her hands to bridle Switzerland, are in that consolidation of the French power.—BURKE.

He is understood to have expressed the belief that the true policy for the Liberal party to pursue was to launch a campaign against the House of Lords.—Daily Telegraph.

Traders should once and for all abandon the hope that the province of Yunnan is a rich mine only waiting to be tapped.—Cont. Review, February 1898.

Nothing can save China but a radical right-about-face on the part of the British Foreign Office.—Review of Reviews, February 1898, p. 148.

There are phrases of music that go home to the centre of our being, and five minutes' dwelling on them at sunrise will give a keynote that will sound for the day, the morning bath of the mind.—National Review, February 1898.

In cases of this kind the Stock Market, which is considerably more liable to fits of panic than to phlegmatic indifference or foolish optimism, is the safest political thermometer.—Daily Telegraph, 25th February 1898.

It is but cold comfort to know that reason must in the end prevail over superstition, and that a religion grafted upon science will come to the birth by the slow but sure processes of evolution.—Times Weekly, 4th March 1898.

350. Succession without confusion.—We may, however, have a succession of metaphors without confusion.

- (1) I bridle in my struggling muse with pain,
That longs to launch into a bolder strain.—ADDISON.
- (2) At length Erasmus, that great honoured name
(The glory of the priesthood and the shame),
Stemmed the wild torrent of a barbarous age,
And drove those holy Vandals off the stage.—POPE.

We consider (1) an instance of confusion, and (2) an instance of succession without confusion. Ex. (1) is a confusion of metaphor for two reasons—(a) because an adjective clause, being a syntactical part of the main clause (§ 195), is not entitled to employ a metaphor distinct from that employed by the main clause; and (b) because the adjective clause itself contains two distinct metaphors. On the other hand, we consider (2) a succession, not a confusion, of metaphors, because the fourth line is a co-ordinate, not a subordinate, clause, and is therefore entitled to employ its own metaphor independently of the other.

The following is a striking example of a succession of co-ordinate metaphors, each of which is in apposition with a single noun, "sleep," and could easily be expanded into a co-ordinate clause.

Macbeth doth murder sleep, the innocent sleep,
Sleep that knits up the ravelled sleeve of care,
The death of each day's life, sore labour's bath,
Balm of hurt minds, great nature's second course,
Chief nourisher in life's feast.—Macbeth, ii. 2.

351. Appropriateness of Metaphor.—A far-fetched metaphor defeats its own object; for instead of setting a point in a clearer light by the comparison, it makes it darker. On the other hand, a metaphor is especially appropriate and forcible when the comparison is backed by some fact of a kindred character:—

- (1) For seven weeks he tramped, a workless worker, the stony-hearted streets of London.—Review of Reviews, Feb. 1898.
- (2) We believe the integrity of China is most likely to be secured by throwing the country open to the commerce of the world instead of closing it up, so to speak, in water-tight compartments.—Mr. Curzon's Speech, 2nd March 1898.

Here the provinces of China, closed against foreign commerce, are compared to "water-tight compartments." The comparison is doubly apt, because the only access to these provinces at present is by water, viz. the treaty-ports and the mouths of the great inland rivers.

- (3) Mr. Bright condemned the ruinous expense of the army, and maintained that the young officers with their scarlet and gold were kept up mainly for the amusement of the young ladies of the aristocracy; and he added, "And these young ladies pet the robin red-breast, who is the most quarrelsome and disreputable of birds,—simply because he wears a red waistcoat."—Fortnightly Review, February 1898, p. 243.
- (4) My hon. friend is a spinner of long yarns of low quality. (Applied in a double sense to the late Mr. Bright, a cotton-spinner by trade, and a distinguished speaker in the House of Commons.)
- (5) Where wert thou, mighty Mother, when he lay,—
When thy son lay pierced by the shaft that flies
In darkness?—SHELLEY'S Adonais, 9-12.

Adonais is Keats, the poet, whose premature death is mourned by Shelley. The metaphor of death as "the arrow that flieth by day," "the pestilence that walketh in darkness" (Ps. xci.) is rendered doubly appropriate by the fact that the immediate cause of his death was said to be a malignant attack written by an anonymous reviewer.

352. Metaphors based on history, fable, parable, etc.—Metaphors may be drawn not only from resemblances of objects, but from resemblances of situation, and these may be taken from history, or fable, or parable, or proverb. Every one is familiar with such phrases as “hiding one’s light under a bushel,” “the lion lying down with the lamb” (parables from the Bible); “to wash one’s hands of a thing” (Pilate’s action in the prætorium); “cutting one’s coat according to the cloth,” “letting sleeping dogs lie,” “swapping horses in crossing a stream,” “putting the cart before the horse” (proverbs).

The lion roared to a false note and then rated the jackals for yelping in unison. (Fable of jackal in lion’s hide.)—Daily Telegraph, 5th February 1898.

The interests of Great Britain had to be defended in language that should steer safely between the Scylla of weakness and the Charybdis of arrogance. (The fabled whirlpools in the Straits of Messina.)—Ibid. 2nd March 1898.

The Hon. H. B. with his green cutaway coat and brass buttons had an annual tilt in favour of the ballot. (Don Quixote having a tilt at a windmill.)—Fort. Review, February 1898, p. 245.

The western labyrinth of hills serves as an invaluable mural barrier of Hindostan. (The “labyrinth” is borrowed from the famous building at Arsinoe in Egypt; and “the mural barrier” from the Great Wall of China.)—Review of Reviews, Jan. 1898.

Mr. L., writing in the Fortnightly, takes up his parable against Lord Salisbury. (Balaam and Balak.)—Ibid. Feb. 1898.

The English, when they are lavishing their derision against the Kaiser and his brother, should remember that they are living in glass houses and ought not to throw stones. (Proverb.)—Ibid. January 1898.

He received his baptism of fire in the Crimea. (Name for spiritual baptism in New Testament.)—Daily Telegraph, 4th March 1898.

It would be disreputable to allude to the Most Serene, Mighty, Beloved Emperor as the drunken Helot of English Jingoism. (The Spartan custom of making the Helots drunk as a caution to Spartan citizens.)—Review of Reviews, Jan. 1898.

You have burnt your ships, and must go forward or perish.—(Agathocles of Syracuse, as soon as he landed at Carthage, burnt his ships so as to render return impossible.)

353. Allegory, Fable, Parable.—These are the same at bottom, and, like metaphors, are based upon resemblance.

An Allegory is a tale consisting of a series of incidents analogous to another series of incidents, which it is intended to illustrate. The object of such a tale is to exemplify and enforce some moral truth; as in Bunyan’s Pilgrim’s Progress.

A Parable is a short allegory, as the Sower, the Ten Virgins, the Prodigal Son, the Grain of Mustard Seed, the Lost Sheep, etc. In the Old Testament the parable of the Ewe Lamb was intended to bring King David to a sense of his guilt by putting a parallel case before him ; and it succeeded.

The Fables of classical literature, in which birds and beasts are made to think, speak, and act like men, all teach some moral, as allegory and parable do.

Class II.—Figures based on Contrast or Difference.

354. Antithesis.—"It is a first principle of the human mind, that we are affected only by change of impression. Among the many consequences of this law is the efficacy of contrast in verbal composition" (Bain).<sup>1</sup>

We cannot use the commonest word, say "weak" for example, without inwardly contrasting it with "strong." Barring proper names, which are mere marks or tokens, and interjections, which are mere sounds, there is not a word in our language, or in fact in any language, which does not imply some other word or words with which it is contrasted in meaning. This law is so universal, that in ordinary speech it is sufficient to mention one word, such as "weak," without adding its negative form "not-strong."

Sometimes, however, it is expedient, "for the sake of increasing or specialising the effect," to mention both of the contrasted terms ; and as this is a departure "from the ordinary use of words," we call it a Figure of Speech. (See definition in § 343.)

Antithesis is a Greek word signifying "setting against" ; that is, setting one word against another.

He can bribe, but he cannot seduce ; he can buy, but he cannot gain ; he can lie, but he cannot deceive.

A friend exaggerates a man's virtues, an enemy his crimes.

Between fame and true honour there is much difference ; the former is a blind and noisy applause ; the latter is an internal and more silent homage.

As Cæsar loved me, I weep for him ; as he was fortunate, I rejoice at it ; as he was valiant, I honour him ; but, as he was ambitious, I slew him. There is tears for his love ; joy for his fortune ; honour for his valour ; and death for his ambition.—SHAKESPEARE.

Though deep, yet clear ; though gentle, yet not dull ;

Strong without rage ; without o'erflowing full.—DENHAM.

There is everywhere a perceptible reaction in favour of government by the capable as opposed to government by the counting of noses.—Review of Reviews, Jan. 1898, p. 6.

Themistocles, being asked whether he would choose to marry his daughter to an indigent man of merit, or to a worthless man of wealth, replied: "I would prefer a man without wealth to wealth without a man."—Spectator, No. 372.

<sup>1</sup> Rhetoric and Composition, Part I. p. 196.

Antithesis should not be sacrificed to brevity. Compare the following, and see which of the two is the more pointed:—

- (a) The posthumous fame of Buddha is far greater than what accrued to him during his life.
 (b) The fame which has gathered round the name of Buddha since his death far exceeds that which accrued to him during his life.

Observe that in (b) not only is one clause balanced against another, but the Present Perfect tense "has gathered" is contrasted with the Past Indefinite "accrued."

355. Epigram: lit. an inscription (a Greek word, epigramma), the name given by the Greeks to a short piece of verse inscribed on a public monument. Brevity is still one of the distinguishing marks of epigram. But the word has been made to denote any kind of pointed saying, and especially one in which the words appear to be contrasted, or at least to contain some kind of incongruity. It is therefore based upon the perception of difference, and is closely allied to Antithesis.

"The epigram is an apparent contradiction in language, which, by causing a temporary shock, rouses our attention to some important meaning underneath" (Bain).

The child is father to the man.—Proverb.

By merit raised to that bad eminence.—MILTON.

Language is the art of concealing thought.—ROCHEFOUCAULD.

Natural beauty, when unadorned, is adorned the most.—

THOMSON.

Conspicuous by its absence.—DISRAELI.

In the midst of life we are in death.—Proverb.

He lived a life of active idleness.

'Tis all thy business, business how to shun.—POPE.

Art lies in concealing art.—Latin Proverb.

Fame is the spur that the clear spirit doth raise

(That last infirmity of noble minds)

To scorn delights and live laborious days.—MILTON.

Ambition first sprung from your blest abodes,

The glorious fault of angels and of gods.—POPE.

He who lives without folly is not so wise as he imagines.—

Proverb.

Affected simplicity is refined artfulness.—Proverb.

A workless workman (a man seeking for work and not finding it).

To damn with faint praise.

Indecision is sometimes a decisive kind of action.—Review of Reviews.

Another such victory, and we are undone.—Saying of Pyrrhus.

Beware the fury of a patient man.—DRYDEN.

A favourite has no friend.—GRAY.

I protest by that glorying in you which I have in Christ Jesus our Lord, I die daily.—1 Cor. xv. 31.

Defend me from my friends.—Proverb.

Silence is sometimes more eloquent than words.

Owe no man anything but to love one another.—New Testament.

Murder, though it have no tongue, will yet speak.

A rule more honoured in the breach than in the observance.

Great wits will sometimes gloriously offend,

And rise to faults which critics dare not mend.—POPE.

His honour rooted in dishonour stood,

And faith unfaithful kept him falsely true.—TENNYSON.

The following phrases, all of common occurrence, can be classed under the heading of epigrammatic: White lie, solemn trifling, a silent rebuke, masterly inactivity, an open secret, a tedious amusement, a pious fraud, noble revenge, expressive silence, shabby genteel.

356. Pun.—In this figure the incongruity consists in using the same word in different senses. The figure is used chiefly for purposes of humour:—

The leopard changes his spots, as often as he goes from one spot to another.

Is life worth living? That depends on the liver.

Ben Battle was a soldier bold

And used to war's alarms;

But a cannon ball shot off his legs,

So he laid down his arms.—HOOD.

The figure is sometimes, however, used seriously. In such instances there is a play upon words not amounting to a pun; § 302.

Home-keeping youth have ever homely wits.—SHAKESPEARE.

Bad accidents happen to bad players.

Evil be to him that evil thinks.

The right divine of kings to govern wrong.—POPE.

In three of these examples the repeated word (home, bad, evil), is used in a different sense in the same sentence. In the remaining example there is almost a pun on the word right. It is really a noun signifying "lawful power or prerogative," but it is made to look like an adjective used as the opposite to "wrong," a real adjective.

357. The Condensed Sentence.—This figure consists in bringing together under one verb or in one enumeration ideas so different, that we should ordinarily give a distinct clause or an entirely distinct sentence to each of them.

The Russian grandees came to Elizabeth's court dropping pearls and vermin.—MACAULAY.

She dropped a tear and her pocket-handkerchief.—DICKENS.

Smelling of musk and of insolence.—TENNYSON.

Corsica is an island swarming with bandits and bandicoots.

There used to be in Paris under the ancient regime a few women of brilliant talents, who violated all the common duties of life and gave very pleasant little suppers. Among these supped and sinned Madame D'Epinay.—MORLEY.

It is by the goodness of God that we have possession of three unspeakably precious things,—freedom of speech, freedom of conscience, and the prudence of using neither.—MARK TWAIN.

Napoleon was equally great in directing a battle or in regulating the length of a ballet-girl's skirts.—Daily Telegraph, 9th Feb. 1898.

Class III.—Figures based on Contiguity.

358. Metonymy: lit. "a change of name" (Gr. meta, change; onoma, name).—This figure consists in describing a thing by some accompaniment or significant adjunct, instead of naming the thing itself. When the sign is such as to strike the imagination more vividly than what it stands for, the language gains in impressiveness.

(a) The symbol for the person or thing symbolised:—

He succeeded to the crown (= royal office).

He is too fond of red tape (= official routine).

From the cradle to the grave (= from childhood to death).

Leather (= shoe-making) pays better than learning.

Grey hairs (= old age or old men) should be respected.

Show deference to the chair (= the chairman's ruling).

Brought to the hammer (= put up to auction).

Backstairs (= secret, intriguing) influence.

Promoted to the bench (= the office of judge).

The woolsack (= the seat, and hence the office, of Lord Chancellor).

Called to the bar (= made a barrister).

Bluff Harry broke into the spence

And turned the cowls (monks) adrift.—TENNYSON.

A 'bus driver, summoned for delaying his 'bus, pleaded that he was hailed by a fare who subsequently changed his mind.

—Daily Telegraph, 9th March 1898.

(b) The instrument for the agent:—

The pen has more influence than the sword.

Give every man thine ear, but few thy voice.

He is a good hand at composition.

To carry fire and sword (= a desolating war) into a country.

The tongue of slander is never silent.

Taliessin is our fullest throat of song.—TENNYSON.

The "resident commissioner" will be the eyes and ears, and to a limited extent the voice, of the High Commissioner.—Times Weekly, 4th March 1898.

How shall we attract men to the colours (= the army)?

In India trade preceded the flag, and the function of the flag is to protect trade.—Daily Telegraph, 25th Feb. 1898.

Sceptre and crown
Must tumble down,
And in the dust be equal laid
With the poor crooked scythe and spade.—JAMES SHIRLEY.

(That is, kings must die as well as peasants).

(c) The container for the thing contained :—

He drank the cup (=the contents of the cup).
He is too fond of the bottle (=the liquor in the bottle).
The kettle (=water in the kettle) boils.
The conquerors smote the city (=inhabitants of the city).
Going over to Rome (=the Church centred in Rome).
He keeps a fine stable (=fine horses).
The gallery (=spectators in the gallery) loudly applauded.
The power of the purse (=the money in the purse).
Oxford (=the Oxford crew) won the last boat-race.
England does not desire war with Russia.
He keeps a sumptuous table (=viands on the table).

(d) The effect for the cause :—

A favourable speed
Ruffle thy mirrored mast.—TENNYSON, In Memoriam.
(Here speed is put for wind, the cause of speed.)

He desperate takes the death
With sudden plunge.—THOMSON.
(Here the death is the angler's hook seized by the fish.)

O for a beaker full of the warm south !—KEATS.

(Here wine is described by the warm south, that is, the warm sun of the south, which ripens the grape from which the wine is produced. This is a metonymy three deep.)

(e) The maker for the thing made ; the place for the thing :—

They have Moses and the prophets.—New Testament.
I have never read Homer (=the poems of Homer.)
This is a common phrase in Tennyson.
I am not fond of Euclid (=geometry).
The miner went without his Davy (=the safety lamp invented by Sir Humphry Davy).
Look it out in Bradshaw (=time-table by Bradshaw).
I am fond of old china (=crockery made in China).
A book bound in morocco (=leather of Morocco).
We have several Turners (=pictures by Turner).
You have a beautiful canary.
A little cayenne will improve the flavour.

(f) The name of a passion for the object of the passion :—

She is coming, my life, my fatc.—TENNYSON.
For Lycidas, your sorrow, is not dead.—MILTON.
At length Erasmus, that great honoured name,
The glory of the priesthood and the shame.—POPE.
The sign of her secret soul (the person sighed for).—OSSIAN.
The Lord is my strength and my song, and is become my salvation.—Old Testament.

Soul of the age !

The applause, delight, and wonder of our stage !

My Shakspeare rise !—BEN JONSON.

The sick man's prayer, the glad divine's theme,

The young man's vision, and the old men's dream.

(The italicised words are all applied by Dryden to the Duke of Monmouth.)

359. Syn-ec-do-che: lit. "the understanding of one thing simultaneously with another" (a Greek word transliterated into English).—This figure is distinguished from Metonymy by the fact that the sign, which is made to represent the thing signified, may be any kind of symbol except an accompaniment, this last being the exclusive property of Metonymy. Perhaps, however, the best way to distinguish these two figures is as follows:—

In synecdoche one name is substituted for another, whose meaning is more or less cognate with its own.

In metonymy one name is substituted for another, whose meaning is wholly foreign to itself.

(a) The less general put for the more general.—The more general the term is, the fainter is the picture; the more special the term, the more vivid the picture. Hence, if a writer desires to be impressive, he should employ words as particular and determinate in sense as the scope of the subject will allow:—

They sank as lead in the mighty waters.—Exodus xv. 10.

Consider the lilies how they grow: they toil not, they spin not; and yet I say unto you that Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these.—Luke xii. 27.

The kiss snatched hasty from the sidelong maid,

On purpose guardless.—THOMSON, Winter.

All hands employed, the royal work grows warm.—DRYDEN.

Return to her? and fifty men dismissed?

No, rather I abjure all roofs, and choose

To be a comrade with the wolf and owl.—SHAKSPEARE, King Lear.

A sail was descried in the distance.

For seven weeks he tramped, a workless worker, the stony-hearted streets of London.—Review of Reviews, Feb. 1898, p. 124.

Moralise capital! you might as well propose to moralise a boa constrictor or tame a tiger.—Ibid.

Do men gather grapes from thorns, or figs from thistles?—New Testament.

That maiden's blood

Is as unchristian as a leopard's.—GEORGE ELIOT, Spanish Gipsy.

(b) An individual for a class.—A well-known individual is sometimes made to represent a class: in this way a Proper noun becomes a Common noun, see § 23, Note 2. Even when a Proper noun is not so used, a general statement is made much more forcible, if it is illustrated by a good individual example:—

A Daniel (very wise judge) come to judgment.—SHAKESPEARE.

Smooth Jacob still robs homely Esau.—BROWNING.

He's Judas to a tittle, that man is.—Ibid.

"That" was the real Saturn of the Genealogy.<sup>1</sup>—MASSON.

I would have such a fellow whipped for o'erdoing

Terzagant; it out-Herods Herod.—SHAKESPEARE.

Sternhold himself he out-Sternholded.—SWIFT.

To gorgonise (to turn into stone by a glance of the eye).—TENNYSON.

You call ours harassing legislation: of course all progressive governments are harassing legislators: doubtless when Moses brought down the law from Sinai, many stout Conservatives present thought the ten commandments harassing legislation.
—BRIGHT'S Speeches.

(c) The more general for the less general.—As the usual tendency of general words is to weaken the effect rather than to strengthen it (see remarks under (a)), this form of Synecdoche is rather uncommon:—

We say vessel for "ship"; measure for "dance" or for "poetry"; the smiling year for the smiling "season," spring or summer; the Christian world for the Christian Church as a whole; liquor for intoxicating drink; action for "battle"; company for a "commercial firm."

Sometimes a very general term is used by way of contempt:—

A poor creature. A wretched individual. A thing of shreds and patches.

Sometimes a very general term is used to avoid a more particular one, which we do not like to mention:—

Thus we say deceased or departed or gone to rest for "dead"; elevated for "tipsy"; if any thing should happen to him for "if he should die"; plain for "ugly," etc.

(d) The concrete for the abstract:—

There is a mixture of the tiger and the ape in the character of a Frenchman.—VOLTAIRE.

I do the most that friendship can,

I hate the Viceroy, love the man.—SWIFT.

An English muse is touched with generous woe,

And in the unhappy man forgets the foe.—ADDISON.

A tyrant's power in rigour is expressed,

The father yearns in the true prince's breast.—DRYDEN.

A healthy lad, and carried in his cheeks

Two steady roses that were five years old.

<sup>1</sup> The author is here comparing the antiquity of the conjunctive pronouns "who," "that," "which," "what." He declares "that" to be the Saturn or great ancestor of all, i.e. the earliest form of Relative.

(e) The abstract for the concrete: see § 27:—

All the rank and fashion came out to see the sight.

The authorities put an end to the tumult.

Pecksniff is one of the characters created by Dickens.

Grace and loveliness, wit and learning were assembled in that meeting.

Up goes my grave Impudence to the maid.—Tatler.

The same figure appears in such phrases as, His Majesty for "king," her ladyship for "lady," his lordship for "lord," His Excellency for "governor" or "viceroi," His Holiness for "pope," His Grace for "archbishop," a justice of the peace for "judge," etc.

(f) The part for a whole:—

A fleet of fifty sail (=ships).

Pin money (a lady's dress allowance).

How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings.—Old Testament.

He is a very good hand at cricket.

A man of seventy winters.<sup>1</sup>

(g) The material for the thing made:—

A foeman worthy of his steel (=sword).

The speaking marble (=statue of marble).

He was buried under this stone (=tablet of stone).

He was bound in irons (=fettters made of iron).

Have you any coppers? (=pence made of copper).

Silver and gold (=money) have I none.—New Testament.

360. Transferred Epithet.—This is a third kind of figure based on Contiguity. When two impressions are associated together in the mind, an epithet that properly belongs to one only is transferred to the other. One of the commonest, though not the only, application of this figure is when some personal quality (§ 347) is transferred to something inanimate:—

He lay all night on a sleepless pillow.

The prisoner was placed in the condemned cell.

Melissa shook her doubtful curls.—TENNYSON.

The long-tormented air.—Ibid.

And bells made Catholic the trembling air.—GEORGE ELIOT.

A lackey presented an obsequious cup of coffee.—CARLYLE.

And drowsy tinklings lull the distant fold.—GRAY.

Such phrases as the following are common:—A virtuous indignation; a happy time; an unlucky remark; a foolish observation; a learned book; a criminal court; the Colonial Office; the Foreign Office; easy circumstances; a fat incumbency; a cheap market; a weary journey; melancholy news; weary romances; an eloquent speech; hysterical appeals; brutal threats; the smiling morn; a furious wave; the angry ocean; a prattling brook; the dimpling waves; the blushing rose; the laughing harvest; the raving tempest; an inexorable law; a busy life; a dishonest calling, etc.

<sup>1</sup> We are now justified perhaps in calling this an example of Synecdoche. But in A.S. the word winter meant "year," and this use of the word seems to have never wholly died out.

Class IV.—Miscellaneous Figures.

361. Innuendo: lit. "by making a nod" (Latin word, but often wrongly spelt in English as inuendo).—This figure consists in hinting a thing without plainly saying it:—

There are two times in a man's life when he should not speculate:—when he cannot afford it, and when he can. (That is, Never speculate at all.)—MARK TWAIN.

The principal difference between a cat and a lie is that a cat has only nine lives.—Ibid.

I do not consult physicians; for I hope to die without them.—SIR W. TEMPLE.

He had a number of coins of the Roman emperors, and a good many more of the later English kings.—FULLER.

There is never a good champagne year, unless there is a good apple crop in Normandy.—LORD PALMERSTON.

We need not pry too deeply into the motives which actuated Li-Hung-Chang in disregarding the interests of his country: Russia does not employ an auditor-general.—Daily Telegraph, 9th September 1898.

362. Irony: lit. "dissimulation" (a Greek word, eironeia).—A mode of speech, in which the writer or speaker says the opposite to what he means, but does not intend or expect his words to be taken in their literal sense. Another name for this figure is sarcasm, a more offensive form of irony:—

An argument to prove that the abolition of Christianity may, as things now stand, be attended with some inconveniences, and perhaps not produce the many good effects proposed thereby.—SWIFT.

The story of the astronomical observations, extending over 31,000 years, sent from Babylon to Aristotle, would be a conclusive proof of the antiquity of the Chaldæan astronomy,—if it were true.—SIR G. C. LEWIS.

Cry aloud: for he is a god; either he is talking, or he is pursuing, or he is in a journey, or peradventure he sleepeth, and must be awaked.—1 Kings xviii. 27.

If ideas were innate, it would save much trouble to many worthy persons.—LOCKE.

Mr. Ewart annually brought forward a motion against capital punishment, and so far succeeded that, according to ordinary parlance, it requires some ingenuity to get hung<sup>1</sup> now, if there is a fair loophole for the Home Office to creep through.—Fortnightly Review, Feb. 1898, p. 245.

<sup>1</sup> This word should have been hanged, not hung. See p. 66, Note 2.

363. Interrogation.—Usually, when we ask a question, we do so for the sake of getting an answer. Whenever we do this, we are using language “in the plain and ordinary way,” and there is no Figure of Rhetoric involved in the process.

There are, however, at least two kinds of instances in which Interrogation is used as a rhetorical device: (a) when the speaker or writer, having asked a question, leaves the hearer or reader to answer it for himself—an indirect mode of affirming or denying, which is sometimes more forcible than direct assertion; (b) when a question is asked for purposes of exposition; here the teacher or writer directs attention to a point by putting it in the form of a question to be solved; having done this, he propounds his own answer. Hence school-manuals are sometimes written in this form.

(a) For purposes of persuasion :—

Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots?—Old Testament.

For the body is not one member, but many. If the foot shall say, Because I am not the hand, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body? And if the ear shall say, Because I am not the eye, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body? If the whole body were an eye, where were the hearing? If the whole were hearing, where were the smelling? —1 Cor. xii. 14-17.

(b) For purposes of exposition :—

What is this world in the high scale of the Almighty's workmanship? A mere shred which, though scattered into nothing, would leave the universe of God one entire scene of greatness and of majesty.—CHALMERS.

The same figure can also be used in soliloquy, as when a person puts a question to himself and gives his own answer :—

Will all great Neptune's ocean wash this blood
Clean from my hand? No: this my hand will rather
The multitudinous seas incarnadine,
Making the green one red.—Macbeth.

364. Exclamation.—What an Interjection is in grammar, Exclamation is in rhetoric. It is a mode of expressing some strong emotion without describing it in set terms. By this means the speaker or writer hopes to communicate the same feeling to the mind of the hearer or reader :—

O, what a fall was there, my countrymen!
Then you, and I, and all of us fell down,
Whilst bloody treason flourish'd over us!—SHAKESPEARE
But she is in her grave, and oh!
The difference to me!—WORDSWORTH.

They (the earliest Christians) were there in their secluded world, clothed internally with light in the kingdom of God, their Father; but without them what a hell!—RENAN.

How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer, son of the morning! how art thou cut down to the ground, which didst weaken the nations!—Isaiah xiv. 12.

365. Personification.—This figure consists in ascribing life, perception, activity, design, passion, or any other property of sentient beings to things inanimate.

This figure has been described already under the name of "personal metaphor" (see § 347). It is very common in prose as well as in poetry. Thus when we say, "The ship broke her shafts" instead of saying "had her shafts broken," we ascribe, however faintly, personality to the ship.

Again, when we say, "Spain accepts the terms offered by the United States," we ascribe personality to the two countries named, unless we prefer to consider it an example of metonymy (§ 358, c). Either explanation will hold good.

366. A-pos-tro-phe: lit. "turning away" (a Greek word, transliterated into Roman character).—By this figure the speaker or writer suddenly breaks off from the tenor of his speech or narrative, and addresses in the second person some person or thing, whether absent or present. If something inanimate is addressed, it is personified. If some dead person is addressed, he is addressed as if he were alive.

Unhappy man!<sup>1</sup> and must you be swept into the grave, unnoticed and unnumbered, and no friendly tear be shed for your sufferings, or mingled with your dust?—ROBERT HALL.

Frailty, thy name is woman!—SHAKESPEARE.

Hast thou a charm to stay the morning star

In his steep course? So long he seems to pause

On thy bald awful head, O Sovran Blanc!—COLERIDGE.

Departed spirits of the mighty dead,

Ye that at Marathon and Leuctra bled!—CAMPBELL.

367. Vision.—By this figure the writer or speaker, in relating something past, or describing some anticipated future, employs the present tense instead of the past or future, and thus makes it appear as if the event were actually passing before his eyes. The same figure can be used for describing something neither past nor future, but purely imaginary.

(a) Some past event. This is called the Historic Present (§ 112, e).

The sack and carnage of Delhi lasted from three o'clock in the morning until three in the afternoon. The streets echo with the shouts of brutal soldiery and with the cries and shrieks of the inhabitants. The atmosphere reeks with blood. Houses are set on fire, and hundreds perish in the flames. Husbands kill their wives, and then destroy themselves. Women throw themselves into the wells. Children are slaughtered without mercy, and infants are cut to pieces at their mothers' breasts.—WHEELER'S India.

<sup>1</sup> This was said in reference to the wounded in war.

(b) Some anticipated future :—

I see and behold this great city, the ornament of the earth and the capital of all nations, suddenly involved in one conflagration. I see before me the slaughtered heaps of citizens lying unburied in the midst of the ruined country. The furious countenance of Cethegus rises to my view, while with a savage joy he is triumphing in your miseries.—CICERO.

(c) Something imaginary :—

What beckoning ghost along the moonlight shade
Invites my steps, and points to yonder glade ?

'Tis she. But why that bleeding bosom gored ?
Why dimly gleams the visionary sword ?—POPE.

Is this a dagger which I see before me,
The handle toward my hand ? Come, let me clutch thee.
I have thee not, and yet I see thee still.

Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible
To feeling as to sight ? or art thou but
A dagger of the mind ; a false creation,
Proceeding from the heat-oppresed brain ?—SHAKESPEARE.

These lines describe the "vision" seen by Macbeth, just before he entered the chamber of Duncan to murder him.

368. Climax, Anti-climax.—It adds much to the impressiveness of a sentence or group of sentences, if the mind of the reader is made to ascend from a lower thought to a higher by successive steps ; for it is as difficult for the mind to grasp a final issue by a single step, as for the body to ascend a ladder by a single rung.

In a climax (Greek word for "ladder") the first part of a sentence prepares the mind for the middle, and the middle for the end :—

It is an outrage to bind a Roman citizen ; to scourge him is an atrocious crime ; to put him to death is almost a parricide ; but to crucify him, what shall I call it ?—CICERO, Contra Verrem.

His reason had been outraged at Lourdes ; his illusions were dissipated in Rome ; his shaken faith comes to utter shipwreck in Paris.—Times Weekly, 4th March 1898.

The opposite process, by which the thought descends from a higher level to a lower, is called Anti-climax or Bathos (Greek for "depth"). This may be done intentionally,—for point, humour, or any other purpose,—or it may be done through an inadvertence, in which case the effect will be feeble or even ludicrous :—

Here thou, great Anna, whom three realms obey,

Dost sometimes counsel take, and sometimes tea.—POPE.

The autocrat of Russia possesses more power than any other man on earth, but he cannot stop a sneeze.—MARK TWAIN.

The following is an example of inadvertence, where the strong word “necessity” is followed by the weaker word “desirability” :—

It would seem almost superfluous to point out the propriety, and necessity, and desirability of appointing female officers.—Fortnightly Review, Feb. 1898, p. 282.

369. Hy-per-bo-le (a Greek word of four syllables, signifying exaggeration).—This is usually a fault. But when it is resorted to for the sake of heightening the effect, and provided that the departure from truth does not offend one’s sense of the truthful, it is a recognised Figure of Speech :—

They were swifter than eagles, they were stronger than lions.—David’s Lament for Saul and Jonathan.

All the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand.—SHAKESPEARE (Lady Macbeth).

That execrable sum of all villainies, commonly called the Slave Trade.—WESLEY.

My dust would hear her and beat,

Had I lain for a century dead ;

Would start and tremble under her feet,

And blossom in purple and red.—TENNYSON, Maud.

Such examples as the following appear, however, to be extravagant and artificial :—

The sky shrunk upward with unusual dread,

And trembling Tiber dived beneath his bed.—DRYDEN.

I saw their chief, tall as a rock of ice ; his spear, the blasted fir ; his shield, the rising moon ; he sat on the shore, like a cloud of mist on a hill.—OSSIAN.

370. Repetition.—Another mode of giving expression to intense feeling or conviction is by repeating the principal word, or adding equivalent words (§ 252). Repetition, when it is used with no rhetorical effect, that is, when it is a fault in composition, is called Tautology or Pleonasm (§ 295) :—

He sung Darius great and good,

Fallen, fallen, fallen, fallen,

Fallen from his high estate,

And weltering in his blood.—DRYDEN.

Faithful found
 Among the faithless, faithful only he.
 MILTON, Par. Lost.
 And like a rat without a tail,
 I'll do, I'll do, and I'll do.

SHAKSPEARE, Macbeth.

You cannot, sir, take from me anything that I would more willingly part withal, except my life, except my life, except my life.—SHAKSPEARE, Hamlet.

Alone, alone, all, all alone,
 Alone on a wide, wide sea.

COLERIDGE, Ancient Mariner.

So runs my dream ; but what am I ?
 An infant crying in the night,
 An infant crying for the light,
 And with no language but a cry !

TENNYSON, In Memoriam.

A multiplicity of words meaning the same, or almost the same, thing can be used to intensify the effect :—

How weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable,
 Seem to me all the uses of this world !—SHAKSPEARE.
 But now I'm cabined, confined, cribbed, confined.—Ibid.
 All is little, and low, and mean among us.—BOLINGBROKE.
 A man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief.—Old Test.
 Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows.—Ibid.
 What is man, that thou art mindful of him ? or the son of man, that thou visitest him ?—Ibid.

371. Lit-o-tes (a Greek word signifying plainness, simplicity). The name is now given to that figure of speech by which we place a negative before some word, to indicate a strong affirmative in the opposite direction :—

He is no dullard (=decidedly clever).

A citizen of no mean (=a distinguished) city.—New Test.

Note.—By this figure such words as “infamous,” “unprofessional,” “unchristian,” etc., all of which have merely negative prefixes, have acquired a strongly affirmative sense in the opposite direction, (see § 325, under Non).

372. Euphemism (Gr. eu, well ; and phemi, I speak). By this figure we speak in gentle and favourable terms of some person, object, or event which is ordinarily seen in a less pleasing light (§ 291) :—

China is a country where you often get different accounts of the same thing (=where many lies are told).—Lord Salisbury's Speech.

He kneeled down, and cried with a loud voice, Lord, lay not this sin to their charge. And, when he had said this, he fell asleep.—Death of Stephen, Acts vii. 60.

Discord fell on the music of his soul; the sweet sounds and wandering lights departed from him; yet he wore no less a loving face, although he was so broken-hearted.—E. B. BROWNING, Cowper's Madness.

373. Circumlocution: "saying a thing in a roundabout way" instead of saying it at once. This figure may be used either for poetic ornament, as in example (1); or for giving greater prominence to a thought, as in example (2); or for Euphemism, as in example (3); or for humour, as in example (4):—

- (1) The sightless couriers of the air (= the winds).—SHAKESPEARE.
- (2) The very source and fount of day (= the sun).
Is flecked with wandering isles of night.—TENNYSON.
- (3) She declared that neither she nor her husband was suffering from the domination of stimulant (= was tipsy).—Daily Telegraph, 9th March 1898.
- (4) The driver of the engine played a sweet symphony with the steam whistle, then he caused it to whoop wildly, and finally made the steam hiss and puff like Vesuvius in a state of eruption; but all was in vain, the cow still held the line.—Ibid.

374. Alliteration.—The repetition of the same letter or syllable at the beginning of two or more words:—

Ruin seize thee, ruthless king!—GRAY.

A strong man struggling with the storms of fate.—ADDISON.

Glittering through the gloomy glades.—POPE.

A load of learning lumbering in his head.—Ibid.

Deep in a dungeon was the captive cast,

Deprived of day, and held in fetters fast.—DRYDEN.

Our dreadful marches to delightful measures.—SHAKESPEARE.

The maudlin prince of mournful sonneteers.—BYRON.

Wilful waste makes woeful want.—Proverb.

375. Sense suggested by sound: Onomatopœia.—An impression can sometimes be strengthened, if "the sound," as Pope says, "is made an echo to the sense." This device is more commonly used in poetry than in prose; yet it is common in prose also. In fact, we have a considerable number of words whose origin is clearly imitative. "A drum," says Smollett, "is not inaptly so called, from the noise and emptiness of the entertainment."

We still for the most part recognise the imitative intent of such words as the clucking of hens, cackling of geese, gobbling of turkeys, quacking of ducks, croaking of frogs, cawing of rooks, cooing of doves, hooting of owls, booming of bitterns, chirping of sparrows, twittering of swallows, chattering of pies or monkeys, neighing or winnying of horses, purring or mewing of cats, yelping, howling, growling, snarling of dogs, grunting or squealing of hogs, bellowing of bulls, lowing of oxen, bleating of sheep, baaing of lambs."—Preface to "Wedgwood's Dictionary."

On the same principle, authors have sometimes used words in such a way that their sound may seem to suggest the sense :—

- (1) Grate on their scrannel pipes of wretched straw.—MILTON.
 (2) Alarm-guns booming through the midnight air.—W. IRVING.
 At even the beetle boometh
 Athwart the thicket lone.—TENNYSON.

Hence a sudden and rapid advance of some article of commerce, accompanied with noisy excitement and hollowness of substance, has been called a boom.

- (3) So he with difficulty and labour hard
 Moved on, with difficulty and labour he.—MILTON.

Here the difficulty of scanning the first line, with the repetition of the same words in the second, suggests the difficulty with which Satan, by repeated efforts, made his way through Chaos to our earth.

- (4) All unawares,
 Fluttering his pennons vain, plump down he drops
 Ten thousand fathom deep.—MILTON.

Here the precipitate descent of Satan is suggested by the sound of the second line.

- (5) Rend with tremendous sound your ears asunder
 With gun, drum, trumpet, blunderbuss, and thunder.—POPE.

- (6) Eternal wrath
 Burnt after them to the bottomless pit.—MILTON.

Here the sudden drop of the accentuation at the close of the second line, where an accent is indispensable to the metre, suggests the sudden and precipitate fall of the rebellious angels from heaven to hell.

CHAPTER XXVII.—ENLARGEMENT OF VOCABULARY BY METAPHOR AND METONYMY.

376. Decay of Metaphors.—We may detect three different stages in the life of metaphors. It is only by the last two,—both of which are stages of decay,—that the vocabulary of a language is enlarged.

(1) In the first stage the word or words still have a purely figurative signification. In using them the only thought that strikes us is the similarity (in some particular point) between the two things compared, and we are fully conscious all the while that we are employing a figure of speech.

Any member of the Viceroyal Council (in India), who proposes any extension of British sovereignty among the hills, should do so with a rope round his neck.—Review of Reviews, Jan. 1898, p. 8.

Clearly the first thing is the maintenance of the navy, without which we are merely a huge plum pudding ready for the spoons of our hungry neighbours.—Ibid. p. 9.

The young man about London or Paris was branded as a fanged, but handless, spider, that sucks indeed and stings, but cannot spin,—this with an intensified sibilation, which made the whole sentence a hiss.—Century Magazine, Feb. 1898.

After a brief discussion the House sailed smoothly and quietly into the shallow and becalmed waters of the Supplementary Estimates.—Daily Telegraph, 25th Feb. 1898.

(2) In the second stage the signification of the word is divided between the literal and the figurative. The original or literal meaning is still there; but the figurative has become so familiar that we are only partially conscious that any such figure exists. In this stage the decay of the metaphor has begun, and possibly it may go no further.

The point of a needle (lit.). I differ with you on that point (fig.).

Draw a straight line (lit.). A clear line of argument (fig.).

His height is six feet (lit.). It was the height of rudeness (fig.).

A smooth surface (lit.). A smooth tongue (fig.).

The key to a lock (lit.). The key to a problem (fig.).

(3) In the third stage the original or literal meaning has gone quite out of use, and nothing but the figurative remains. In fact, the figurative has become the literal. This is the final stage of decay to which a metaphor can come. (It is conceivable, however, that this acquired literal sense might itself some day acquire a metaphorical sense and be eventually ousted by it like its predecessor.)

Perspicuity, at first "transparency of medium"; now "clearness of diction."

Melancholy, at first "black bile"; now "low spirits."

Arduour, at first "physical heat"; now "enthusiasm," "zeal."

Cynosure, at first "dog's tail," a constellation; now "a centre of attraction."

Acuteness, at first "sharpness of edge"; now "quickness of mind."

It is not till a metaphor has decayed, either in whole or in part, that it can be said to enlarge the vocabulary of a language. Even then it is not a new word added to the vocabulary, but an old word invested with a new sense. If the language gains nothing in quantity, it gains much in quality, that is, in expressiveness. For instance, the limitation of the word "perspicuity" to the sense of "transparency of diction" is a distinct gain, so long as the word "transparency" is available for other connections.

“Perspicuity” is more expressive than “clearness,” because the latter word can be applied to many kinds of things besides diction.

Whether any given word has reached the final, or is only passing through the earlier, stage of decay is a point on which different opinions might be held. Some persons, for instance, might still be to some extent conscious of using a figure of speech in the word “ardour,” while to others “zeal” might seem to be the only literal meaning that the word ever had.

377. Nouns : figurative uses, that have become literal :—

A ray of hope. A shade of doubt. A flash of wit. An outburst of temper. The fire of passion. A gleam of delight. The light of knowledge. A flight of fancy. A spark of humour. The gloom of despair. The wreck of his hopes. The spur of ambition. The torments of jealousy. The reins of office. The anger of the tempest. The feast of reason. The tide of democracy. The fall of empires. In the sunset of his years. His prosperity is on the decline (going down). His reputation is on the wane. The pangs of remorse. The sting of conscience. The impulse (driving on) of revenge. The  motive (moving power) of fear. The wish was father to the thought. The decadence (falling down or falling off) of that firm.

Hand : literally the bodily organ so called :—

To be hand and glove with a person (to be on terms of friendship as close as a hand is to a glove). The hand of a clock (because it points). A horse fourteen hands high (a hand's breadth). On all hands (on all sides, because the hand is on the side). The Protestants were then on the winning hand (side, Milton). He was their right-hand man (most useful co-operator).

Foot : literally the bodily organ so called :—

Things are now on a good footing (basis). The foot (base) of the mountain. The foot of a table (that on which the table rests). The foot (lowest part, fag-end) of a procession. A four-foot rule (measure of length). An Iambic foot (a measure in prosody). To put one's foot down (make a resolute resistance). To put the best foot foremost (to do one's best and lose no time about it). To set on foot (start, set in motion). To trample under foot (spurn, oppress).

Body : literally the physical structure as opposed to mind :—

Rivers that run up into the body (mainland) of Italy (Addison). A body (band) of troops. A body (system or collection) of laws. A body (mass) of cold air (Huxley). This wine has no body (substance). The body (nave) of a church. The body politic (the state).

Branch : literally what grows from a tree :—

The branch of a river. The branch of an antler. The branch of a chandelier. The branch of a railway. The branch of a subject (as geometry is a branch of mathematics). The younger branch of a family. They were exterminated root and branch (totally).

Root : lit. the underground portion of a plant :—

The root of a tooth (the part inside the gum). The root of a nail. The root of a cancer. The love of money is the root (source, main cause) of all evil. The root (ancestral origin) of a family. The root (original elements) of a word. The roots (lowest parts) of mountains (Southey). Square root, cube root (in arithmetic). That opinion struck root (took a firm hold on the mind).

Stream: lit. a current of water:—

A stream of air. A stream of lava from a volcano. A stream of light. A stream of words. A stream of sand. The stream (continuous acts) of benevolence. A stream of eloquence. The stream of emigration.

Air: lit. the fluid which we breathe:—

The keen, the wholesome air (surrounding influence) of poverty (Wordsworth). An air (melody) in music. A lofty air (demeanour). He gives himself airs (gives full vent to his conceit).

Face: lit. the countenance, visage:—

The face of a clock. The faces of a cube. The face of a type. We put a good face on it. He had the face (effrontery) to do this. To fly in the face of danger. The face of a gun. The face of a compass.

Arm: lit. a limb of the human body:—

The arm (branch) of a tree. An arm (inlet) of the sea. The arm of a chair. The arm (strength, might) of the law. To hold at arm's length (keep at a distance).

Head: lit. that part of the body which is supported by the neck:—

The head of a pin. The head of a cabbage. A river has a head, where it heads among the highlands. An army, a school, a sect has its head. A class has its head. The head-student of a class; the head-master of a school. The head of a coin. A sermon has its heads, as subdivided by the different headings. Let us hear no more on that head. A sore comes to a head. We give a horse his head, when we let it go as fast as it likes. This beer has a good head on. They sailed up to the head of the bay. I cannot make head or tail of what he says. That was the head and front of his offence.

378. Adjectives: figurative uses, that are now literal:—

Brazen impudence; brazen-faced (shameless); a stony heart; a rosy complexion; a lame (halting, inefficient) excuse; snowy (as white as snow) locks; a fiery (violent) temper; fiery speech; burning passion; an angry sore; a piercing wind; a brilliant piece of eloquence; a stormy discussion; a weighty argument; a crystal stream; a transparent falsehood; a groundless excuse; a well-laid plan; a treacherous calm; a sullen sky; a frowning rock, etc.

Golden (literally made of gold).—A golden harvest; the golden grain; golden hair; a golden opportunity; a golden sunset; golden silence; a golden rainfall; he won golden opinions; the golden mean; the golden age; the golden rule—"Do to others as you would be done by"; a golden wedding. (All these metaphors are based either on the colour or on the value of gold. "Golden" has so entirely lost its literal sense, that we are now obliged to say "a gold watch," not "a golden watch.")

Iron (as adjective; literally made of iron).—Iron (unflinching) courage; iron (unyielding) firmness; an iron (inflexible) will; an iron (very strong) constitution; an iron (dark) grey. (These metaphors are based on the hardness, solidity, or colour of the metal.)

Dead (literally, inanimate, that from which life has departed).—A dead language (no longer spoken); faith without works is dead, being alone (New Test.); dead (inert) matter; he is a dead shot (never fails to hit); a dead (unalterable) certainty; a dead (motionless) calm; a dead (totally unconscious) sleep; he is dead (callous) to all sense of honour; the dead (most silent hours) of night; a dead (unchanging) level; a dead weight (a weight which cannot help to raise itself); a dead-lock (a stoppage which cannot be removed); a dead (irrecoverable) loss; a dead ball (one that is excluded from the rest of the game); dead (unproductive) capital; a dead heat (a race without results); dead (spiritless) colouring; he made a dead set (determined attack) at me; he was dead against my proposal (opposed to it unconditionally); dead-alive (alive, but without vitality).

Light (literally, what can be easily lifted, not heavy).—A light affliction; a light heart; light food (easy of digestion); a troop of light horse (lightly armed); a light touch on the piano; a light coin (clipped, below the standard weight); a light (sandy) soil.

Simple (literally "single-fold," "one at a time").—A simple (plain, unadorned) dress; simple (unmitigated) rubbish; simple-minded (genuine); simple (unaffected) manners; a simple (direct) statement; simple (plain) diet; a simple (lowly, unpretentious) husbandman; a simple sentence (with only one Finite verb); a simple body (an atom, indivisible, ultimate); a simple equation (with only one unknown quantity); simple interest (not compound).

379. Verbs: figurative uses, that have become literal:—

To employ means; to contract habits; to carry a matter to extremes; to cast one's eyes on a thing; to prosecute studies; to pass over in silence; to gain celebrity; to pocket an insult; to pick a quarrel; to curry favour; to harbour malice; to cultivate an acquaintance; to indulge in hopes; to take offence; to play the fool; to put a question; to triumph over difficulties; to stick to a point; to draw up a scheme; to pursue a subject, etc.

Strike (literally, to hit a thing with some force).—They shall strike (throw) the blood on the two side posts (Exodus xii. 7). To strike (stamp) coin from metal. The tree has struck root (thrust it into the ground). The drums strike up (begin to play) a march. A new idea has struck me (occurred to me). To strike (lower) sail. We struck (unpitched, took down) our tents. The men have struck (left off) work. To strike a match (ignite it by concussion). To strike (make or ratify by joining hands) a bargain. They struck (hit upon) the trail. The clock struck (sounded the hour of) twelve. This strikes (impresses) me as strange. He struck (entered suddenly) into the conversation. A man well stricken (advanced) in years.

Catch (literally, to seize anything in motion, with the effect of holding it).—To catch him in his words (entangle him; Mark xii. 13). To catch a tune (seize with the mind); to catch an argument; to catch a meaning. The house caught fire; to catch cold, catch measles. To catch one asleep (come upon unexpectedly). To catch a train (reach it in time). To catch one's eye (attract notice). To catch one up (interrupt any one captiously, while in the act of speaking; or to overtake some one in front).

Break (literally, to sever by fracture, divide by violence; as to break a seal, to break a lock, to break a chain, to break a window).—To break the news (disclose or lay open for the first time; especially ill news). To break (transgress or violate) a law. To break (interrupt) silence. The French cavalry were not able to break the British squares (throw into disorder). His health has been much broken (impaired). To break a colt (train it for work). To break down (crush) opposition. To break one of a habit (make him leave it off). He broke through the enemy's lines. To break up house (give it up entirely). The ladder that he fell against broke (lessened the violence of) the fall. To break a fast (take food after a long interval). To break new ground (open it out for the first time; to enter upon some new project). That grief broke his heart (overwhelmed him with grief). To break a lance (engage in a contest). To break the ice (introduce a new subject).

Intransitive uses.—The day begins to break (dawn). Measles broke out. The coach broke down. I am afraid he will break (become bankrupt). The bank broke (became insolvent). The horse broke into a gallop. The school—the frost—has broken up. His partner broke with him (dissolved partnership).

Cut (literally, to make incision with a sharp edge).—That sneer cut (wounded) him to the quick. He was not cut out (suited by temperament) for a lawyer. One line cuts (passes through) another at right angles. He cut me (refused to recognise me). He cut (gave up) the profession. To cut a strange figure (show oneself in a strange character). To cut down (reduce) expenses. He was cut off (died) in the height of his career. To cut a person short (suddenly stop him from speaking). The child is cutting its teeth (thrusting them through the gums). To cut the cards (divide the pack).

Run (literally, the action of running, used of men and other animals).—To run into debt. He runs on (continues talking) from one subject to another. Rivers run into the sea. The fire ran through the forest. Her blood ran cold. Iron ores run (melt) freely in the fire. This train runs to York. The mill runs (is at work) six days in the week. The engine runs day and night. The road runs (has a direction) east and west. His plans run counter to mine. The sentence runs thus (is worded thus). The plant is running to seed. Colours run (do not remain fixed) in the washing. The lease has ninety years to run (continue in force). A running sore (one that continues to discharge matter). The ship ran (moved swiftly) before the wind. To run down a coast (sail along it). The money has run out (has all been spent). The cup runs over (is so full that the contents overflow). He ran through his money (spent it all rapidly).

Transitive uses.—To run a thread into a needle's eye. To run a nail into one's foot. They ran the ship aground. To run a railway (cause it to be made) through a country. To run (incur) a risk. To run an hotel (keep it at work). To run a blockade (get through it without being caught). To run a man down (disparage, traduce). He ran him hard (very nearly caught him up). To run up a bill or a house (cause it to rise rapidly).

380. Prepositions.—There is scarcely any part of speech that has lent itself more readily to metaphorical usage than prepositions. Their first and literal use was to express relations in space; they were next applied metaphorically to relations in time; and then gradually to many other kinds of relations.

About (on + by + out): lit. just on the outside of, very near in point of locality; as, "he has a comforter about his neck"; "have you any money about you?" Metaphorical uses.—It is about seven o'clock (nearness of time); he is about to be married (nearness of state); he went about his work in earnest (occupation); I have heard about it (concerning).

Above (on + by + up): lit. in a higher place; as, "the head is above the neck." Metaphorical uses.—He stayed with us above a week (longer in time); above a hundred (more in number or amount); he is above such meanness (better or higher in quality).

After: lit. backwards or behind in place; as, "I will enter after you." Metaphorical uses.—He arrived after dark (sequence in time); after all you have told me I am convinced (sequence in effect); he is seeking after wealth (sequence in pursuit); he takes after his father (sequence in imitation); after all the advice given him, he did the very opposite (sequence in contrast).

Against: lit. opposition of place; as, "he is leaning against the wall." Metaphorical uses.—Against my interest (aim or purpose); against the day of battle (in preparation for); four pupils have left against three last term (in comparison with).

At: lit. the locality of an action or thing, the point reached or desired; as, "he is not at home"; "the dog sprang at him." Metaphorical uses.—At four o'clock (time); at his ease (state); at a certain price (value); he plays well at cricket (sphere of action); stand up at the given signal (time and consequence combined). Do this at your convenience (time and state combined).

Before (by + fore): lit. in front of, the opposite to "after" or "behind"; as, "he stands before the door." Metaphorical uses.—The train starts before ten A.M. (priority in time); death before dishonour (priority in quality, preference).

Behind (by + hind): lit. at the back of (in the relation of space); as, "the dog runs behind its master." Metaphorical uses.—The train is behind time (lateness); there is a smile behind his frown (disguise, concealment).

Below (by + low): lit. in a lower place, opposite to "above"; as, "he stands below me in class." Metaphorical uses.—The number was below ten (less than); his attainments are below yours (inferior in quality).

Beneath (by + neath): lit. in a lower position; as, "he sat beneath the shade." Metaphorical use.—His conduct is beneath contempt (inferior in quality, not even worth despising).

Beside, besides (by + side): lit. at the side of (in the relation of place); as, "he is beside you (at your side)." Metaphorical uses.—That remark is beside the question (near the question, but not in it); irrelevancy); besides advising, he gave them money (in addition to). (The difference of sense attached to beside and besides respectively is a mere matter of idiom.)

By: lit. proximity in space, "close to"; as, "come and sit by me"; "he lives by himself," that is, with no one near but himself, alone. Metaphorical uses.—Get up by sunrise (time); he did his duty by his children (towards); he was treated well by me (agency); seize him by the neck (instrument or point of action); cleverer than A. by a good deal (amount); sold by the bushel (unit of measurement); he swore by heaven (adjuration).

For: lit. in front of, hence direction; as, "he started for home." Metaphorical uses.—Imprisoned for life (time, duration); for what offence was he punished (cause or reason); for all his learning he has no sense (in spite of); he sold his horse for a small sum (exchange); he fought hard for his friends (in behalf of); do not translate word for word (conformity); this is not fit for food (purpose).

From: lit. the opposite to "by," "at," or "to"; remoteness, distance, implying either rest or motion; as, "he is from home," "he had gone from home." Metaphorical uses.—From morning to night (time); sprung from noble ancestors (origin); from all we hear he is mad (inference); this was done from spite (motive); a wise man is easily known from a fool (discrimination); he is going from bad to worse (change of condition).

Of: lit. separation or movement from something, but at a near distance; as, "within a few miles of the town." Metaphorical uses.—He died of fever (cause); he comes of a high family (source); deprived of his appointment (removal); a man of strong will (quality); a box of books (contents); a box made of leather (material); the house of his father (possession); a sum of forty pounds (apposition); I never heard of it (concerning); lame of one leg (point of reference); he gave us of his best (partition); the love of parents (subject); the love of parents (object); hated of all men (agency).

On: lit. rest on the outside of a thing; as, "I place my hand on the table." Metaphorical uses.—On Saturday last (time); he lives on his father (dependence); on these terms (condition or basis); an attack on my house (direction); on that subject (concerning).

In: lit. rest in the interior of anything; as, "he is not in the house." Metaphorical uses.—In a bad temper, in motion (state); he will come back in an hour (at the end of an hour, time).

Over: lit. above or beyond anything in space; as, "the sun shines over the earth," "his house is over the way." Metaphorical uses.—He was absent over two weeks (beyond in time); he is placed over me (authority); he has been promoted over my head (precedence).

Through: lit. across the interior of anything; as, "bore a hole through that plank." Metaphorical uses.—He worked hard all through the term (duration of time); he has passed through many troubles (state, circumstances); through your help I succeeded (cause); all this was done through envy (motive).

To: lit. motion towards anything in space; as, "he returned to his country." Metaphorical uses.—To-night (time); to all appearances (conformity, adaptation); three to one (proportion); they fought to the last man (limit); to their great surprise (effect); he came to see us (purpose; Gerund. Infin.).

Under: lit. situation beneath something; as, "he sat under the tree." Metaphorical uses.—The house is under repairs (condition); under these circumstances (subjection); he travelled under the guise of a monk (concealment).

With: lit. nearness in space; as, "he lives with his mother." Metaphorically it denotes nearness in a friendly, hostile, or neutral sense:—His views accord with mine (agreement); he gets up with the sun (nearness in time); one king fought with another (nearness in hostility, opposition); I have parted with my servant (separation); I do this with pleasure (concomitant circumstance); he is popular with his pupils (reference); with all his wealth he is not contented (in spite of); shot with a gun (instrument); treated with respect (manner).

381. Metaphors limited to a particular point.—If we expect a metaphor to hold good through a series of resemblances, we are certain to be disappointed. A resemblance is limited to one particular point at a time; and if the metaphor serves to set this point in a clear light, it has answered the purpose of enlarging the vocabulary.

For instance, we say of a river that it has its head in the highlands from which it springs. But we call its extremity its mouth (not feet), because that is the opening through which sea-water is poured into its channel. The channel of a river is called its bed; yet the river is said to run in its channel. The tributaries of a river are called its feeders; yet these enter the river at its sides, not at its mouth, as it would do if the metaphor were preserved. These again are at one time called branches, as of a tree; at another, arms, as of a man. Each of these metaphors suits its own purpose; and they must not be expected to have any consistency with one another.

382. Metaphors indispensable.—The importance of metaphors is best seen in the fact that many of our ideas cannot be put into words without them. Few, if any, of our mental operations or faculties can be expressed except by words that originally denoted something sensible or non-mental.

Thus perception originally meant taking hold of; conception, laying hold of with both hands, or on all sides; apprehension, seizing or grasping with the hand; recollection, gathering things together again; inspiration, breathing into; imagination, drawing a visible picture; deliberation, weighing in a pair of scales; emotion, moving out or being moved out; expression, squeezing out; sagacity, quickness of scent; acuteness, sharpness of edge; suspense, hanging up; penetration, making a hole through a thing; motive, that which produces motion, etc.

Many of the technical terms in music have been furnished by metaphors; as, scale (lit. a ladder), chromatic (lit. what gives colour), key (lit. what turns a lock), key-note, sharp, flat.

383. Enlargement of Vocabulary by Metonymy.—

Metonymy, like metaphor, to a smaller, but still an appreciable, extent has helped to enlarge our vocabulary. In metonymy, as in metaphor, it is the decay of the figure that invests the word with a new literal meaning. In both words the first syllable is from Greek meta, which signifies change, transfer, substitution,—the transfer in the case of metaphor being based on Similarity, in that of metonymy on Contiguity (§ 344). We speak of the legs of a chair or of a bed, because their uses are similar to those of the legs of animals. This is Metaphor, based on Resemblance. On the other hand, we speak of the back and seat of a chair, because they are associated in the mind with the back and seat of a person using the chair, and we speak of the head and foot of a bed, because they are associated in the mind with the head and foot of the sleeper. This is Metonymy, based on Contiguity. No one, when he speaks of the back and seat of a chair, or of the head and foot of a bed, is conscious that he is using a figure of speech. The figure has decayed; the names that were once figurative are now literal.

Original meaning.

Transferred meaning.

|  |                                      |
|--|--------------------------------------|
| Style : a thing to write with . . .            | manner of composition.               |
| Rubric : words printed red . . .               | directions contained in the words.   |
| Guinea : on the west coast of Africa . . . . . | a coin of Guinea gold.               |
| Fare : what is paid for conveyance . . . . .   | the passenger who pays it.           |
| China : on the south-east of Asia . . . . .    | the crockery made there.             |
| Security : safety . . . . .                    | what is deposited for safety.        |
| Army : a multitude of armed men . . . . .      | the military profession.             |
| Navy : a multitude of ships . . . . .          | the naval profession.                |
| Force : energy, strength . . . . .             | a band of soldiers.                  |
| Foot : part of the body . . . . .              | infantry.                            |
| Horse : a four-legged animal . . . . .         | cavalry.                             |
| Uniform : of the same form . . . . .           | official costume.                    |
| Court : chamber of justice . . . . .           | the presiding judge.                 |
| Brief : (adj.) concisely worded . . . . .      | (noun) statement of a client's case. |
| Porte : gate of the Sultan's palace . . . . .  | the Sultan and his ministers.        |
| Urbane : belonging to a city . . . . .         | courteous, polite.                   |
| Rustic : belonging to the country . . . . .    | uncultivated, unrefined.             |

Exercises.

I. (a) Point out the literal meaning of the italicised words in the following sentences. (b) Expand each metaphor into a simile.

1. The attitude of England has been defensive throughout.
2. That opinion is based on facts, not fancies.

3. There is something very unpractical in beating about the bush, instead of coming to the point at once.
4. The Indian post office will soon bid for a first place among the postal administrations of the globe.—Times Weekly, 4th March 1898.
5. All his hopes were blighted.
6. By closing the ports, they aimed a deadly blow at British commerce.
7. Any statement of policy that he might draw up would, in its promulgation, blow his policy into the air.—Review of Reviews, Jan. 1898.
8. To expect anything from the Chinese is beyond the bounds of reason or of hope.
9. Trade-unionism has acquired a hold on every branch of industry.
10. While congratulating him on the excellence of his speech, I must condole with him on the badness of his brief.
11. Our military system has broken down.
12. Kindness makes him brim over with gratitude.
13. Let us enjoy a brush across the country.
14. She was admired for her bushy eyebrows.
15. He played his cards so well that he was taken into partnership.
16. The defects of his style were that he spoke with a certain choppiness and jerkiness.
17. It is a dangerous thing for a writer to coin new words.
18. This year has witnessed the collapse of the representative system at Vienna.
19. This symptom lends colour to the prevailing belief.
20. The mention of life-boats conjures up painful recollections.
21. This would be courting almost certain ruin.
22. His efforts were crowned with success.
23. Proverbs are homely precepts in which the wisdom of many centuries has been crystallised.
24. Obsequious men take their cue from their patrons.
25. It is simply the scandal of the Panama Canal disguised under the name of the African railways.—Times Weekly, 4th March 1898.
26. The footsteps of debt are always dogged by crime.
27. We cannot go on drifting like this any longer with impunity.
28. Trade-unionism is driving trade out of the country.
29. He always has a capable man at his elbow.
30. In common with most epidemics, frequency has more than once deprived a war-fever of its malignancy.—Daily Telegraph, 25th Feb. 1898.
31. Belief is extinct in France, and with good reason.
32. War-fever is at once a popular political stimulant and a lucrative financial expedient.—Daily Telegraph, 25th Feb. 1898.
33. Facts which come out during the present trial throw a flood of light upon this question.—Ibid.
34. Three gaudy standards flout the pale blue sky.—BYRON.
35. Love is founded on esteem,—the only foundation which can make the passion last.—Times Weekly, 4th March 1898.
36. He felt a genial glow of satisfaction.

37. He had not the capacity to grasp abstract truths.
38. All this was done under the guise of friendship.
39. This is what places a gulf between the two authors.
40. Mr. F—, who represents the meat-trade, has been hammering away at Mr. W—, who represents the War Office.
41. The prolonged strike in the engineering trade played havoc with British industry.
42. Their political horizon has been enlarged.
43. There is nothing so welcome and so infectious as the spirit of fun.
44. Unreality was the key-note of the attack upon the Indian frontier policy last night.—Daily Telegraph, 15th Feb. 1898.
45. The civilisation of West Africa will be postponed, if the white races engaged in the task devote their time and their energies to jostling one another.—Ibid.
46. The ranks of the aristocracy include a leaven of clever and public-spirited men.
47. If Germany retains that position, Russia must get level with her by taking some other.
48. There was no chance of light being thrown on the case.
49. He handled the subject with remarkable lucidity.
50. The parliamentary machine is hopelessly blocked.
51. We now build mammoth vessels of 12,000 to 14,000 tons.
52. Plans are rapidly maturing for a resumption of hostilities.
53. The characters of the young are more easily moulded.
54. For years past the difficulty of legislating at Westminster has been the nightmare of our practical men.
55. The citizens of the United States are now at the parting of the ways: the decisive step must be taken now or never.
56. Gunboats are patrolling the Nile near Metemneh.
57. He is remarkable for the perspicuity of his style.
58. I cannot pin my faith on that notion.
59. The Oceania was the pioneer steamship of the Star line.
60. This post he still held, when he was suddenly pitchforked into the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.
61. He plumed himself on his skill at cricket.
62. An insensate policy has plunged us into this disastrous campaign.
63. He protested against this puffing of a particular machine.
64. Zola would deny his mission, if he shrank from probing to the quick the highest of social sores.—Times Weekly, 4th March 1898.
65. Above all, they objected to the policy which they hoped was now going to receive its quietus.—Daily Telegraph, 15th Feb. 1898.
66. We must provide remedies for our foolish policy, before it is too late.
67. The military court rode rough-shod over the fundamental principles of civil law.
68. The question is now ripe for settlement.
69. Question-time in the House started with a ripple of laughter.
70. If some roads to success are closed, others must be taken.
71. Herein lies the root of the question.
72. Some 25,000 more men, roughly speaking, including those sanctioned last year, are required.

73. A rupture with France, if it can be avoided, is inexpedient.
74. The paramount power in Europe can afford to be indulgent to her satellites.
75. Zola's "Paris" is a scathing satire professedly founded on fact.
76. He is a conservative of the old school.
77. In India it is difficult to check the scourge of malarial fever.
78. That was a very shady transaction.
79. The faith of the people in the people has been rudely shaken.
80. My ideas have now assumed a definite shape.
81. To relieve the distress caused by the Balfour smash.
82. War, whatever its issue, would inevitably spell ruin to their country.
83. Among the men present he spotted the culprit.
84. He took the unusual step of changing his profession.
85. Civilisation has advanced with rapid strides in Japan.
86. A more striking example could hardly be named.
87. To tamper with free trade is a confession of failure crowned by suicide.—Review of Reviews, Jan. 1898, p. 9.
88. He made sweeping charges.
89. The safest political thermometer in this case is the stock-market.—Daily Telegraph, 25th Feb. 1898.
90. Sir E. A. — B. thundered, and Sir W. L. joked.—Ibid.
91. An empire won by the sword and held by the sword must at times pay the toll of the sword.—Ibid.
92. They are the most loyal of men, when their hearts are touched.
93. The news announced in the Lords trickled rapidly down to the Lower House the same evening.
94. We cannot allow any foreign power to trade so far on our known love of peace as to extort unreasonable concessions.
95. The sentence passed on Zola is a triumph for fanaticism.
96. This is not a moment for twiddling our thumbs over trifles.
97. Class has been oppressed by class, and capital is the tyrant of labour.
98. A competence is vital to contentment.
99. Every man is a volume, if you know how to read him.
100. Our correspondent says that the war of rates between the Canadian Pacific Railway and its rivals is creating great interest.—Times Weekly, 25th Feb.
101. After the reign of the Puritans the whirligig of time brought its revenge by the corrupt and debased reign of the second Charles.
102. Hitherto the two wings of the Unionist party have worked well together.
103. A good idea of how great a man he was may be gained at the cost of a good deal of winnowing.—Fortnightly Review, Jan. 1898, p. 7.
104. He is a man of home-spun wit.

II. Write short sentences illustrating the use of metaphors connected with the following subjects:—

1. Metals.—Gold, silver, brass, lead, dross, mine.
2. Building.—Edify, construction, foundation, pillar, corner-stone, door, wall, floor, back-stairs, tower (verb).
3. Parts of a door.—Key, lock, unlock, hinge, bolt.

4. Machinery.—Pivot, screw, safety-valve, engine.
5. Trade.—Bargain, discount, shop, stock.
6. Cookery.—Concoct, hash, boil.
7. Mathematics.—Square (verb), count on, miscalculate, discount, reckon.
8. Horticulture.—Root, tap-root, branch, flowers, florid, weed out, prune, engraft, bloom, flourish, fade, rosy, cultivate, season, fruit, ripe, stem, plant, germ.
9. Agriculture.—Field, plough (verb), sow, seed, hedge, sift, chaff, harvest, crop, fertile, reap, plant.
10. Navigation.—Anchor, sheet-anchor, steer, pilot, harbour, helm.
11. Temperaturc.—Cold, warm, lukewarm, hot, boiling.
12. Dimensions.—Solid, breadth, depth, superficial, straight, crooked.
13. Sense of touch.—Smooth, rough, hard, soft, polished, slippery, blunt, sharp, flat.
14. Sense of taste.—Sweet, sour, bitter, acrimonious, nauseous.
15. Sense of sight.—Light, dark, colour, clear, dim, gloomy, obscure, lucid.
16. Sense of sound.—Discord, harmony.
17. Natural scenery.—Fountain, torrent, ocean, vista, mountain, forest, desert (noun).
18. The sky.—Star, planet, satellite, comet, meteor, cloud, thunder.
19. War.—Conflict, combat (verb), alarm, trumpet, defeat, triumph, peace.
20. Bodily organs, etc.—Pulse, vein, artery, heart, legs, neck, foot, mouth, eye, tongue, hand, sinews, brow, thumb.
21. Bodily condition.—Blind, lame, health, energy, weakness, fever, atrophy, hunger, thirst, youth, childhood, tired, sick.

PART IV.—PROSE AND POETRY.

CHAPTER XXVIII.—MAIN DIVISIONS OF PROSE-COMPOSITION.

384. Prose, Poetry.—Poetry (from Latin poet-a, Greek poiēt-es, a maker or originator) is distinguished from prose (Latin prosa, for prorsa or proversa, turned forward, unchecked) by the restraints of metre and by certain peculiarities of thought and diction to be described hereafter. All composition comes under one or other of these great headings. The present chapter deals with prose only.

385. Two modes of classifying Prose.—In attempting to draw up a scheme showing the main divisions of prose-composition, we may make either matter or form the basis of the classification. We propose in this chapter to classify the main divisions under both headings, taking the former one first.

SECTION I.—CLASSIFICATION ACCORDING TO MATTER.

386. Subjects of Prose-composition.—Prose-compositions may be divided into A, Technical or non-Literary ; and B, Non-Technical or Literary.

Literary prose may be further subdivided under the eight headings of History, Biography, Description, Reflection, Fiction, Persuasion, Censure, and Humour.

Technical composition deals with those branches of study that concern the specialist, but do not interest the general reader. It is therefore classed as non-Literary. Its one aim is to instruct—to impart any such information in art, science, philosophy, law, language, or theology as the inquirer may need for his particular calling or for some department of research in which he is personally interested.

Non-Technical composition, like the preceding, may have an instructional aim. But even when it has, it never stops there. If it seeks to instruct, it also seeks to entertain—to combine pleasure with profit. It is therefore literary to the same extent that the other is non-literary.<sup>1</sup>

History deals with events of interest, Biography with persons of interest, and Description with objects of interest.

Historical literature relates the life (or some period of the life) of a nation; biography the whole life of an individual. Their provinces overlap, if the person whose private life is told was one who left his mark on the history of his own time.

Descriptive literature deals with natural scenery, natural history on its less scientific side, cities, countries, industries, weapons, customs, superstitions, etc. Books of travel contribute very largely to this class of literature, and are the most typical representatives of the class.

Reflective composition does not deal primarily either with events of interest, or with persons of interest, or with objects of interest; but rather with such thoughts and feelings as may be suggested by the study of any of these. Criticisms and reviews

<sup>1</sup> This chapter, we find, covers substantially the same ground as Part IV., "Selection and Arrangement," in English Lessons for English People, by Abbott and Seeley. Our own classification had been mapped out before this Part IV. was seen. It may, therefore, be of some use to the student to see how far the one fits in with the other.

In the book referred to, composition is divided into I. Scientific, and II. Non-Scientific. Non-Scientific is then subdivided under four different headings, viz. (1) Conversation, (2) Oratory, (3) Didactic, (4) Imaginative, including Poetry. "Scientific" presumably answers to what we have called Technical; the term "Technical," however, includes not Science only, but the various arts and the various branches of law, language, philosophy, and theology. "Conversation" does not come into the present classification at all; we have placed it among the forms of composition in section 2. "Oratory" covers the very same ground as what we have called the literature of Persuasion: the ground is the same, because the word "oratory," as the authors explain in p. 218, is meant to include all forms of pleading, and not merely speeches or oratory proper. "Didactic," as we gather from the remarks and comments given by the authors in different places, covers the same ground as our History, Biography, Description, and Reflection,—the aim of which is didactic as well as literary. "Imaginative" covers the same ground as our Fiction, except that we have not included Poetry: (this we have discussed in a separate chapter, and on a basis of its own). The two schemes, therefore, run upon almost parallel lines.

No niche, however, appears to have been provided in the scheme under reference for our seventh and eighth divisions, viz. Censure (or Satire), and Humour. These seem to be deserving of a place in the list, since each has a peculiar function of its own, and is represented in all the cultivated languages, ancient and modern, by a considerable, though less valuable, amount of literature.

of books belong to this class. Sermons that appeal to men's devotional feelings, or are intended to influence their general conduct (as distinct from those that are intended to incite men to some particular act, such as subscribing to some charity), come under this heading. Commemorative speeches in honour of the dead, since they give expression to thoughts and feelings more than to anything else, fall into the same class.

The literature of Fiction differs from all the kinds of composition that have been hitherto named. In works of History, Biography, Description, or Reflection, the writer is limited to facts, and his aim is to instruct the reader as well as to please him, the instructional element being the more essential of the two. But the chief, and sometimes the only, aim of Fiction is to please the imagination, instruction (if it comes in at all) being only an accessory. This class of literature comprises allegory, romances, novels, idylls, and fairy tales. Such books, as we have said, may be and sometimes are written with a practical purpose. But if they are not interesting and give no pleasure, no one reads them. Men will read fact for the sake of fact, but they will not read fiction for the sake of fiction. The giving of pleasure is therefore the main, and sometimes the only, characteristic of works of this class.

The literature of Persuasion does not aim either to instruct or to please (though incidentally it may do both), but to incite men to do some particular act, as to vote for some candidate at an election, to acquit or condemn some accused person, to pass some law, to subscribe to some charity, etc. If we were asked to describe the kinds of subjects that Persuasive literature deals with in order to gain its particular end, "action," we should sum them up under a single word, "motives."

The literature of Censure consists of satire, the reproof of individuals or communities, exposure of abuses, political invective, etc. Its aim, if this is sincerely acted on, is to correct and reform evil of any kind. But the occasional virulence of its tone makes one feel that it is sometimes inspired by an indignation other than what is purely virtuous.

The literature of Humour deals with any such points in the manners, actions, appearance, and sayings of men (real or fictitious) as are likely to excite laughter. Amusement, not ridicule (for ridicule is one of the keenest weapons of satire), is its only aim. The comic drama is a large contributor to this class of composition, and is, on the whole, its best representative.

The scheme then stands as follows; but it will, of course, be understood that one kind of composition often overlaps another:—

A. Technical composition (non-literary): aim—to instruct. Subject-matter—the various arts, the various sciences, the various branches of law, philosophy, language, or theology.

B. Non-Technical composition (literary):—

- I. History: aim—to instruct and also to please. Subject—the events that mark the life of nations, institutions, etc.
- II. Biography: aim—the same as that of History. Subject—the private life and personal character of individuals.
- III. Description: aim—the same as I. and II. Subject—natural scenery, objects and places of interest, travels, etc.
- IV. Reflection: aim—to stimulate thought and feeling in some specific direction. Criticisms of books, reflections on men and manners, devotional treatises, sermons intended to influence men's general conduct.
- V. Fiction: aim—to please the imagination. Allegory, romances, novels, idylls, and fairy tales.
- VI. Persuasion: aim—to incite men to do some particular act. Popular addresses, political pamphlets, forensic and parliamentary speeches, sermons in aid of some charity, etc.
- VII. Censure: aim—to correct and reform. Satire, the censure of individuals or communities, political invective.
- VIII. Humour: aim—to excite laughter. The comic drama, and any other kind of literature intended chiefly for amusement.

Note.—We may point out in passing how these several kinds of prose-composition are exemplified in current journalism:—

Technical composition is seen in the numerous weekly or monthly journals on special subjects, such as Engineering, Architecture, Building, Mining, Music, Education, Natural Science, etc.

History (that is, contemporary history) is told by the daily papers in the latest telegrams or news about Home, Colonial, and Foreign affairs, or about the proceedings of public men at home and abroad.

Biography.—On the death of any distinguished person, the papers usually give us a short account of his life.

Descriptive composition is exemplified in the accounts given of some sea-side resort, or some place of interest, or some concert, or some dramatical performance, or some exhibition of paintings, or the ceremony of opening some new institution, or some political gathering.

Reflective writing is exemplified in the leading articles, in which the editor expresses his comments on some passing event or his anticipations regarding the near future; or in the criticisms of books that appear in the monthly and quarterly journals.

Fiction is represented by some short story, or by some novel that is published by instalments in any of the numerous periodicals.

Oratory or persuasive composition is exemplified every day in the reports of speeches delivered in courts of justice, or in parliament, or in political gatherings outside parliament.

Censorial composition is seen in the rebukes administered to public men, or in the exposure of abuses.

Humorous composition is seen in those papers that are devoted entirely to this class of subject.

Thus all kinds of prose-composition, if our classification is exhaustive, are represented in current journalism. What is true of journalistic literature in particular is true of the national literature as a whole.

387. Technical Composition.—This, as its name implies, cannot dispense with the use of technical terms; and this is one of the causes that places it outside the range of general literature; for in such literature the use of technical terms is an offence against purity (§ 269). It would be a mistake, however, to suppose that technical composition, though classed as non-literary, gives no scope for the exercise of literary tact. A writer who has the art of stating his facts clearly and forcibly, selecting his materials well, arranging them judiciously, and testing his statements by well-chosen examples, has a much better chance of being read with attention and profit than one who, though equally accurate and complete, is deficient in these qualities. There is as much art in handling a subject effectively in writing as there is in teaching it effectively by word of mouth.

Technical composition is seen in three different varieties—(a) The formal exposition of theory and fact; (b) The history of inventions and discoveries; (c) Controversy or argumentation.

388. History.—The name “history” is from a Greek word which means “inquiry.” This is a part, and a very important part, of its meaning still; for inquiry or research into facts is the chief quality that distinguishes Historical literature from Imaginative or Fiction. The points on which an historian has to be especially guarded are the following:—

(1) To separate fact from legend. It is chiefly in dealing with early periods that this precaution has to be exercised. The history of almost every country, modern as well as ancient, begins with traditions handed down orally from an age when events were not recorded by men living at or near the time of their alleged occurrence.<sup>1</sup> It has been said of Hume, the first great historian of England, that he relates “legendary and halfmythological stories with the same air of belief as the well-authenticated events of recent times,—a fault pardonable enough in Herodotus or Livy, but less venial in a writer who ought to have applied his powerful critical faculty to the sifting of truth from tradition" (Shaw).

<sup>1</sup> It was not till Sir George Cornwall Lewis brought out (in 1855) his Enquiry into the Credibility of Early Roman History that the canons of historical evidence, so far as early periods are concerned, were established. According to him nothing can be accepted as historical which does not rest on written and almost contemporary testimony. Grote was the first to take advantage of this canon; he divides his subject into Part I. Legendary Greece, and Part II. Historical Greece.

(2) To eliminate and discard unnecessary details. Prolixity as a fault in composition has been described already in § 295 (4). It is a fault against which an historian, if he has a great multitude of facts to choose from, should be especially guarded. Details which throw no light on the main events, or on the motives of the principal actors, or on the character of the age, are not merely superfluous, but obstructive; for they obstruct the reader's endeavour to follow the main thread of the narrative. "Macaulay remarks of Orme, the historian of British India, that in one volume he allots on an average a closely printed quarto page to the events of every forty-eight hours. It may be questioned whether in the later volumes of Macaulay's own history too much space is not given to parliamentary disputes which have lost their interest in a century and a half" (Abbott and Seeley). In contemporary historians we must expect greater prolixity than in those who write of earlier periods; for a keener interest is taken in occurrences that are still recent, and time has not yet shown which events will have most interest and importance for posterity. Kinglake's Crimean War covers eight big volumes, one of which is devoted to a single battle. Future historians of the Victorian age will probably dismiss this battle with a page or two.

(3) To give greater prominence to the more important facts. The importance of one fact above another depends mainly on its consequences. In human affairs one event springs out of another, as in the physical world an effect springs from a cause. Admiral Byng's defeat of the Spanish navy off Cape Passaro was as decisive in its way as Drake's defeat of the Armada; yet in comparative importance they stand very wide apart; for the one led to no result in particular, while the other represented the triumph of the reformed religion and the rescue of England from the iron heel of Spain. The Crimean war will not fill much space in future histories, as time has already shown that every object for which the Crimea was invaded has been frustrated, and that Turkey was not worth fighting for.

(4) To divide a long period into parts. If the history is one that covers a long period of time, its subdivision into parts is of great help to the reader's conception of the main events, besides adding much to the interest of the narrative. Here, again, it is the relative importance of events that fixes the landmarks. Taking English history as a whole, few persons (we think) would hesitate to close the first great period with the Norman Conquest,<sup>1</sup> and the second with the Reformation.<sup>2</sup> If each of the three great periods is to be further separated into smaller ones, the first or pre-Norman might be subdivided by King Alfred's defeat of the Danes in A.D. 879, which saved England from a relapse into barbarism; the second or pre-Reformation period by the battle of Lewes, A.D. 1264, which led to the first summoning of Commons to Parliament; and the third by the Revolution of 1688,<sup>3</sup> which in this country decided for ever the question of absolute or limited monarchy. Different writers may, of course, adopt different modes of division, and this will largely depend on the purpose for which they write.

The mental faculties chiefly employed in the composition of history are (a) judgment or discrimination for the sifting of evidence, and (b) the imaginative faculty for realising past events as if they were present, and putting oneself in the place of the principal actors. Imagination, or the power to realise a situation not one's own, is quite as necessary to an historian as to a novelist or even to a poet. A writer who fails to catch the spirit of the age to which his narrative relates, however accurate and impartial he may be in compiling the facts and expounding the events, is not an historian in the full sense of the term. "Our view of every transaction, especially one that is remote in time and place, will necessarily be imperfect and generally incorrect, unless it embrace something more than a bare outline of the occurrences; unless we have before the mind a lively idea of the scenes in which the events took place, the habits of thought and feelings of the actors, and all the circumstances connected with the transaction; unless, in short, we can in a considerable degree transport ourselves out of our own age

---

<sup>1</sup> This is the division actually followed by Freeman, who brings his Early History of England to a close with the defeat of Harold, and commences a new work with the Norman Conquest.

<sup>2</sup> Froude commences his History of England with the fall of Cardinal Wolsey, which was immediately followed by Henry VIII.'s secession from Rome.

<sup>3</sup> Macaulay's History of England begins with James II., who was deposed (after a reign of three years and a half) in the Revolution of 1688.

and country and persons, and imagine ourselves to be the agents or spectators" (Whately).

389. Biography.—In the sifting of evidence, giving of greater prominence to the more important facts, suppressing of unnecessary details,<sup>1</sup> and separating one portion of a life from another, the methods of the biographer are analogous to those of the historian. The difference lies in the subject and in the style.

Subject.—In biography the aim of the writer is to delineate personal character and describe an individual career, not, as in history, to exhibit great events, or great national movements, or the outcome of large courses of policy. Biography is private history teaching by example. An uneventful biography can therefore be quite as interesting, and sometimes more instructive, than one that is full of striking incidents. There is no plot-interest in the recently published Life of Tennyson such as we find, for example, in Moore's Life of Byron; yet the one can be read with quite as much interest as the other, and certainly with more profit.

Style.—Dignity of language is more suitable to history; simplicity to biography. The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire—the grandest panorama in the history of mankind—is told by Gibbon in the loftiest style that our language admits of. On the other hand, an easy and familiar style, such as that described in § 286, is peculiarly appropriate to biography or personal history. If a writer has thoroughly mastered the character and career of the person whose life he relates, a style that is "frank and easy" is certain to carry the reader with him.

Impartiality is as great a merit in a biographer as in an historian. "If it [the life of an author] is written from the point of view of an admirer, nay, of a disciple, that is right; but then the disciple must be also a critic, a man of letters, not, as too often happens, some relation or friend with no qualification for his task except affection for his author" (Matthew Arnold). Boswell's Life of Johnson (the earliest model of biography in our literature) shows how the qualities of a disciple can be combined with those of a man of letters.

390. Description.—Under this heading we place that kind of composition which describes objects, as distinct from history or biography, which relates events, public or private. The same faculties are not employed in description as in history. What research or the sifting of evidence is to the historian, observation is to the describer. One collects his facts from what he reads; the other from what he sees and hears.

---

<sup>1</sup> Among unnecessary details we should include those letters that are not worth preserving, and clog the reader's attention to no purpose.

As models of Descriptive composition, all written within the Victorian age, we might name Wordsworth's Greece (lately re-edited and brought up to date), Ruskin's Stones of Venice (one of the finest descriptive works in our language), Stanley's Sinai and Palestine, and Wallace's Russia. All these were the result of observation and travel; all describe countries and places of world-wide interest, make frequent allusions to history, and give graphic descriptions of natural scenery. All are written with consummate literary skill.

391. Reflection.—What Matthew Arnold says about "criticism" may be taken to apply to Reflective literature as a whole. He defines it to be "a disinterested endeavour to learn and propagate the best that is known and thought in the world" (Essays on Criticism, p. 38). So much importance did he attach to this definition, that he printed it in italics, as we have done. Examples:—Smiles's treatises on "Character," "Self-Help," "Duty," "Thrift"; Helps's "Friends in Council," "Companions of my Solitude"; Coleridge's "Aids to Reflection"; Baxter's "Saints' Everlasting Rest" (1687), a devotional treatise still read with eagerness in all parts of the British empire.

The distinctive character of this kind of literature is seen from the habit that has lately sprung up of selecting and publishing in a separate volume extracts from distinguished writers. Thus we have The Wit and Wisdom of Sydney Smith; Wise, Witty, and Tender Sayings of George Eliot; Daily Thoughts selected from the writings of Charles Kingsley. The Book of Thoughts consists of the favourite passages in prose and verse, upon which the late Mr. Bright used to stimulate and refresh his mind during his stirring and useful career.

Reflective composition, dealing as it does with general principles, about which opinions may differ, is sometimes forced to resort to argumentation. In such a case a judicious writer is careful (1) to adopt a moderate tone in stating his own side of the question; (2) to do full justice to the side from which he differs. The same precautions apply to the historian and biographer also, if, as may easily happen, some debateable question should arise in the course of the narrative. In instructional literature of all kinds a combative or oratorical attitude defeats its own object; for, instead of carrying conviction, it provokes opposition and excites distrust. "When the reader sees a case made out too clearly, he has time to suspect that the opposite case has been suppressed, and will not give full confidence to his author, unless he finds the opposite case exhibited with scrupulous and anxious candour. Macaulay sometimes fails to convince in consequence of his forgetting this rule, and of trying to overwhelm his opponent in the rhetorical fashion" (Abbott and Seeley).

392. Fiction.—Imaginative composition differs from all that have been described hitherto, since it deals with fiction, not with fact. Its aim is not to instruct the mind of the reader, but to please his imagination. If instruction is admitted at all, it is admitted only as an accessory.

Imaginative composition may be distinguished into (1) Allegory, including parable and fable, (2) Romances, (3) Novels, (4) Idylls, (5) Fairy Tales.

(1) Allegory, Parable, Fable.—In these, as the student is aware from § 353, the story is intended to have a double sense,—one illustrating the other by analogy,—whereas in every other kind of fiction it has only one. To every allegory, parable, or fable there is a moral, and hence this kind of fiction has more of the instructional element than any other:—

The cock and fox the fool and knave imply;
The truth is moral, though the tale a lie.—DRYDEN.

Examples: Pilgrim's Progress, by John Bunyan (1628-88); Gulliver's Travels and Tale of a Tub, by Swift; Aesop's Fables. Allegorical creations have no chance of becoming popular, unless the truth that lies behind them is apparent at a glance and is already well established in popular conviction. The presence of these conditions in Pilgrim's Progress accounts for its unflinching popularity.

(2) Romances.—A romance is a tale that turns chiefly on adventure. The interest of the story lies, not in the delineation of character, but in the striking nature of the incidents. In Robinson Crusoe, the earliest romance in our literature (by Daniel Defoe, 1661-1731), the hero has no peculiarity of character that would distinguish him from any other man who can show pluck and common-sense under unusual difficulties.

(3) Novels.—A novel is a tale that turns chiefly on manners and character. Richardson (1689-1761) was the founder of this kind of fiction, as Defoe was of romance. In such writings personal character is shown less by startling adventures than by trivial incidents. "The chief incidents in Jane Austen's novels are meetings in shops, or at balls or picnics; and much the same may be said of Thackeray's novels. In Thackeray it is remarkable that he avoids the great incidents that fall in his way, and confines himself to tracing the domestic consequences of them. In Vanity Fair, for example, the novelist stays at Brussels, while the battle of Waterloo is being fought" (Abbott and Seeley).

Note.—Romance and novel have now become very much mixed in our literature. Scott, the greatest master of romance in our language, seldom or never fails to delineate personal character, notwithstanding the prominence that he gives to scenes of warlike and other dangerous or exciting adventure.

(4) Idylls.—An idyll is a tale (sometimes only a dialogue) describing the simple scenes and pursuits of country life. The earliest idyll that appeared in our literature was the Vicar of Wakefield, by Goldsmith, published in 1766. The story, however, in some of its parts takes us away into scenes that are far removed from rustic simplicity; and these mar its consistency of design. A more perfect idyll is Silas Marner, by George Eliot, to which we might add parts of Adam Bede by the same authoress. Arcadia, by Sir Philip Sidney (1554-86) can hardly be called a national idyll, as it is based on Italian models.

(5) Fairy Tales.—Among the most recent examples are Kingsley's Water Babies, and Alice in Wonderland and Alice through a Looking-Glass, by Lewis Carroll (C. L. Dodgson).

393. Intermixture of fact and fiction.—Imaginative literature has not always kept clear of Historical, notwithstanding the great gulf that lies between them in point of aim and purpose.

In ancient times, when the speeches of statesmen were not recorded, historians both in Greece and Rome were in the habit of composing speeches, which they put into the mouths of statesmen as if they had been actually delivered. This was a convenient way of making a statesman expound his own policy, and it added vivacity to the narrative. This mixture of fiction with history is not now tolerated.

But romancists have introduced another kind of mixture, peculiar to their own craft; and to this no objection has yet been raised. In what are called "historical" novels or romances, historical incidents and persons are blended as parts of the same story with fictitious ones; and the blending is done with so much literary tact, that the reader is thrown upon his own resources to find out what is history and what is fiction. The soliloquy that Scott puts into the mouth of Cromwell at the sight of King Charles's portrait comes so naturally into the story, that more than one reader has taken it for genuine. Similarly, Defoe's Journal of the Great Plague of London,—which journal is supposed to have been kept by a London shopkeeper,—has been quoted as if it were an historical document. It was Defoe who set the first example of this mixing of romance with history.

Note.—There are two different ways in which the mixing of history and fiction has been carried out. In Bulwer-Lytton (and the same may be said of Kingsley) history is put in the foreground, and fiction is merely an accessory. Examples: Harold, the Last of the Saxons; Rienzi, the Last of the Tribunes; The Last of the Barons. In Scott, however, the main actors and events in the story are fictitious, and the historical ones come in as it were by accident. Thus Quentin Durward describes the career of a young Scotchman of rank who plays an extraordinary, but wholly fictitious, part in the disputes between Louis XI., King of France, and Charles the Bold, Duke of Burgundy. In fact, Scott does not scruple to alter dates, if it suits his purpose. Thus in the novel just named, as he explains in a note, "the murder of the Bishop of Liege has been antedated by fifteen years, for reasons which the reader of romances will easily appreciate."

394. Persuasion.—Persuasion is the art of influencing the will of another by means of words, and leading him to do some particular act advocated by the speaker or writer. The typical form of this kind of composition is that of a speech or sermon addressed to an audience. But other forms are used. Pamphlets, articles in magazines, and whole books are written to advocate particular measures. In an official document urging the adoption of some new project or policy the only form used is that of a letter.

Oratory, or extempore speaking, is unwritten composition. The conditions of success depend on manner, style, and argument.

(a) Manner.—A manner that indicates assurance, sincerity, and faith is always effective. This kind of manner carries weight even in conversation, much more so in large assemblies of men. Speeches or sermons delivered with the help of notes or read out from a manuscript are less impressive than addresses which, though they may have been carefully prepared beforehand, seem to the audience to be the unpremeditated outpourings of the speaker's soul. One reason why speeches appear less forcible when they are read than when they are heard is that in reading them we lose the effect of the teacher's manner and the contagion that it spreads through an assembly of listeners.

(b) Style.—In oratory a simple and natural style is more effective than one that is elaborate and polished. The speeches of Burke are the most remarkable in our literature for richness and ingenuity of style; but in the House of Commons they were not much listened to. They are more fit to be read than heard.

The two great qualities of style that a speaker is concerned in are perspicuity and force. Perspicuity is the first essential; but as an audience may be inattentive, impatient, or even dull of understanding, force is necessary also.

Force is produced by antithesis (§ 354), occasional epigram (§ 355), and the various other devices explained in Chapter xxvi. A short sentence interposed between long ones (§ 296) gives time for the hearer to collect his thoughts. Another rhetorical device is the frequent reassertion (§ 370), in various different forms or aspects, of the point on which most emphasis is laid. A simile or metaphor that conveys the pith of an abstract argument by a concrete image is not easily forgotten, and helps the listener to grasp what the speaker desires to enforce (see § 345). A terse phrase is often very effective. Some forty years ago a proposal was made to establish constituencies which should represent learned societies, the various arts, professions, and sciences. The short condemnatory phrase that Bright applied to them, "fancy-franchise," took hold of the public mind at once, and did more to discredit the scheme than many lengthy speeches. In marshalling and arranging facts or arguments, Climax (§ 368) is a valuable expedient: "the mind, no less than the eye, cannot so well take in and do justice to any vast object at a single glance, as by successive approaches and repeated comparisons" (Whately). Facility in the use of such devices can be acquired only by practice: poeta nascitur, orator fit, "a poet is born, an orator is made." It is now well known that the late Mr. Bright took great trouble in preparing his speeches, and wrote down some of his most telling phrases before he delivered them.

(c) Argument.—"It is the characteristic of oratory that it must be understood at once and produce all its effects at once, since it attempts to influence a decision that is near at hand" (Abbott and Seeley). The speaker must therefore use great caution both in the selection and in the arrangement of his facts.

In the selection of his facts he will take care to be one-sided; that is, he will exclude or explain away whatever is likely to tell against the decision that he desires to produce, and enlarge upon everything that will tell in favour of it. Again, he will avoid subtle arguments that cannot be grasped as soon as they are heard, reflections that are above the ordinary level of intelligence, and points of view with which the bulk of the audience are less familiar than himself.

For the arrangement of facts and arguments no absolute rules can be laid down. Much depends upon the occasion, and upon the character of the audience.

If the speaker is conscious before he begins that the audience is for the most part in sympathy with him, he can state his conclusion at once, and produce his facts and arguments in support of it. A long statement of facts, without any preliminary explanation of their purpose or of the inference to be drawn from them, is wearisome and perplexing.

If the audience is against him, he must state his conclusion, not first, but last, and bring his hearers gradually round to it, by urging one consideration after another. "It is a short way," says Swift, "to obtain the reputation of a wise and reasonable man, whenever any one tells you his opinion, to agree with him." It is related of Cobden that in one of his speeches in favour of free trade the meeting at first hooted him down and would not even grant him a hearing; but by agreeing with them in certain points which they held in common, he gradually brought them round to his own view, and was heartily cheered before he had finished. A parallel example is afforded by the speech which Shakspeare puts into the mouth of Mark Antony over the corpse of Julius Cæsar. The multitude had just been led, by the earnest appeals that Brutus had made to their pride as free citizens of the Roman republic, to approve of the assassination of Julius Cæsar, by whom their rights as Roman citizens had been destroyed. Mark Antony had therefore a difficult part to play. He begins by appearing to agree with the audience, disowns any intention of "praising Cæsar," and admits more than once that Brutus is "an honourable man." Having thus obtained a hearing, he begins to correct their judgment of Cæsar, shows that Cæsar respected their rights, and finally so exasperates them that they seize lighted torches and run off to Brutus's house to set fire to it.

395. Censure.—The aim of this kind of literature is to expose abuses, censure individuals or societies, and redress wrongs of every kind. Political invective, such as Junius' Letters, belongs to this class. As an orator selects whatever will further the ends of persuasion, so a satirist selects whatever will damage the person or the cause that he attacks, and give pain to the offender. He enlarges upon the evil side, and says nothing about the good. The arts of rhetoric on which he chiefly relies, whenever he does not resort to direct vituperation, are innuendo and irony (see examples given in §§ 361, 362).

Censure has rarely been administered without acrimony, and its motives have seldom been purely virtuous. Of Swift (1667-1745), our most distinguished satirist in prose, it has been said: "He is like the Indian savage, who, in torturing his captive at the stake, cares little how much he wounds and harms himself, so long as he can make his victim writhe; or like the street ruffian, who, in throwing mud at his victim, is indifferent to the mud that may stick to his own fingers" (Shaw).

396. Humour.—Under this heading we have placed the last division of literary prose. Humour, which provokes mirth, is not to be confounded with ridicule, which gives pain. The latter is one of the keenest weapons of satire.

Humorous literature is seen in two different forms,—Comedy, Narrative. In the former there is always some kind of plot, in the latter not always. In both, however, the plot, that is, the outline of the story, is as ridiculous as the dialogues and the actors,—unlike the plot of a novel, which is intended to be probable, or at least conceivable.

(a) Comedy.—We have placed this first, because it came first in the order of time. In the Elizabethan age the line between tragedy and comedy was not sharply drawn. Thus in Macbeth the comic scene of the hell-porter is introduced in the most tragical crisis of the play,—the murder of Duncan; and in Hamlet we have the comic scene of the grave-diggers in the midst of the pathetic scene of the burial of Ophelia. Most of Shakspeare's so-called comedies, such as the Tempest and the Merchant of Venice, are not what we now mean by comedies, but romantic or idyllic dramas with comic scenes interspersed.

Prose, not verse, is the language of comedy. The two comic scenes just referred to in Macbeth and Hamlet are entirely in prose, all other parts of the plays named being in metre. Similarly, in the neutral dramas the comic scenes are in prose, the more serious ones in metre. Again, in the "historical" plays, Jack Cade in Henry VI. and Falstaff in Henry IV. talk, not in metre, but in prose.

(b) Narrative.—Humorous narrative did not appear in our literature before the Restoration. It began with the new turn that Comedy then took; and the same authors sometimes contributed to both.

As an example of a narrative with a plot, we may mention the Pickwick Papers by Dickens, which can hardly be called a novel, as the Pickwick Club, on which the story is based, is itself as ridiculous as the chief actors, and will not bear the test of probability. The greatest of living humorists is Mr. Clemens, popularly known as Mark Twain, author of Innocents Abroad, New Pilgrim's Progress, More Tramps Abroad, etc. His narratives have little or no plot.

SECTION 2.—CLASSIFICATION ACCORDING TO FORM.

397. Four forms of Prose-composition.—There are four different forms of prose-composition,—Conversation, Letter-writing, Speech-making, Narration.

398. Conversation.—Conversation as a form of literary composition may be of three different kinds,—Imitative, Expository, Dramatic.

(1) Imitative.—It is imitative, when it is made to resemble the kind of conversation that takes place in ordinary life. This is seen chiefly in works of fiction, as these are largely of an imitative character. Those novelists who make the imitation of nature the secret of their art, cause their actors to talk in a manner suited to their respective characters and ranks. Thus Scott introduces countrymen, who use homely phrases in the Highland dialect. Dickens puts a pompous style into the mouth of the arrogant Dombey; a provincial dialect into the mouths of Sam Weller and Mark Tapley; a euphemistic or plausible style into the mouth of the hypocrite, Pecksniff; a euphuistic or showy style (§ 286) into the mouth of the empty-headed Micawber.

Examples of the art of polite conversation occur sometimes in books that are not works of fiction; as in Hazlitt's Table Talk, and Helps's Friends in Council and Realmah. Such conversation is desultory and unmethodical on principle, and it excludes subjects that cannot be expressed in short speeches or apprehended without mental effort.

(2) Expository.—The most celebrated example is that of Plato's Dialogues, which have been translated from the original Greek into most modern languages. In our own literature we have Coleridge's Table Talk collected in his "Literary Remains," and Imaginary Conversations (between Literary men and Statesmen) by Landor. The form of dialogue, as the example of Plato showed, is as suitable for the discussion of serious subjects as it is of light ones. A writer can sometimes state the different sides of a question more pointedly by an informal dialogue than he can by formal exposition.

(3) Dramatic.—In dramatic composition the whole of the story, excepting the short directions given to the stage manager, is told in the conversations of the dramatis personæ. In serious dramas the dialogue is usually given in metre, in comedy in prose (§ 396).

399. Letter-writing.—There are few kinds of subjects that have not been dealt with in the epistolary form.

"History" is represented by Goldsmith's History of England, which is told in the form of letters from a nobleman to his son. Despatches sent by an officer in command of an expedition to the Secretary of State for War are contemporary history told in the form of official correspondence.

"Biography" is represented by the letters actually written by the person whose life is told. Such letters are of the nature of autobiography.

"Description" is represented by the celebrated Paston Letters (1424-1506), consisting of a thousand letters of the Paston family in Norfolk, which throw much light on the state of the country and the manners of England in the fifteenth century. White's Natural History of Selborne is given in a series of letters addressed to a couple of friends. Lady Mary Montagu's travels over Europe to the East and her residence in Constantinople are all told in the form of Letters, the name under which her celebrated book was published in 1763.

"Reflection" is represented in Letters to his Son, containing advice on behaviour, mode of life, dress, etc., by Lord Chesterfield (1694-1773); in Letters to Sir William Windham, in defence of his political conduct, and Letters on the Study and Use of History, by Bolingbroke (1678-1751); in Letters from a Citizen of the World, by Goldsmith; in Letters on Toleration, by Locke; in Letter on a Regicide Peace, by Burke; and in Lord Selborne's Letters to his Son on Religion (1898).

“Fiction.”—All Richardson’s novels were composed in the form of letters, and his example was followed by Rousseau in the composition of his celebrated Nouvelle Héloïse. Smollett’s Humphrey Clinker and Scott’s Redgauntlet are written entirely in the same form.

“Satire.”—Such composition appears in the epistolary form in Drapier’s Letters, by Swift; Junius’ Letters, by an unknown author (§ 395); and Ruskin’s Fors Clavigera, a series of letters addressed to British working-men.

400. Speech-making.—This has two literary uses—Persuasive and Reflective.

Persuasive.—This is exemplified in the pleadings addressed by a barrister to a jury or judge; in speeches made in parliament advocating some particular measure; in the speeches made by a candidate for parliamentary election; in sermons addressed to a congregation, urging them to do some particular act, such as subscribing to some charity. Persuasion is the function of oratory proper.

Reflective.—This is exemplified in a judge’s charge to a jury, in which he sums up the issues of a case that has just been heard; in public addresses, in which a statesman reviews or justifies his recent political acts or explains the policy of his party; in sermons intended to influence men’s general conduct, or to stimulate devotion, or to commemorate the events of some sacred anniversary; in panegyrical addresses intended to honour the memory of some dead person.

Oratory of the Persuasive kind can be imitated in epic poetry, as in the debates in hell described in Book II. of Paradise Lost; in the drama, as in the speeches put into the mouths of Brutus and Antony in Julius Cæsar; and in novels, as in the electioneering speech delivered by Felix Holt, the Radical, in the novel so named. It was imitated, too, by Milton in Areopagitica, in which he uses the form of a speech addressed to the “High Court of Parliament” for advocating the unconditional freedom of the press. In ancient times (see § 393) it was imitated by historians, who put speeches made by themselves into the mouths of statesmen and rulers.

401. Narration.—Every kind of subject can be expressed in the form of continuous narrative, and excepting in the 6th kind (persuasive, see § 394) it is the form most commonly used.

CHAPTER XXIX.—PROSODY AND POETIC DICTION.

SECTION 1.—PROSODY.

402. Prosody (Gr. pros-odia, lit. a song sung to an instrument) treats of the laws of metre. It might be called "the grammar of verse."

403. Rhythm (Gr. rhuthmos, measured flow or motion) is "the musical flow of language." This is produced for the most part by a well-balanced recurrence of pauses and accents.

Rhythm has been elsewhere defined "a principle of proportion introduced into language."<sup>1</sup> This definition is practically equivalent to our own, though perhaps it scarcely gives enough prominence to sound. It is only a practised reader who can perceive "the proportion of language" without reading the composition aloud.

Rhythm is not confined to verse. It is quite as necessary to an orator as to a poet; and there is scarcely any kind of prose, of which the attractiveness is not increased by the recurrence of pauses and accents at suitable intervals.

404. Rime (A.S. rim, "number," misspelt as rhyme from a supposed connection with Gr. rhuthmos) is a repetition of the same sound at the ends of two or more lines. The effect of rime, however, is not produced, unless the lines succeed one another immediately or near enough for the resemblance of sound to strike the ear. Monosyllabic rimes are always accented.

Note 1.—A rime is usually of one syllable. But rimes can also be in two or more syllables, provided that the first syllable is accented and the rest are unaccented; as, motion, ocean; behaviour, saviour. Double rimes in French, and sometimes in English, are called female or feminine, while a single rime is called a male. Double and treble rimes are more commonly used in comic poetry:—

To hear them rail at honest Sunderland,
And rashly blame the realm of Blunderland.—POPE.

Note 2.—A monosyllabic rime is perfect under three conditions: (1) the vowel or vowels, whatever the spelling may be, must produce precisely the same effect on the ear; (2) if any consonant or consonants follow the riming vowel or vowels, these (whatever the spelling may be) must produce precisely the same effect; (3) the consonant that precedes the rime must, to prevent monotony, produce a different effect on the ear. Thus hair and fair are perfect rimes, because the three conditions just stated are all satisfied. But bear and fear are not perfect rimes, because the vowel-sounds, though not very different, are not quite the same. Again, fare and af-fair are not perfect rimes, because the riming vowel is preceded by the same consonant. Again, ap-peased, re-leased are not perfect rimes, because the final consonants in the former have the sound of zd, while those in the latter have the sound of st.

<sup>1</sup> Abbott and Seeley's English Lessons for English People, p. 143.

When the rime is dissyllabic or polysyllabic, every syllable except the first must begin with the same consonant; cf. Sunderland, Blunderland, un-fortunate, im-portunate.

Note 3.—Rime is a matter of the ear, and not of the eye. Sight-rimes, such as love and grove, farm and warm, home and some, path and hath, are not rimes at all. On the other hand, fight is a true rime to indict, dawn to morn, fourth to cloth, fire to higher, hour to power, there to air, colonel to in-fernal. Pronunciation, not spelling, is the only test of a rime.

405. Assonance (Lat. ad + sonant-ia verba).—This term is applied to words which rime in the vowel or vowels, but not in the consonant or consonants following. It is therefore a very imperfect kind of rime; as, slumber, blunder; same, cane. A specimen of Assonance, in imitation of a Spanish ballad, occurs in the Spanish Gypsy by George Eliot:—

Maiden, crowned with glossy blackness,
Lithe as panther forest-roaming,
Long-armed naiad, when she dances,
On a stream of ether floating.

406. Alliteration (Lat. ad + litera).—When two or more words begin with the same vowel, or the same consonant, or the same syllable, this is called alliteration (§ 374). It is initial riming as distinct from end-riming.

Ruin seize thee, ruthless king!—GRAY.

Note.—All our earliest poetry was alliterative. The last great specimen of such poetry in our literature is Piers the Plowman, by William Langland, born in A.D. 1332. The poem is written in lines of ten to twelve syllables. The following is a specimen:—

In a somer seson, when soft was the sonne,
I shope me in shroudës, as I a shepe were.

407. Cæsura (a Latin word denoting “a cut”). In Latin prosody this meant the “cut” or division of a foot somewhere near the middle of the line, the cut being followed by a pause of the voice in reading the line aloud. In English prosody cæsura means merely the pause of the voice, by which lines of eight or more syllables are usually divided, when they are read aloud; and this pause may occur either at the end or in the middle of a foot. (For the meaning of “foot” see below, § 409.) Rhythm greatly depends on the position of the cæsura.

In the following example the figure against each line shows the number of feet (with or without a half foot) preceding each cæsura. When a comma or other stop occurs in the same place as the cæsura, the rhythm of the line is helped by the sense; but a pause or cæsura can be made independently of punctuation, if the rhythm of the line is improved thereby. Sometimes a line has no cæsura; that is, neither the rhythm nor the sense of the line requires that any pause should be made in reading or repeating the line aloud:—

- 3½ Of man's first disobedience || and the fruit
 3 Of that forbidden tree, || whose mortal taste
 Brought death into the world and all our woe
 2½ With loss of Eden, || till one greater Man
 1½ Restore us || and regain the blissful seat,
 2 Sing, Heavenly Muse, || that on the secret top, etc.

MILTON.

Observe that monotony is avoided and the rhythm of the lines enhanced by varying the place of the cæsura.

Observe also that the third line does not suggest any cæsura.

408. Metre (Gr. "measure") is "rhythm reduced to law." It depends on two factors:—

- (a) The accentuation of syllables.
 (b) The number of accented syllables to a line.

Note.—Quantity means the amount of time required for pronouncing a syllable distinctly. In Latin prosody syllables were subdivided by quantity into Long and Short. In English versification, however, quantity is of no importance. It is entirely subordinated to accent.

Then tore' | with blood' - | y tal' - | on the' | rent plain'.—BYRON.

Here the short syllable the is made as long as possible for the sake of giving an accent, and the long syllable rent is made as short as possible for the sake of removing one.

409. A specific combination of accented and unaccented syllables is called a foot. The number of syllables to a foot may be either two or three, but it cannot be less than two or more than three, and one of these must be accented.

(a) An Iambus consists of one unaccented and one accented syllable. This is the commonest of all our feet.

Ap-pear', be-sides', at-tack', sup-ply'.

(b) A Trochee consists of one accented and one unaccented syllable. Not so common as the Iambus.

Ho'-ly, up'-per, grand'-eur, fail'-ing.

(c) An Anapæst consists of two unaccented syllables followed by an accented one. Rather uncommon.

Col-on-nade', re-ap-pear', on a hill'.

(d) A Dactyl consists of one accented syllable, followed by two unaccented ones. Very rare.

Mes'-sen-ger, mer'-ri-ly, prop'-er-ty, in'-fa-mous.

Note 1.—A fifth kind of foot is sometimes added, called an Amphi-

brach, consisting of an accented syllable between two unaccented ones ; as re-venge'-ful, a-maz'-ing. The following line from Campbell may be quoted as an example :—

There came' to | the beach' a | poor ex'-ile | of E'-rin.

It would be easy, however, to subdivide the line into anapaests by making the first foot an Iambus, which is common in anapaestic metre :—

There came' | to the beach' | a poor ex'- | ile of E'-rin,

in which Erin is a double rime.

But the following lines contain amphibrachs, which cannot be resolved into anapaests :—

Most friend'-ship | is feign'-ing,
Most lov'-ing | mere fol'-ly ;
Then heigh'-ho | the hol'-ly,
This life' is | most jol'-ly.—SHAKESPEARE.

Note 2.—A sixth kind of foot, long and consisting of two accented syllables, is sometimes added. In Latin prosody this foot is called a Spondee. But in English prosody no such foot is recognised, since theoretically there cannot be more than one accent to an English foot. Sometimes, however, two accented syllables are placed together for the artificial purpose of making the sound of the line suggestive of the sense (§ 375) :—

When A'- | jax strives' | some rock's' | vast weight' | to throw',
The line' | too la'- | bours and' | the words' | move slow'.

Note 3.—The names of all the feet are derived from Greek. Iambus means “aiming at,” “attacking,” so called because this foot was first used in Satire. Trochee means “running,” so called because it is a rapid measure. Dactyl means “finger,” so called because, like the parts of a finger, it consists of one long followed by two shorts. Anapaest means “thrown back,” because this foot is a dactyl reversed. Spondee means “pertaining to libations,” so called because, when libations were poured out on an altar, slow and solemn melodies were used. Amphibrach means “short at both sides,” so called because this foot consists of one long syllable enclosed by two short ones.

410. To scan a line (Lat. scan-d-ere, to climb) is to divide it into its several feet, and say what kind of feet they are, and how many of them there are. Lines of two feet are called dimeters ; of three, trimeters ; of four, tetrameters ; of five, pentameters ; of six, hexameters. In Tennyson's Locksley Hall we have an example of octometers (8 feet). In scanning a line the following precautions should be noted :—

(a) The number of feet to a line depends on the number of accented syllables, not on the total number of syllables (§ 408).

(b) An accented monosyllable at the beginning of a line is sometimes made to do duty for an entire Iambic foot :—

Stay', | the king' | hath thrown' | his war'- | der down'.—SHAKS.
(Iambic pentameter, 5 feet.)

(c) In the Trochaic and Dactylic metres, an accented monosyllable at the end of a line counts as an entire foot, though in the former this foot is short of one unaccented syllable, and in the latter of two :—

Life' is | but' an | em'-pty | dream'.—LONGFELLOW.
(Trochaic tetrameter, 4 feet.)

Com'-rades, | leave' me | here' a | lit'-tle, | while' as | yet' 'tis |
ear'-ly | morn'.—TENNYSON (Trochaic octometer, 8 feet.)

Mer'-rily, | mer'-rily | shall' I live | now',
Un'-der the | blos'-som that | hangs' on the | bough'.—SHAKS.
(Dactylic tetrameter, 4 feet.)

(d) Metres are not always perfectly carried out. In an Iambic line the first foot is sometimes a Trochee instead of an Iambus. In the Anapæstic metre, Iambic feet are sometimes put for Anapæsts, and this in any part of the line :—

Daugh'-ter | of God' | and man', | ac-com'- | plished Eve'.—MILTON.
(Iambic pentameter, 5 feet.)

Not a drum' | was heard', | not a fu'- | neral note'.
(Anapæstic tetrameter, 4 feet.)

(e) In scanning a line, two short syllables coming together can be counted as one for the sake of the metre :—

Wing'd with | red light'- | ning and' | impet'- | uous rage',
The mul'- | ti-tud'- | inous sea' | inearn'- | adine'.

(f) Two open vowels belonging to different words can be slurred, so as to be fused together and pronounced as one :—

Impressed' | the efful'- | gence of' | his glo'- | ry abides'.
By her'- | ald's voice' | explained' ; | the hol'- | low abyss',
Abom'- | ina'- | ble, unut'- | tera'- | ble, and worse'.
To insult' | the poor' | or beau'- | ty in' | distress'.
May I' | express' | thee unblamed', | since God' | is light'.

411. Blank Verse.—"Blank" means unrimed. This is much used in Epic and Dramatic verse, and generally in Iambic pentameters. This is the noblest of all verse. It is the most difficult to write effectively, though it seems the easiest.

See example of Epic blank verse quoted from Paradise Lost in §407 under Cæsura.

In Longfellow's Hiawatha we have a solitary example of blank verse in Trochaic tetrameters :—

Then' the | lit'-tle | Hi'-a- | wa'-tha
Learned' of | ev'-ery | bird' the | lan'-guage.

Occasionally we have blank verse in Dactylic dimeters :—

Can'-non to | right' of them,
Can'-non to | left' of them,
Can'-non in | front' of them.—TENNYSON.

Some attempts have been made to introduce Classical (Latin and Greek) metres into English. This is another kind of blank verse. The best examples of Latin hexameters are Longfellow's Evangeline and Kingsley's Andromeda :—

This' is the | for'-est pri- | mev'-al, the | mur'-mu-ring | pines', and the | hem'-lock.—LONGFELLOW.

Special Metres and Stanzas.

412. The Heroic Couplet.—In this metre lines consisting of five Iambic feet rime together in pairs.

This is called "Heroic" because it has been much used in translating Epic or Heroic poetry ; as in Dryden's translation of Virgil, and Pope's Homer.

This metre is sometimes varied by a triplet, in which the third line (called an Alexandrine) can have six Iambic feet instead of five :—

The sacred lake of Trivia from afar,
The Veline fountains, and sulphureous Nar,
Shake at the baleful blast, the signal of the war.—DRYDEN.

413. The Sonnet.—Borrowed from Italy. It consists of fourteen Iambic pentameters, of which the first eight lines are called the octave, and the last six the sestette. The Italian octave (followed by Milton) has two rimes, in the order of abba, -abba ; the octave in Shakspeare's sonnets has four rimes, in the order of abab, cdcd. The sestette has either two or three rimes, and their order is various.

414. Ottava Rima.—Borrowed from Italy. Each stanza consists of eight Iambic pentameters. The letters a, b, c show the system of riming. (The word ottava means "octave.")

a 'Tis sweet to hear the watch-dog's honest bark
b Bay deep-mouthed welcome as we near our home ;
a 'Tis sweet to know there is an eye will mark
b Our coming, and look brighter when we come ;
a 'Tis sweet to be awakened by the lark,
b Or lulled by falling waters ; sweet the hum
c Of bees, the voice of girls, the song of birds,
c The lip of children and their earliest words.—BYRON.

415. The Spenserian Stanza.—Called Spenserian from its originator, Spenser, who used it in writing The Faërie Queene.

a Roll on', | thou deep' | and dark' - | blue O' - | cean, roll,
b Ten thou'- | sand fleets' | sweep o' - | ver thee' | in vain :
a Man marks' | the earth' | with ru' - | in ; his' | control
b Stops with' | the shore' ; | upon' | the wa - | tery main
b The wrecks' | are all' | thy deed' ; | nor doth | remain
c A shad' - | ow of' | man's rav' - | age save' | his own,
b When for' | a mo' - | ment like' | a drop' | of rain

c He sinks' | into' | thy depths' | with bub'- | bling groan,
 c Without' | a grave', | unknelled', | uncof'- | fined, and' | unknown.
 BYRON.

The ninth and last line, which in this metre always consists of six feet instead of five, is called an Alexandrine, like the third line in heroic triplets (§ 412).

416. The Metre of "In Memoriam."—This consists of a four-line stanza in which each line contains four Iambic feet, the fourth line riming with the first, and the third with the second. This metre was not, as is often supposed, originated by Tennyson. It was used by Sandys in his metrical paraphrase of the Psalms, A.D. 1636 :—

What profit can my blood afford,
 When I shall to the grave descend ?
 Can senseless dust thy praise extend ?
 Can death thy living truth record ?—Psalm xxx. 9.

417. Stanzas (Ital. stanza, Old Ital. stantia, so called from the stop or pause at the end of it). All stanzas are in rimed, not in blank, verse.

A stanza of three lines is called a Triplet, as in Tennyson's Two Voices, in which each line consists of an Iambic tetrameter; the third line is not an Alexandrine.

Whatev'- | er cra'- | zy sor'- | row saith',
 No life' | that breathes' | with hu'- | man breath
 Has ev'- | er tru'- | ly longed' | for death'.

A stanza of four lines is called a Quatrain (Fr. quatre, Lat. quatuor, four). Of such stanzas the most common examples are—(1) the Ballad metre, as in Chevy Chase; and (2) the Elegiac metre, as in Gray's Elegy. In both of these the rimes alternate—in the former a tetrameter with a trimeter; in the latter a pentameter with a pentameter. The stanza used in In Memoriam is another kind of quatrain; see § 416.

A stanza of six lines is called a Sextant, in which the rimes may occur in the following orders :—(1) a, b, a, b, a, b; (2) a, a, b, c, c, b; (3) a, b, a, b, c, c.

A stanza of eight lines is called an Octave; but it is best known under the name of Ottava Rima (Ital. sounded as ottàva reema, Lat. octavus, eighth); see § 414.

A stanza of nine lines is the Spenserian; see § 415.

SECTION 2.—POETIC DICTION.

418. Prose, Poetry.—Poetry is distinguished from prose not only by the possession of metre, but by certain peculiarities of diction and of thought. The most prosaic matter may be expressed in the most prosaic language, and yet in the most perfect metre; the metre does not make either the matter or the language poetical.

Something had happened wrong about a bill,
Which was not drawn with sound commercial skill;
So, to amend it, I was told to go
And seek the firm of Clutterbuck and Co.—CRABBE.

419. Poetic Diction.—The chief peculiarities are the following:—

(1) The use of archaic or less common words.—Poetry pays little or no attention to changes in current speech. At the same time it likes to distinguish itself from prose. It therefore avoids common words, and retains words that were used by former poets, after they have gone out of general use:—

Nouns.—Poetry often uses swine for pigs; swain for peasant or husbandman; billow for wave; main for sea or ocean; maid or damsel for girl; nuptials for marriage; vale for valley; steed or charger for horse; ire for anger; woe for sorrow or misery; thrall for distress; might for strength; marge for margin; spouse for wife; numbers for verse or metre; bower for summer-house; quest for search; guile for deceit; bliss for happiness; bane for poison or mischievousness; ken for perception; troth for veracity or faithfulness; chanticleer for cock; combat for battle; goblet for cup; ought for anything; naught for nothing; eve for evening; meed for reward; morn for morning; mead for meadow; realm for kingdom; scribe for writer; victor for conqueror; foe or foeman for enemy; yeoman for peasant or husbandman; tith for tillage or agriculture, etc.

Adjectives.—Poetry often uses lone or lonesome for lonely; drear for dreary; dread for dreadful; lovesome for lovely; intrepid or dauntless for brave; yon for yonder; rapt for delighted; hallowed for holy; baleful for pernicious; doleful for sorrowful; artless for innocent; hapless for unlucky; lowly for low or humble; forlorn for distressed; sylvan for woody; sequestered for retired; joyless for unhappy; jocund for merry; awear for wear; stilly for still; reckless for careless; bootless for unprofitable; ingrate for ungrateful; recreant for unfaithful; mute for silent; darksome for dark; quenchless for inextinguishable; fond for foolish; wrathful for angry; dire for dreadful, etc.

Adverbs.—Poetry often uses scarce for scarcely; haply for perhaps; sore for so sorely; oft for often; erst or whilom for formerly; of yore or of old for in ancient times; scantly for scantily; anon for at once; amain for violently or suddenly; hard by for close or very near; full for very, as in “full many a gem,” etc.; right for very or precisely, as in “right against the eastern gate” (Milton).

Verbs.—Poetry often uses quit for leave; wax for grow; quoth for said; list for listen; sojourn for lodge or  dwell; trow for believe; tarry for remain or stay; hearken for hear or attend; obscure for darken; fare for walk; vanquish for conquer; quaff for drink luxuriously; cleave for stick; hie or speed for hasten; smite for hit or strike. -Est and -eth are still commonly used for the second and third persons respectively. The older or Strong forms of Past tenses are used in preference to the modern or Weak ones ; as wrought for worked ; bade for bid ; begat for begot ; clove for cleft ; crew for crowed ; drave for drove ; throve for thrived ; clomb for climbed ; stove for staved ; clad for clothed.

Conjunctions.—Poetry often uses what though or albeit for although ; ere or or ere for before ; nathless for nevertheless ; an if for if.

(2) Omission of words required by Prose.—Two purposes are served by such omissions : the metre is preserved, and the diction is made less like that of prose:—

|   |   |   |
|---|---|---|
| The brink of (the) haunted stream . . . . .                           | } | Article.                               |
| Creeping like (a) snail unwillingly to school . . . . .               |   |   |
| (He) who steals my purse steals trash . . . . .                       | } | Noun or Pronoun.                       |
| Lives there (the man) who loves his pain ? . . . . .                  |   |   |
| For is there aught in sleep (that) can charm thewise ? . . . . .  | } | Relative asSubject to aVerb. |
| 'Tis distance (that) lends enchantment to theview . . . . .       |   |   |
| Mean though I am, (I am) not wholly so . . . . .                      | } | Finite Verb.                           |
| Happy (is) the man, whose wish and care, etc. . . . .                 |   |   |
| To whom thus Adam (spoke) . . . . .                                   | } | Participle.                            |
| Soldier rest, thy warfare (being) o'er, etc. . . . .                  |   |   |
| My ramble (being) ended, I returned . . . . .                         | } | Conjunction.                           |
| He knew himself (how) to sing . . . . .                               |   |   |
| Permit (that) I marshal thee the way . . . . .                        | } | Preposition.                           |
| He mourned (for) no recreant friend . . . . .                         |   |   |
| Through the dear might of Him that walked (on)the waves . . . . . | } |   |
| Despair and anguish fled (from) the struggling soul )                 |   |   |

In poetry a verb is often used alone, where in prose it would have an Auxiliary verb attached to it:—

Long die thy happy days before thy death !

(May thy happy days die, etc.)

This day be bread and peace my lot !

(May peace and bread be, etc.)

Gives not the hawthorn bush as sweet a shade ?

(Does it not give, etc.)

Tell me not in mournful numbers.

(Do not tell me, etc.)

He goes to do what I had done, if, etc.

(What I should have done, if, etc.)

(3) The use of uncommon constructions:—

(a) An Adjective substituted for an Adverb (see § 181):—

First they praised him soft and low.—TENNYSON.

The green trees whispered low and mild.—LONGFELLOW.

(b) Positive adverb in -ly changed to Comparative in -lier:—

You have taken it wiselier than I meant you should.—SHAKSPEARE.

Destroyers rightlier called the plagues of men.—MILTON.

Strange friend, past, present, and to be ;
Loved deeplier, darklier understood.—TENNYSON.

Note.—This form of the Comparative adverb occurs, however, in the familiar word “earlier,” which can be either an adverb or an adjective.

(c) Superfluous employment of a pronoun :—

My banks—they are furnished with bees.—SHENSTONE.
They tremble—the sustaining crags.—TENNYSON.
The smith a mighty man is he.—LONGFELLOW.

(d) An epithet (adjective) used as a noun :—

Below the chestnuts, when their buds
Were glistening to the breezy blue (=sky).—TENNYSON.
The dread vast (=expanse) of night.—MILTON.
The palpable obscure (=darkness).—Ibid.
The kindling azure (=sky).—THOMSON.

(e) The formation of new compound words :—

The always-wind-obeying deep.—SHAKESPEARE.
Or in the violet-embroidered vale.—MILTON.
Proxy-wedded with a bootless calf.—TENNYSON.
Before the crimson-circled star.—Ibid.

(f) A freer use of Reflexive objects after Intransitive verbs (§ 97) :—

Then Satan first knew pain,
And writhed him to and fro.—MILTON.
The shepherd hied him home.

(g) Possessive case of noun used for an adjective (§ 43, c) :—

Pity and woman's (=womanly) compassion.—LONGFELLOW.
The mother's (=motherly) nature of Althea.—LOWELL.

(h) The Simple form of Personal pronoun for the Reflexive :—

I thought me (=myself) richer than the Persian king.
BEN JONSON.
How close she veils her (=herself) round.—KEBLE.

(i) The use of “and” in an Interrogative sentence, to express a passionate sense of grief :—

And art thou cold and lowly laid.—SCOTT.
And wilt thou weep, when I am low ?—BYRON.

(4) Change in the regular order of words.—The same two purposes are hereby served as before ; see above (2) :—

(a) Adjective placed after its noun, instead of before it :—

Or where the gorgeous East with richest hand
Showers on her kings barbaric pearl and gold.—MILTON.

(b) Subject placed after its verb, and object before it :—

No hive hast thou of hoarded sweets.

(c) Preposition placed after its noun instead of before it :—

Where echo walks steep hills among.

(d) Infinitive placed before the Finite verb, instead of after it :—

When first thy sire to send on earth,
Virtue, his darling child, designed.—GRAY.

(e) Adverb placed before its verb, instead of after it :—

Up springs from yonder tangled thorn
A stag more white than mountain snow.—SCOTT.

(f) Complement placed before its verb, instead of after it :—

Grieved though thou art, forbear the rash design.

(g) Use of or for either, and nor for neither :—

Remote, unfriended, solitary, slow,
Or by the lazy Scheldt, or wandering Po.—GOLDSMITH.
Nor grief nor pain shall break my rest.

(5) The use of adjectives or participles instead of clauses.
This is done for the sake of terseness. Poetry does not patronise Relatives and Conjunctions so freely as prose does.

(1) He can't combine each well proportioned part.

That is, he cannot make the different parts proportionate to each other and then combine them into a symmetrical whole.

(2) See that your polished arms be primed with care.—COWPER.

That is, see that your arms (or weapons) are well polished and primed with care.

(3) Forth goes the woodman, leaving unconcerned
The cheerful haunts of men.—COWPER.

Here "cheerful" means "however cheerful they may be."

(4) From his slack hand the garland wreathed for Eve
Down dropped, and all the faded roses shed.—MILTON.

Here "slack" stands for "which had become slack."

(5) But he who hurts a harmless neighbour's peace,
Insults fallen worth or beauty in distress.—POPE.

Here "harmless" stands for "though he is harmless," and "fallen" for "when it is fallen."

(6) From loveless youth to unrespected age
No passion gratified except her rage.—POPE.

Her youth was devoid of love, the peculiar grace of youth ; and her old age was devoid of respect, the peculiar privilege of age ; she gratified no passion except her evil temper.

(7) The jay, the rook, the daw,
And each harsh pipe, discordant heard alone,
Aid the full concert.—THOMSON.

Here heard alone means "when it is heard alone."

Note.—In paraphrasing poetry into prose (if this questionable practice is to be encouraged) one of the first things to be done is to convert such adjectives or participles as those quoted above into verbs, adding such Relatives or Conjunctions as may be necessary.

(6) The use of epithets for the sake of ornament.—This peculiarity is in keeping with the chief aim of poetry, which is to please rather than to instruct. An epithet is ornamental (without being useful), when it does not contribute to the sense :—

The breezy call of incense-breathing morn,
The swallow twittering from its straw-built shed,
The cock's shrill clarion, and the echoing horn,
No more shall rouse them from their lowly bed.—GRAY.

Here the epithets “breezy,” “twittering,” “shrill,” and “echoing” are all conducive to the sense ; but incense-breathing and straw-built serve no purpose other than that of ornament.

Ornamental epithets are italicised in the following :—

- (1) Oh mother Ida, many-fountain'd Ida,
Dear mother Ida, hearken ere I die.—TENNYSON.
- (2) Then answer made the bold Sir Bedivere.—Ibid.

In the following the italicised epithets are essential :—

As shines the moon in clouded skies,
She in her poor attire was seen.

The golden harvest ; the swift stag ; the tawny lion ; the briny deep ; the mighty deep, etc., are all stock phrases common in poetry. The epithets are merely ornamental.

Note.—In paraphrasing poetry into prose the student should take care to give greater prominence to the essential than to the ornamental epithets, or leave the latter out altogether.

(7) The use of graphic or picturesque language.—This peculiarity, too, arises from the desire to please. Language is graphic or picturesque, when it calls up some image to the mind by dwelling on the particular rather than on the general or abstract.

Arise, my love, my fair, and come away ; for, lo ! the winter is past, the rain is over and gone, the flowers appear on the earth ; the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land ; the fig tree putteth forth her green figs ; and the vines with the tender grapes perfume the air. Arise, my love, my fair, and come away.—The Song of Solomon.

420. Paraphrasing from Poetry to Prose.—“Poetry is not distinguished from Prose by superior beauty of thought or of expression, but is a distinct kind of composition ; and they produce, when each is excellent in its own way, distinct kinds of pleasure” (Whately). If we break up the metrical structure of a piece of poetry, we find it inflated and bombastic prose. If we remove this defect by altering the words, we find it better prose than before; but still it is not good prose. The fact that the same style which gave pleasure in one kind of composition proves offensive in the other shows that poetry and prose are not mutually convertible without injury to both (condensed from Whately).

If these views are borne out by experience, then the practice of paraphrasing poetry into prose should not be encouraged.

CHAPTER XXX.—MAIN DIVISIONS OF POETRY.

421. Different kinds of Poetry.—Poetry can be classified, according to subject, on lines analogous to those of prose. We will take the divisions in the same order as that given in Chapter xxviii. The reader must not expect the analogy to be quite complete: it is near enough, however, to form the basis of a classification.

422. Technical.—In poetry this is called “Didactic.” It consists of instruction set forth in verse, and embellished as far as possible with poetic ornament and illustrative anecdotes. Technical subjects, being of a non-literary character, are not suited to poetry; and no attempt at writing such poetry has been made since the beginning of the nineteenth century. It is now quite out of fashion, and perhaps will never come into fashion again.

“As science makes progress in any subject-matter, poetry recedes from it” (Newman). To the same effect Coleridge, in his Table Talk, contends that “the real antithesis of poetry is not prose, but science.”

Dryden’s Religio Laici (a defence of the Anglican Church against dissenters), 1682. Pope’s Essay on Criticism and Moral Essays (1688-1744). Somerville’s Chace (1692-1742). Armstrong’s Art of Preserving Health, 1744. Dyer’s Fleece, 1757. Green’s Spleen (1696-1737). Falconer’s Shipwreck, 1762. Grainger’s Sugar-cane. Philips’s Cider.

423. History.—Under this heading we have (a) the Epic poem, (b) the Historical drama, (c) the Historical lyric.

(a) Epic poetry.—“The epic poem treats of one great complex action in a grand style, and with fulness of detail” (Arnold).

Two more points, it seems to us, must be added to make this definition complete. (1) An epic is told mainly in the form of narration. If this point is not added, an epic poem might be confounded with an historical drama, in which the action of the story is told by dialogue. (2) The "great complex action" of an epic, though possibly embellished with a few fictitious details and episodes, must be historical, or at least it must be believed to be historical, and fraught with important consequences either to the race as a whole or to some particular nation. Let us examine this second point a little more closely:—

Homer's Iliad: the exploits of Achilles and other great heroes at the siege of Troy. Most of the Greek states traced the origin of their history to these heroes, whose existence no one doubted.

Virgil's Æneid: the foundation of Rome by Æneas, the Trojan hero, and the commencement of the quarrel between Rome and Carthage, as prefigured by that between Æneas and Queen Dido.

Lucan's Pharsalia: the defeat of Pompey the Great by Julius Cæsar. This poem follows authenticated history very closely.

Tasso's Jerusalem Delivered: the rescue of the holy city from the Turks by the Crusaders. Though there is a great deal of romantic fiction in this poem, the groundwork is historical, and of very wide interest.

Milton's Paradise Lost: the wars in heaven, the coming of Satan into the earth, the origin of heathen idolatries, the fall of Adam and Eve and their expulsion from Paradise.

Camoen's Lusiad: the discovery by Vasco de Gama of the passage to India and Southern Asia via the Cape of Good Hope.

Voltaire's Henriade, 1724: the history of the French king, Henry IV. (1553-1610).

The true Epic, therefore, has an historical intention. It is well known that Milton intended at one time to make King Arthur and his Knights the subject of an epic. But sharing, as he himself says, the common doubt of most writers as to "who King Arthur was, and whether any such reigned in history," he rejected the Round Table as a subject in favour of the Loss of Paradise. Tennyson has treated the Arthurian legends from an allegorical, not an historical, standpoint (page 300, footnote); and he calls them by the more modest title, Idylls of the King.

We have no great national epic. Milton's epic is not for his own nation only, but for the whole human race. His hero is neither Adam nor Satan, but Providence; and the aim of his epic, as he tells us, is to "justify the ways of God to men."

Doubt has been expressed as to whether we are likely to have any more epics in our literature. "The critical spirit which is now applied to history makes epic poetry more than ever difficult. Whether future poets will succeed in treating real history in the epic manner, renouncing the right of invention entirely, but still finding scope in the selection, interpretation, and appreciation of incidents according to their historical importance, may be left an open question. Carlyle has tried this in his History of the French Revolution, which resembles an epic poem more than any other work of this age" (Abbott and Seeley).

Certainly the critical spirit in which history is now studied is adverse to the composition of epic poetry, just as the scientific spirit of the present age is adverse to didactic poetry (§ 422). Yet we do not see why an epic poet of the future should "re-nounce the right of invention entirely," so long as the same right is conceded to writers of romance (§ 393). We should say that Kingsley's Hereward the Wake and Bulwer-Lytton's Last of the Saxons and Last of the Barons were fit subjects for national epics, and might have reached that standard, had the gifted authors devoted themselves to poetry instead of prose. If Macaulay's splendid fragment, the Armada, had been completed in the stately, yet spirited, metre,<sup>1</sup> the fulness of detail, and the lofty patriotic spirit with which it was commenced, we should have had a national epic that would probably be read after his Essays and History are forgotten.

(b) The historical drama.—Of such drama the "histories" of Shakspeare (as they are called, to distinguish them from his tragedies and comedies) furnish the best example.

In Roman history we have Shakspeare's Julius Cæsar; Antony and Cleopatra; Coriolanus. In English history, King John; Henry IV., Parts I. II.; Henry V.; Henry VI., Parts I. II. III.; Richard II.; Richard III.; Henry VIII. (ten dramas). English history in Shakspeare's time was still a tradition. Evidence had not been sifted, nor had events been narrated with historical exactness. It was therefore easier for Shakspeare to dramatise English history than it has been to his successors in the same field.

The best dramas (based on English history) since Shakspeare's time are those by Tennyson, viz. Queen Mary, Harold, and Becket, in all of which the poet adheres very closely to history.

(c) Historical lyrics.—Our literature possesses some lyrics that are purely historical, and others that are partly so.

Purely historical: Cowper's Wreck of the Royal George (1731-1800); Wolfe's Burial of Sir John Moore, 1817; Campbell's Battle of the Baltic and Hohenlinden (1777-1844); Tennyson's Revenge, Charge of the Light Brigade, and battle-scenes in the Ode on the Duke of Wellington's Funeral. It is noteworthy that these poems, though strictly historical, are among the very best lyrics in our language.

<sup>1</sup> The metre of the Armada is the long Iambic line in seven feet. The same metre is used with excellent effect in Chapman's translation of the Iliad, and in Morris's translation of the Æneid.

Partly historical: Cowper's Ode on Queen Boadicea; Gray's Bard. In both cases history is told by a prophecy put into the mouth of a Welsh bard.

424. Biography.—So far as we are aware, there is nothing analogous to this in our poetic literature. The best delineations (so far as we know) of private character in metre will be found in Crabbe's poems. But these poems are not of a high order. Private life is not a suitable subject for poetry.

425. Description.—Here our poetic literature is well represented.

Drayton's Polyolbion (1563-1631): a topographical and descriptive poem, in which the poet traverses the whole surface of his native land,—county by county, hill by hill, rivulet by rivulet. Milton's L'Allegro and Il Penseroso. Denham's Cooper's Hill (1615-68). Pope's Windsor Forest (1688-1744). Addison's Travels in Italy (1672-1719). Thomson's Seasons (1700-48). Goldsmith's Traveller and Deserted Village (1728-74). Shenstone's Schoolmistress (1714-63). Crabbe's Village, The Borough, Parish Register (1754-1832). Rogers's Italy, 1822. Byron's Childe Harold (1788-1824). Wordsworth's Evening Walk, Descriptive Sketches (1770-1850).

426. Reflection.—Poems of this character may be roughly classified into (a) longer poems, (b) elegies and other shorter poems, (c) sonnets, (d) songs.

(a) Longer poems.—Young's Night Thoughts on Life, Death, and Immortality (1681-1765). Pope's Essay on Man. Akenside's Pleasures of Imagination (1721-70). Cowper's Table Talk, Tirocinium, The Task (1731-1800). Johnson's Vanity of Human Wishes (1709-84). Shelley's Alastor (1792-1822). Campbell's Pleasures of Hope (1777-1844). Rogers's Pleasures of Memory (1763-1855). Wordsworth's Excursion (1770-1850). Tennyson's In Memoriam.

(b) Elegies and other shorter poems.—Spenser's Tears of the Muses (1553-99). Milton's Hymn on the Nativity, and Lycidas. Pope's Elegy on an Unfortunate Lady. Thomson's Rule Britannia (1700-48). Gray's Ode on the Prospect of Eton, Progress of Poesy, Ode to Adversity, Elegy written in a Country Churchyard (1716-71). Collins's Ode on the Passions, Verses to the Memory of Thomson (1721-59). Cowper's Shrubbery, Slave's Complaint, On the Receipt of his Mother's Picture, The Dog and the Water-Lily, The Castaway (1731-1800). Burns's Cotter's Saturday Night, The Mountain Daisy, Turning up a Mouse's Nest with the Plough (1759-96). Southey's Holly Tree (1774-1843). Wordsworth's Ode to Duty, On Immortality (1770-1850). Byron's Hebrew Melodies, Prisoner of Chillon, Lament of Tasso (1788-1824). Keats's Ode on a Grecian Urn and Ode to a Nightingale (1796-1821). Shelley's Adonais, Ode to a Skylark (1792-1822). Mrs. Hemans's Graves of a Household, The Homes of England (1793-1835). Tennyson's Two Voices. Longfellow's Poems on Slavery, Psalm of Life.

(c) Sonnets.—A sonnet generally expresses a single thought or reflection, on some subject connected with love, sorrow, patriotism history, etc. The best sonnets in our language are by Wyatt (1503-42), Surrey (1517-47), Sidney (1554-86), Shakspeare, Milton, Wordsworth, and Martin Tupper.

(d) Songs.—Short rythmical pieces, in stanzas, intended to be accompanied by music. Moore's Irish Melodies is simply a collection of songs composed by him to suit Irish airs.

427. Fiction.—This is represented in poetry by (a) Allegory, (b) Romance, Legend, or Tale, (c) Ballads, (d) Idylls or Pastorals.

(a) Allegory.—Spenser's Faery Queen (1553-99). Quarles's Divine Emblems (1592-1644). Dryden's Hind and Panther. Gay's Fables (1688-1732). Parnell's Hermit (1679-1718). Mandeville's Fable of the Bees (1670-1733). Thomson's Castle of Indolence (1700-48). Tennyson's Idylls of the King.<sup>1</sup>

(b) Romance, Legend, or Tale.—Narrative poetry of this character is well represented in our literature. The first example was set by Chaucer, whose Canterbury Tales have scarcely been surpassed. In more recent times we have Beattie's Minstrel (1735-1803). Scott's Lay of the Last Minstrel, Lady of the Lake, Rokeby, Marmion, Lord of the Isles (1771-1832). Byron's The Gaiour, Bride of Abydos, Corsair, Lara, Siege of Corinth, and others (1788-1824). Moore's Lalla Rookh (1779-1852). Shelley's Revolt of Islam, Hellas, and the Witch of Atlas (1792-1822). Campbell's Gertrude of Wyoming, 1809. Keats's Endymion, 1818. Wordsworth's White Doe of Rylstone, 1815. Coleridge's Christabel and Ancient Mariner (1772-1834). Mrs. Browning's Aurora Leigh, 1856. Macaulay's Lays of Ancient Rome and Armada (1800-59). George Eliot's Spanish Gipsy (told chiefly in dramatic form, but not intended to be acted). Tennyson's Princess, Maud. Robert Browning's The Ring and the Book. Whittier's Narrative and Legendary Poems. Longfellow's Evangeline and Hiawatha.

Romance and Legend are often told in dramatic form, that is, in the form of dialogue as distinct from that of narrative. This, too, is largely represented in our literature.

(c) Ballads.—Ballads or short metrical romances preceded the longer romances just described. It was Percy's revival of ballads, under the name of Reliques of Ancient Poetry (1728-1811), that created a taste for romantic poetry. Next we have Scott's ballads of the Border Minstrelsy; Wordsworth's Lyrical Ballads; Southey's Ballads of the Rhine. The short ballad metre is very similar to that adopted by Scott in his longer romances named under (b).

(d) Idylls and Pastorals.—Spenser's Shepherd's Calendar, a series of pastorals divided into twelve parts or months, is the greatest pastoral poem in our language. Pope's Pastorals, 1705. Gay's Shep-

<sup>1</sup> The story of these Idylls is not a mere narrative of romantic adventure. Tennyson himself considers it an allegory:—

An old imperfect tale,
New-old, and shadowing Sense at war with Soul
Rather than that gray king, whose name, a ghost,
Streams like a cloud, etc.

herd's Week. Collins's Eclogues. Shenstone's Pastorals. Wordsworth's Michael, and Tennyson's Enoch Arden (both idylls or tales of rustic life).

Idylls are sometimes in dramatic form, as Shakspeare's As You Like It, Jonson's Sad Shepherd, Beaumont and Fletcher's Faithful Shepherdess, and Milton's Comus.

428. Persuasion.—We have no department of poetry corresponding to oratory in prose. Speeches, however, do occur in poetry, as the Debates in Hell described in Paradise Lost, Book ii., and the speeches of Brutus and Antony over the body of Julius Cæsar.

429. Censure.—In poetry this is called Satire. It barely admits of poetic treatment: there is nothing in the thought that raises it above ordinary prose. The poetic element, if there is one, lies in the metre and the diction. No metrical satires have been written within the nineteenth century.

Donne's Satires, in imitation of Horace and Juvenal (1573-1631). Hall's Virgideciarum (consisting of what he calls "toothless" satires and "biting" satires, 1574-1656). Dryden's MacFlecknoe (aimed at his rival, Shadwell), and Absalom and Achitophel, a political satire aimed at the Duke of Buckingham and others. Pope's Dunciad, the Iliad of the Dunces, an ill-natured and malicious invective against contemporary authors. Johnson's London, an insincere satire against London life, in imitation of Juvenal's satire against Rome. Churchill's Rosciad, a political satire (1731-64). Byron's English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, aimed at contemporary poets and at the editor of the Edinburgh Review, who had attacked him. Gifford's Baviad and Mæviad, and metrical translations of Juvenal's Satires (1757-1826).

430. Humour.—Humorous poetry is well represented in our literature. It has often been associated with Satire. If the ridicule is more humorous than corrective or spiteful, we class it with the former.

Skelton's Booke of Philip Sparrow (1529), describing how a sparrow was buried with the ritual of the Roman Church; the Booke of Colin Clout, in ridicule of Wolsey. Butler's Hudibras (1612-80), a burlesque poem, more humorous than satirical, aimed at the Puritans. Pope's Rape of the Lock, a mock-heroic, the most poetical tale of the humorous class in our literature. Gay's Trivia, or the Art of Walking the Streets of London, a mock-didactic poem. Cowper's ballad of John Gilpin. Hood's Whims and Oddities (1799-1845). The Ingoldsby Legends.

431. Names of different kinds of Poetry.—We will conclude with giving some account of the names given to the different kinds of poetical composition.

Epic: from Greek epik-os, that which pertains to "words"

(Gr. epos, a word). Heroic legends told in metrical language were originally recited, not written; hence such poems were called "words." An epic is always a long poem. Its subject is historical, or what was believed to be so (§ 423).

Lyric: from Gr. lyrik-os, adapted to the lyre. A lyric is always short: it expresses one incident, situation, or emotion. Its subjects are love, battle-scenes, patriotism, banqueting. A more dignified kind of lyric is called an Ode (lit. song); as Dryden's Ode on Alexander's Feast, or Cowper's on Queen Boadicea.

Dramatic: from Gr. dramatik-os, that which pertains to action or acting.

Note 1.—Thus in the name "Epic" the idea of recitation is prominent; in "Lyric" the music; and in "Dramatic" the acting.

Note 2.—The word "Lyric" is now loosely used for almost any kind of short poem. Originally it meant an ode expressing the emotions of the poet himself. This is still the proper meaning of "Lyric." The metre may be either regular or irregular.

Idyll: from Gr. eidullion, lit. a little picture, a short descriptive poem. Gradually, however, it came to be limited to short poems describing rustic life, with or without rustic incident.

Note.—Tennyson's use of idyll in the title Idylls of the King is peculiar. He appears to have gone back to the etymological use of the Greek eidullion, which the ancient Greeks did not limit to rustic life. The Idylls of the King are anything but rustic.

Pastoral: from Lat. pastor, a shepherd. Pastorals, like idylls, describe rural life; but such poems usually consist of conversations between shepherds about their love-affairs, their losses, the state of their flocks, etc.

Elegy: from Gr. elegion, an "elegos" or lament told in metre. The name is given to mournful or any other kind of serious poetry, as Gray's Elegy in a Country Churchyard, Shelley's Adonais (on the death of Keats). Tennyson's In Memoriam is a prolonged elegy, in memory of Arthur Hallam.

Ballad: from Old French balade (Low Latin ballare, to dance); lit. a dancing song. It now means a short legendary tale, told in a light and rapid metre, and fit for recitation; example, Cherry Chase. Macaulay's Lays of Ancient Rome are enlarged ballads, as Tennyson's In Memoriam is an enlarged elegy.

Romance: the word was originally applied to the legends of popular heroes, told in medieval verse. It is now applied to any tale of striking adventure, with or without a legendary basis, whether told in prose or verse. Scott's metrical romances, such as Rokeby, are very like enlarged ballads, and are told in the rapid ballad-metre.

Satire : Lat. satira, satura, from satura lanx, a dish full of mixed foods, a medley (Skeat).

Didactic : from Gr. didaktik-os, instructional.

Sonnet : from Fr. sonnet, Ital. sonetto, lit. "a little strain."

A short poem limited to the exposition of a single thought or sentiment, that may be amatory, reflective, patriotic, or of any other kind.

Blank verse : unrimed verse, borrowed from Italian. First used by the Earl of Surrey, who translated Virgil's Aeneid Books II. and IV., into this kind of metre. It was Christopher Marlowe who in 1587 first used it for the drama, in his play Tamburlaine. Milton speaks contemptuously of rime, "the invention of a barbarous age, to set off wretched matter and lame metre." "True metre," he says, "consists in apt numbers, fit quantity of syllables, and the sense variously drawn out from one line to another." Among the best specimens of Blank Verse in our literature are Shakspeare's dramas, Milton's epic, Thomson's Seasons, Keats's Hyperion, Tennyson's Idylls of the King, and George Eliot's Spanish Gipsy.

PART V.—HISTORY OF THE LANGUAGE.

CHAPTER XXXI.—ORIGIN AND GROWTH OF ENGLISH.

SECTION I.—ENGLISH AND COGNATE LANGUAGES.

432. Celtic.—Before the English invaded and occupied Britain, the language spoken by the native tribes—the Britons—consisted of various dialects of Celtic, remains of which are still traceable in the Cymric or Welsh, the language of Wales, and in the Gaelic of the Highlands of Scotland. The Manx dialect of the Isle of Man and the Erse of Ireland belong to the same family—the Celtic.

Latin.—When Britain was annexed to the Roman empire, A.D. 43, Latin was the language of the ruling class, and during the last two centuries of the Roman occupation it was the language of the Church also. A form of Latin was beginning to be spoken by the native Celts; and this, had the Romans remained, would in time have overspread the island. But after A.D. 409, when the Romans finally left the country, all traces of the Latin language, and nearly all traces of the Celtic also, were swept away by a race of heathen, who, coming from the mouths of the Rhine, the Weser, and the Elbe, swarmed into Britain, bringing their own language with them. These invaders were the English, a race of Low-Germans, i.e. Germans inhabiting the low-lying lands facing the North Sea between Belgium and Denmark.

English.—In the order of time this was the third language spoken in Britain. It has not only overspread the British Isles, but is now the dominant language in North America, Australia, New Zealand, India, Burma, and South Africa, and is beginning to be spoken by the natives in Egypt and in several parts of China and Japan. The name "Ænglisc" (English) was originally confined to the dialect spoken by the Angles,—the tribe that occupied Northumbria. As this was the first of the new dialects that formed a literature of its own, the name was gradually extended to all the other Low-German dialects spoken in Britain, to distinguish them from Læden (Latin), which after the conversion of the Low-German tribes to Christianity had again become the language of the Church.

433. The Aryan family of languages.—The three languages named already, together with certain other languages to be named below, all belong to a larger group called the Aryan; and this is subdivided into East-Aryan and West-Aryan:—

East-Aryan:—

Sanskrit, and the neo-Sanskrit languages of India.

Persian: the old and modern languages of Persia.

Armenian, ancient and modern.

West-Aryan:—

Greek, ancient and modern.

Romantic: Latin and the neo-Latin languages of Europe (French, Spanish, Portuguese, Italian, and Roumanian).

Slavonic: the languages (ancient and modern) of Russia, Poland, Bohemia, Bulgaria, and Servia.

Lettic: the languages spoken in Lithuania and in the Baltic provinces of Russia and Germany.

Teutonic: Low-German (including English); High-German.

434. The Teutonic family.—Teutonic (from Lat. Teutonicus, a corruption of German Deutsch, which we have Anglicised to Dutch) is thus a division of the West-Aryan group, and this again is subdivided into Low-German and High-German.

High-German, the official and literary language of the German empire (called High, because it first sprang up in the higher parts of Germany, i.e. those farthest removed from the sea), is an offshoot from Low-German, that is, the language of the low-lands facing the North Sea. High-German was Low-German once, and did not begin to exist as a separate branch until after the beginning of the eighth century A.D. In Germany itself, but not elsewhere, it is now the more important branch of the two.

Low-German includes:—(1) the Gothic or South-eastern group, of which fragments are still preserved in the translation of parts of the Bible by Ulphilas, A.D. 350; (2) the Scandinavian or North-eastern group, or more briefly the Scandian,—the languages of Sweden, Norway, and Denmark; (3) the Western group,—Saxon, Friesic, Flemish, Dutch. It was out of a mixture of the two groups last named that the English Language was formed.

SECTION 2.—OLD ENGLISH.

435. Periods in the growth of English.—The growth of English has been subdivided into three main periods, to each of which approximate dates have been assigned,—approximate, because changes in language cannot be other than gradual and continuous:—

I. Old English ; from A.D. 450 to about 1200.

II. Middle English ; from A.D. 1200 to about 1500.

III. Modern English ; from A.D. 1500 to the present time.

Old English has been called the period of full endings, Mid. Eng. of levelled endings, and Mod. Eng. of lost endings:—

|             |           |       |        |       |         |
|-------------|-----------|-------|--------|-------|---------|
| Old  | leorn-ian | món-a | sun-ne | sun-u | stán-as |
| Mid. | lern-en   | mon-e | sun-ne | sun-e | ston-es |
| Mod. | learn     | moon  | sun    | son   | stones  |

By levelled endings is meant that the vowels a, o, u are all levelled or assimilated to e. By lost endings is meant that none, or only a very few, of them have remained, and these few have usually become non-syllabic. Thus stán-as (two syllables) has become stones, one syllable; and luf-o-de or luf-o-den (three syllables) has become loved (one syllable).

436. Dialects of Old English.—Old English consisted of three main dialects:—

(1) The Northumbrian, covering the whole tract north of the river Humber up to the Highlands of Scotland. It is represented at the present day by the dialects of Northumberland and Lowland Scotch, and less perfectly by those of Yorkshire and Lincolnshire. This was imported by a Scandinavian tribe called Angles, who came from what is now known as the Duchy of Schleswig. Although it gave its name Ænglisc (English) to all the other Low-German dialects spoken in Britain (§ 432), it is least like the standard English of the present day. Its Scandian character has stuck to it through all vicissitudes; and the marked peculiarities that still cling to the Scotch and Northumberland dialects are due to their Scandinavian origin.

Note.—One of the marked peculiarities of this dialect is the retention of its original gutturals. Thus Northerners to this day say kirk, brig, rig, while Midlanders and Southerners say church, bridge, ridge.

(2) The Mercian dialect, spoken between the Humber and the Thames, the great ancestor of Modern English. This, according to the last researches, was imported by Frisian tribes, who spoke Friesic on the Continent, and dwelt on the coast-lands between the Ems and the Elbe. To this day the Friesic dialect is more like English than any other continental language. It was more closely allied to the dialect of the Saxons than to the Scandinavian dialects of the Angles and Danes. It was called Mercian from Mercia, the name of the powerful kingdom which the Frisians founded in the heart of Great Britain.

(3) The Wessex dialect, spoken south of the Thames. This was imported by Saxon tribes from the Continent, who before they came into Britain inhabited the lower coast-lands of the Rhine. The dialect was called "Wessex" (just as the midland dialect was called "Mercian"), from the kingdom in which it was spoken. The subjects of Alfred the Great were called "West-Saxons," or Wessex men; and hence their dialect also was called Wessex. Now, however, the name by which this dialect is best known is that of "Anglo-Saxon,"—a name given to it by some scholars of the sixteenth century, who wished to revive the language of Alfred the Great, and knew of no better name to give to it. It was never called by this name, however, either by Alfred the Great himself or by any of his successors.

Note.—The name "Anglo-Saxon" is misleading. The Saxon or Wessex dialect was quite distinct from the Angle or Scandinavian dialect. Compare the rustic dialects spoken to this day south of the Thames with those spoken north of the Humber; and that will show how very different they were in their origin. The best interpretation to put upon the word "Anglo-Saxon" is to say that "Anglo-Saxon" means the Saxon dialect spoken in England as distinct from the Saxon dialect spoken on the Continent. With this interpretation the name "Anglo-Saxon" will convey a useful meaning.

437. Mixed character of Old English.—English, then, even in its oldest period, was not a single Teutonic dialect, but the sum of at least three Teutonic dialects,—a Scandinavian dialect (the Angle) in the north, a Frisian dialect (the Mercian) in the centre, and a Saxon dialect (the Wessex) in the south.

We are apt to speak of the Wessex dialect (misnamed "Anglo-Saxon") as if it covered the whole ground of Old English. This is a mistake. The Wessex dialect is merely a third part of Old English, not the whole of it. There are instances in which it fails to give any clue to the origin of modern English words. For instance, the word "are" is not derived from A.S. or Wessex "sindon," but from the Mercian "árun," which was itself borrowed from the Northumbrian dialect.

The reason why we look to Anglo-Saxon rather than to Mercian and Northumbrian for the origin of most of our Teutonic words, is that a large part of the Anglo-Saxon literature has been preserved, while most of the other two literatures has been lost. We do so, therefore, from necessity, not from choice. If we had our choice, we should go to the Mercian or Midland dialect, from which modern English has chiefly sprung.

438. Old and Modern English compared.—Old English is distinguished from Modern by two chief characteristics.

(a) It was in the main a Synthetical language, i.e. it had a large number of inflexions, which modern English has discarded. "Synthesis" means "putting together," "adding on." A language is said to be in the Synthetical stage, when it expresses the grammatical relations of words by adding some inflexion to the stems of nouns, adjectives, pronouns, and verbs. A language that discards such endings as much as possible, and in their place makes a freer use of prepositions and other auxiliary words, is said to be in the Analytical stage. This is the character of Modern English.

(b) It was in the main a pure language: that is, it contained very few words not of Teutonic origin; whereas modern English is very mixed, more than half of its vocabulary being non-Teutonic. Layamon's Brut, though it was not completed till a century and a half after the Norman Conquest, and contains some 56,000 lines, has scarcely 150 French words in it. The number of Latin words amounted to less than 200; and the number of Celtic borrowings did not come to 15.

(1) God blets-o-de Noe and his sun-a, and cwæth hem tó:
(God blessed Noah and his sons, and quoth them to:
Weax-ath and bé-oth gemenigfil-de and á-fyll-ath th-á Wax (ye) and be (ye) manifolded and fill (ye) the eorth-an. earth.)

(2) God bless-ed Noah and his son-s, and said unto them, Be fruitful and multiply, and replenish the earth.

Observe that in (1) every word (barring the Hebrew name Noe) is Teutonic; whereas in (2) there are two Romanic words, multiply and replenish, and one Hybrid or mixed word, fruitful. Observe also that in (1) the verbs, adjectives, and nouns have inflexions, which modern English has discarded.

439. Continuity of English.—The name "English," taken in its widest sense, denotes the language used by the English people from their first settlement in Britain up to the present time, in whatever parts of the world they may have settled since. It has been growing for the last 1400 years, and is now so unlike its earliest forms that most persons would probably find it harder to learn Anglo-Saxon than to learn French. Yet we must call Anglo-Saxon a form of English, unless we are prepared to deny the name of Englishman to Alfred the Great; for that was the language that he wrote and spoke. Moreover, there are many words that have never altered their form within the historical period, such as corn, lamb, nest, ram, wind, hand, spell, his, him, word, in, bill (axe), twist, bed, gold, can, blind, storm, is, winter, which were so spelt in the seventh century.

440. Periods of Anglo-Saxon.—The Mercian and the Northumbrian literatures are too fragmentary to admit of anything like a subdivision into periods. On the other hand, the Anglo-Saxon literature has, through the influence of Alfred the Great, been so well preserved, that two great periods, followed by a transitional one, can be traced:—

|  | A. D. A. D. |
|--|-------------|
| Early A.S. (the language of Alfred) . . . . .           | 700- 900    |
| Late A.S. (the language of Ælfric) . . . . .            | 900-1100    |
| Transitional Period (the language of Layamon) . . . . . | 1100-1200   |

Alfred the Great, born in 849, superintended the translation from Latin into Saxon of the History of the World by Orosius, the Church History by Bede, the Consolations of Philosophy by Boethius, and the Pastorals of St. Gregory. He also superintended the compilation of the early portions of the Old English Chronicle.

Ælfric wrote a collection of Homilies and other works; and Layamon was author of the poem called Brut, on the kings of Britain (alluded to in § 438, b).

SECTION 3.—MIDDLE ENGLISH.

441. Character of Middle English.—In its Middle period, 1200-1500 A.D., the English language went through three kinds of change.

(a) The Mercian, or, as we should now call it, the Midland, dialect became eventually dominant, taking the place of the Wessex or Southern, which up to the Norman Conquest, and for about two centuries later, had been in the first rank.

(b) Many of the vowel-sounds were changed; many of the old inflexions were lost; and all that were not lost were levelled (§ 435); form-words, viz. prepositions and auxiliary verbs, were more freely used; many Strong verbs became Weak.

(c) A very great addition was made to the vocabulary. A large number of French words, which for about 200 years had been used only by the clergy and the upper classes and in the law-courts, filtrated at last into the native speech, and became permanently fixed as part of our English vocabulary. The absorption of all this French facilitated the introduction of fresh relays of Latin, which throughout the Middle Ages continued to be the language of the learned and of the church.

442. Tests of the three Dialects.—Two marks of distinction between the three dialects may be here mentioned. (1) The ending of the Present Indicative plural: the Northern dialect had -es, as “sing-es” (we, you, or they sing); the Midland had -en or -e, as “sing-en” or “sing-e” (we, you, or they sing); the Southern had -eth, as “sing-eth” (we, you, or they sing). (2) The ending of the Pres. Part.: the Northern had -and, as “sing-and” (singing); the Midland had -ende, as “sing-ende” (singing); the Southern had -inde, as “sing-inde” (singing).

Both points are important. In (1) the final -en or -e of the Midland dialect fell off at the close of the Middle period, leaving only the stem of the verb, such as “sing,” for the plural form of the Pres. Indic., the very form that we have now. In (2) the final -inde of the Southern dialect superseded the -ende of the Midland, and became itself converted to -ing, the very form that we now possess of the Pres. Participle.

443. Supremacy of the Midland dialect.—The rivalry between the three dialects, which lasted till about 1400 A.D., ended with the triumph of the Midland, or rather with that of the East-Midland, the area of which included the important cities of London, Oxford, and Cambridge,—London, the seat of commerce and of government; Oxford and Cambridge, the two great national seats of learning. In towns like Oxford, Cambridge, and London all dialects met; and hence the Midland dialect has borrowed from both the others. Thus the phrase “they are” is of Northern origin; the phrase “he hath” is of Southern. The Midland adopted both.

“The Mercians,” says Trevisa, A.D. 1387, “who are men of the middle of England, being as it were partners with the extremities, better understand the side-languages, Northern and Southern, than Northern and Southern understand each other.”

Other reasons for the ascendancy of the Midland dialect were the following:—(1) It was the dialect in which the Old English

Chronicle, that had been written in the Wessex dialect up to the time of the Norman Conquest, was completed up to the year 1154,—the death of Stephen. In 1258 A.D. it was the dialect used by Henry III. in his proclamation for summoning a parliament from all the counties of England. It was the dialect used by Wycliff, the first translator of the Bible into the popular speech; and by Chaucer, himself a Londoner, who raised English poetry to a height of excellence that has hardly been surpassed since. (2) When Caxton introduced printing into England in 1477, the Midland dialect was the only one that he patronised. The Midland dialect thus became the literary speech of the nation. Until this standard had been established the different local varieties were dialects of co-equal rank. But when a standard speech had been formed, the dialects or local varieties fell into a lower rank, and were regarded as the speech of the unlearned.

Note.—The degradation of the Southern dialect was rapid and sudden. It ceased to be used for literary purposes after 1400. Not so the Northern dialect, which in the Scotch lowlands at least was represented by a distinguished line of poets from 1422 to 1555, viz. James I. (of Scotland), Henryson, Dunbar, Gavin Douglas, and Lyndsay. Burns is the last great poet who wrote in this dialect.

444. Danish influence on the Northern dialect.—The Danes were of the same stock as the Angles,—Scandinavian. Their geographical position in Europe led them, as it had led the Angles about 500 years before, to take the shortest cut across the North Sea into Britain; and this necessarily landed them in the country north of the Humber. The settlement of the Danes in the north of England and in the Scotch Lowlands had a marked effect on the Northumbrian or Northern dialect. By about 1250 A.D. this dialect had become almost as flexionless as modern English. Since the stems of the words were the same with the Angles as with the Danes, the two tribes could understand each other better by dropping their inflexions than by retaining them. Thus out of the Anglian “sun-u” and the Danish “sun-r” the more simple word “sun-e” (now changed to “sun”) was formed. The same kind of process is now going forward in the United States, where German immigrants, settled among English-speaking people, find it convenient to strip their German words of their inflexions, so as to adapt them more easily to English speech.

445. Danish influence on the Midland dialect.—The incursions of the Danes were by no means limited to the country north of the Humber. Their conquest of East Anglia and the greater part of Mercia must have materially affected the Midland dialect, from which our modern English has mainly sprung.

The following are examples of words in very common use, all of which were borrowed by the Midland from the Northern dialect :—

Same.—This took the place of the Southern thilke.

Are.—This took the place of the Southern sindon.

They, their, them.—These superseded the Southern hi, heora, hem, the old plurals of he.

Till.—This preposition is of Scandinavian origin, and was unknown to the Anglo-Saxon or Wessex dialect.

Note.—The words that, ours, yours, and she have also been ascribed to Northern influence. But this is a mistake. The first three are Anglo-Saxon, and scæ (the earliest form of she) is pure Midland; for it has been found in the later chapters of the Old English Chronicle, that were written in Peterborough, in the East-Midland dialect (see § 443).

446. The Norman Conquest.—The Norman Conquest, which took place about 180 years after Alfred the Great had defeated the Danes and compelled them to accept his terms for the division of the island, had much more extensive consequences. The Normans or Northmen were themselves of Danish or Norse origin, and therefore, like the Danes, cousins of the English. But it happened that before their conquest of England they had lived for five or six generations on the north-west coast of France, where they forgot their mother tongue, and became French in speech. This speech they brought with them to England; and for at least a century and a half after the Conquest it was doubtful which of the two languages, French or English, would ultimately triumph. They kept sullenly apart all those years, refusing to intermingle,—English being still the language of the masses, and French (or rather the Norman dialect of French) that of the ruling class—the Court, the aristocracy, the legal profession, and to some extent the priesthood. The large poem of 56,000 lines, known as Layamon's Brut (§ 438, b), contains scarcely any words of French origin; and this was not completed before the year 1205.

It was not till after 1300 that French words began to be incorporated in English in large numbers. But by this time English had made itself the daily speech of the upper classes, as it always had been of the lower, while French was going more and more out of daily use. The incorporation, when it did come, was very complete. Such words as grace, peace, fame, beef, ease (all of French origin) appear now to be as much a part of our original language as kindness, rest, shame, ox, care, all of which are native words that were in common use in the time of Alfred. Verbs were borrowed as freely as nouns and adjectives, which proves that the two languages had completely coalesced.

447. Triumph of English over French.—The triumph of the English language over the French was marked by the following events. In 1204 the loss of Normandy, by separating England from France, broke the connection between the French and the Anglo-Norman aristocracies. In 1215 a combination of English and Norman barons forced King John to sign the Magna Charta. In 1258 English was officially used for the first time since the Conquest, in the celebrated proclamation used in the name of Henry III. for summoning a parliament of barons from all parts of England ; which shows that French had ceased to be the only language spoken and read by the Anglo-Norman nobles. In 1349, three years after the victory at Crecy, it was ruled that Latin should be no longer taught in England through the medium of French. In 1362 it was ruled that all pleadings in the law-courts should be conducted in English, for the reason (as stated in the preamble to the Act), “that French has become much unknown in the realm.” We may safely say that by the year 1400 French was not much spoken in England. A vast English literature had sprung up in the interim, which was as popular in the halls of nobles as in the humbler dwellings of knights and burgesses.

448. French Influence on English Grammar.—The only influence of French on English grammar was to accelerate the change from Synthetical to Analytical : it did for the Midland and Southern dialects what the Danish language had already done for the Northern (§ 444). We say accelerate designedly ; for the change would have come in any case, though possibly neither so rapidly nor so completely as it did, without the help of French. Symptoms of the change had shown themselves clearly enough before French influence had begun to work, and even to some extent before the Conquest. In Layamon’s Brut, which shows no signs of French influence and contains very few words of French origin, the “levelled” inflexions of the Middle period begin to be seen side by side with the full inflexions of Old English. The growing tendency of English was to strengthen the accent on the first syllable, so that the last syllable, containing the inflexion, was slurred over or lightly sounded. Thus, forms like nam-a (name), sun-u (son), became nam-e, sun-e. In the same way all unaccented vowels in the final syllable excepting i were "levelled" (§ 435) or assimilated to e, so that -an, -as, -ath, -on, -od became -en, -es, -eth, -en, and -ed. Adjectives of French origin seldom took English inflexions, which helped English adjectives to discard theirs.

449. English Grammar exclusively Teutonic.—The grammatical structure of our language was as strictly Teutonic by the close of the Middle period as it had been before the Conquest, notwithstanding the shock that it had received in the interim. The Teutonic elements are noted below :—

(a) Grammatical forms :—

- (1) Noun-inflexions ; the possessive 's, plural in -en, plural in -s.
- (2) All pronoun-inflexions.
- (3) All verb-inflexions ; the personal endings -st, -th, and -s ; tense endings -d and -t ; participial endings -en and -ing ; gerundial ending -ing.
- (4) Adjective suffixes -er and -est marking degrees of comparison ; and the auxiliary words more and most used for the same purpose.
- (5) All the suffixes used for forming adverbs, and many of those used for forming verbs.

(b) Grammatical words :—

- (1) All nouns forming the Plural by vowel-change.
- (2) Almost all nouns having the same form for the Plural as for the Singular.
- (3) All the pronouns, — Personal, Demonstrative, Relative, and Interrogative.
- (4) All the Demonstrative adjectives, — the, this, that, other, such, etc.
- (5) All the Numerals except second, dozen, million, billion, trillion.
- (6) All the Distributive adjectives.
- (7) All adjectives of irregular comparison.
- (8) All Strong verbs (except strive and possibly one or two more).
- (9) All Weak verbs, excepting catch, that have different vowels in the Pres. and Past tenses.
- (10) All Auxiliary verbs.
- (11) All Defective and Anomalous verbs.
- (12) The old Causative verbs, viz. those formed by vowel-change.
- (13) Almost all the prepositions.
- (14) Almost all the conjunctions.
- (15) Most of the adverbs of Time and Placc.
- (16) All pronominal adverbs.

It is easy to make sentences on ordinary subjects without using a single word of French or Latin origin. But it is very difficult to make the shortest English sentence out of French or Latin words, and wherever such words are used, they are forced to submit to all the duties and liabilities of English ones.

450. French Influence on the English Vocabulary.—The Norman Conquest established in England a foreign court, a foreign aristocracy, and a foreign hierarchy. The French language, in its Norman dialect, became for a time the only polite medium of intercourse. The native tongue, at first despised as the language of a subject race, was left for a time to the use of boors and serfs. Words denoting the commonest and most familiar objects,<sup>1</sup> such as the elements, the seasons, divisions of time, natural scenery, soils and metals, the closest kinds of kinship, parts of a house, food and clothing, agricultural implements and processes, trees and plants, quadrupeds, birds, water animals, insects, parts of the body, actions and postures, etc., are to this day, in a large number of instances (though not by any means exclusively), of Teutonic origin.

A few generations after the Conquest, when English began to be used for general literature in the place of French, most of the terms at hand to express ideas above those of daily life were to be found in the French of the privileged and learned classes, who, for the past two centuries, had had the chief control of art, science, and law. Hence each successive literary effort of the reviving English tongue shows a large adoption of French words to supply the place of the forgotten native ones. Thus in general literature we have ancestors for fore-elders, beauty for fair-hood, caution for fore-wit, conscience for in-wit, library for book-hoard, obstructive for hinder-some, remorse for ayen-bite (= again-bite), astronomy for star-cræft, arithmetic for rim-cræft, agriculture for feld-tilth, etc.

---

<sup>1</sup> But it is possible to underrate the influence of French in furnishing names even for common and familiar objects. Elements: air is French. Seasons: autumn is Latin. Divisions of time: hour, minute, second are French. Natural scenery: valley, mountain, gravel, river, torrent, fountain are French. Kinship: uncle, aunt, nephew, niece are French; and grandfather, grandmother are half French. Parts of a house: brick, lintel, storey, attic, ceiling, tile, etc., are French; and door-post is half French. Food: beef, mutton, veal, venison, etc., are French. Clothing: gown, coat, chemise, trousers, etc., are French. Agricultural implements: hatchet, hoe, coulter are French. Agricultural processes: "turn the soil," manure, fruit, herb, vegetable, cole, cauli-flower, cabbage, grain, granary, stable, car are French. Trees and plants: damson, chestnut, almond, laurel, bay, mustard, etc., are French. Colours: blue, violet, lake, crimson, carmine, mauve are French.

Another effect of French on the English vocabulary was to give it a dualistic or bilingual character. Thus nouns or adjectives often go in pairs; as foe, enemy; hostile, inimical; home, domicile; homely, domestic; unlikely, improbable; bold, courageous, etc. Sometimes a Romanic adjective is given to a Teutonic noun; as bovine, ox; oval, egg; human, man, etc. Verbs, too, often go in pairs; as cast out, eject; be, exist; buy back, redeem, etc.

451. Other Results of French Influence.—To French influence combined with Latin we owe certain other effects besides those already named:—

(a) Word-building.—We owe to this influence a very large number of prefixes and suffixes, many of which are still in living use for forming new words. Our Romanic suffixes are even more numerous than our Teutonic ones. The French fem. suffix -ess superseded the Teutonic -ster. We have also many hybrid words, in which Teutonic and Romanic elements are compounded; as cott-age (from Anglian cot, "hut," + age, Fr. suffix). Our language thus gained in wealth as much as it lost in purity.

(b) Spelling.—The chief, perhaps the only, harm that French did to our language was to disturb the phonetic spelling that it possessed in its earliest form. It is to French that we owe the unnecessary compound qu (the function of which was served equally well by our own cw in A.S.), the sibilant sound of c before the vowels e and i, the sound of g as j before the same vowels, and the use of the letter i as a consonant to denote the sound now expressed by j. Thus almost all words containing a j are of French or other foreign origin.

Note.—Among the effects commonly ascribed to French influence, it is said that our language has lost the power of forming new compounds. This oft-repeated statement is a pure fallacy. Tennyson coins whenever he likes: cf. proxy-wedded, crimson-circled, slow-arching, heavy-shotted, hammock-shroud, hundred-throated, etc. We form fewer compounds than we once did, because we have less occasion to do so, not because we cannot. Our vocabulary has been so enriched by borrowings, that words usually exist to express the ideas we want. Other coinages by Tennyson are the following:—breaker-beaten, flesh-fallen, gloomy-gladed, lady-laden, mock-mEEK, rain-rotten, tongue-torn, work-wan, slowly-mellowing, hollower-bellowing, etc. "Cod-liver-oil" was coined the moment the name was wanted. Cf. "Hand-in-hand-fire-and-life-Insurance-Society"; this is one large compound, though the hyphens between the words are omitted to save the trouble of writing them.

SECTION 4.—MODERN ENGLISH.

452. Commencement of the Modern Period.—The period of Modern English begins somewhere about A.D. 1500, or a little later. The commencement of this period was preceded or accompanied by several great events, which, in other countries besides England, mark the commencement of Modern as distinct from Medieval history. The art of printing was introduced into England in 1477 by Caxton, who learnt it from the Dutch. Columbus discovered the West Indies in 1492, which led to the discovery of the American continent soon after. Vasco de Gama rounded the Cape of Good Hope in 1497, which brought Southern Asia in touch for the first time with the western nations of Europe. The Renaissance or Revival of Learning opened up new fields of research; and in 1497 Erasmus, the Dutchman, one of the foremost champions of the new learning, visited England, and took up his residence here for a time. Greek began to be studied for the first time in the English Universities. Luther had just begun to lecture in Germany, when Henry VII., the first of our Tudor kings, died on 21st April A.D. 1509.

453. Characteristics of Modern English.—The Modern form of English is distinguished from those that preceded it by two main characteristics:—

(a) Our language has now become almost entirely analytical; as analytical, in fact, as it is ever likely to be, and more so than any other Teutonic language. Final e, which in the Middle period was syllabic, has either disappeared or is retained to give length to the preceding vowel. The plural and possessive suffixes of nouns have ceased to be syllabic, except when the preceding consonant happens to be of such a kind as to compel the sounding of the final -es. Ben Jonson, the dramatist, who wrote a treatise on English grammar, lamented the loss of the plural suffix -en in verbs (see § 442, where it is shown that -en was the Plural inflexion of the Midland dialect). But the lamentation was in vain; for the suffix had gone beyond recovery. The fact that this suffix, together with the suffix e (levelled from a, o, u, see § 435), disappeared after Norman-French had ceased to operate, and not while it was still dominant, shows that the tendency to discard inflexions was inherent in the language itself, and was merely accelerated, not produced, by foreign influences.

(b) The Modern period is marked by a large number of new borrowings, and these from a great variety of sources. The study of Greek, introduced into England with the revival of learning, led to the influx of a considerable number of Greek words, in addition to such as had been previously borrowed through the medium of Latin. "Surrey, Wiat, and others introduced a knowledge of Italian literature, which soon had a great effect, especially on the drama. Several Italian words came in through this and other influences, either directly or through the medium of French. The discoveries of Columbus and the opening up of the New World brought us into contact with Spanish, and many names of things obtained from the West Indies came to us in a Spanish form. The English victories in India, beginning with the battle of Plassy in 1757, made us acquainted with numerous East Indian words; and English maritime adventure has brought us words from nearly all parts of the world. During the resistance of the Netherlands to Spain, in the time of Elizabeth, English borrowed several words from Dutch: it was not uncommon for English volunteers to go over to Holland to aid in the repulse of the Spaniards. English has also borrowed, chiefly in very recent times, from German, and even from remote continental languages, including Russian, and even Turkish and Hungarian. In fact, there are few languages from which we have failed to borrow words either directly or indirectly. It often requires a little patience to discover from what foreign language a word has been borrowed, and at what period. It is some help to remember that most of the words taken from remote and somewhat unlikely sources have been borrowed during the Modern period, i.e. since 1500" (Skeat).

454. Subdivisions of the Modern Period.—The Modern period can be subdivided into three stages or periods:—

I. Tudor English, from about 1500 to 1625, the date of the death of James I. Speaking roughly, its literature may be called that of the sixteenth century, though it goes some twenty-five years beyond it.

II. The English of the remainder of the seventeenth century, which comes to an end with Dryden, who died in A.D. 1700. The language of Milton abounds in Latinisms and other idioms, which are not now admissible. The age of Dryden is marked by a large number of borrowings from Modern French, a good deal of which is not even yet fully assimilated. It is also marked by the thorough establishment for the first time of "its" as the Possessive form of "it."

III. The remaining period up to the present day. One main difference between the two centuries represented by I. and II. on the one hand, and the two which have succeeded it on the other, is that "the former is the period of experiment and comparative licence both in the importation of new words and in the formation of idioms and grammatical constructions. The latter period, on the other hand, is marked by selection and organisation" (Sweet). The grammar of Shakspeare is in some points so unlike that of the present day that it has been found necessary for a modern scholar (Dr. Abbott) to publish a "Shakspearian Grammar" explaining its peculiarities. The forms and inflexions used by Shakspeare and his contemporaries are, however, strictly modern.

455. Decay of Dialects.—In Old and Middle English we were forced to recognise three distinct literary dialects,—the Anglian, the Mercian, and the Wessex in the Old period, answering to the Northern, the Midland, and the Southern in the Middle period.

In Modern English, owing to the complete ascendancy of the Midland dialect, which before the close of the Middle period had left no rivals in the field, we recognise only one language, viz. that of Modern English literature.

Provincial dialects still exist in different parts of England. We may still hear housen for houses in Wiltshire and Dorsetshire, brig for bridge in some parts of Yorkshire. But such dialects are no longer literary, or are revived merely as literary curiosities, as in Barnes's Dorsetshire Poems, or Tennyson's "Northern Farmer" in imitation of the Lincolnshire dialect.

The only English dialect that survived for some time longer in literary form was what we now call Lowland Scotch, though this is really nothing but a modern form of the old Northern dialect (see § 436). Burns's poetry is mostly written in this dialect, and is its best modern representative.

CHAPTER XXXII.—BORROWINGS.

SECTION I.—CELTIC.

456. Fewness of Celtic borrowings.—The Celtic borrowings were very few, much fewer than has been supposed. Those Britons who were not killed or ousted by the invading English were so completely conquered, that they had every motive for acquiring the new speech and forgetting their own. We are not even sure whether the bulk of them still spoke Celtic; for many had come to speak a rustic kind of Latin, as in Gaul.

Most of the words supposed to have been borrowed by English from Celtic, and still quoted as Celtic in some books, are now known to have been borrowed the other way; as bake, basket, cart, cradle, down (hill), put, slough, lad, lass, loop, boast, etc.

Celtic appears in a few geographical names and a few names of objects:—

(a) Geographical names:—Avon (river); axe, axe (river; cf. Ex-eter, Ax-minster); aber (mouth of river; cf. Aber-deen); car (castle; cf. Car-lisle); llan (sacred enclosure; cf. Llan-daff); combe (hollow in a hill-side; cf. Ilfra-combe); strath (broad valley; cf. Strath-clyde); pen or ben (mountain; cf. Pen-rith, Ben-Nevis); inch (island; cf. Inch-cape).

(b) Names of objects:—

(1) Before the Conquest:—brock (a badger), crock (hence crockery), dun (brown), taper (?) (a small wax candle). (Number of words very small.)

(2) After the Conquest, from about 1250 A.D.:—bald, bog (quagmire), brag, brat, bump, clock (orig. a bell), crag (rock), cup (whelp), curd (of milk), nook, plod, rub, skip, prop (support), ribbon. (Many of these, however, are doubtful.)

(3) From Welsh:—cam (crooked, Shaks.), cromlech (stone monument), Druid, flannel, gag (stop the mouth), gull (sea-bird), hassock (footstool), hawk (clear the throat), lag (slack, backward), toss (to throw), bard (poet).

(4) From Scotch:—cairn, clan, claymore (kind of sword), galloway (small horse), gillie (a boy, page), pibroch (martial tune), plaid, reel (Highland dance), whisky.

(5) From Irish:—brogue (wooden shoe), colleen (a little girl), fun, mug (cup), shamrock (a trefoil), shanty (small mean dwelling), tory (a hostile pursuer, first used in a political sense in 1680).

SECTION 2.—DANISH OR LATER SCANDIAN.

457. Danish borrowings.—Danish words were used in current speech long before 1250; but it was not till about 1250 or later that many of them were brought into literary use. In those days not one Saxon or Dane in a thousand could read or write, and hence changes were thoroughly established in popular speech long before they showed themselves in writing. The Danish verb “call” appears, however, in the Battle of Maldon, an A.S. poem written in A.D. 993. The verb “cast” appears in a Homily written in 1230. These are among the earliest examples of Danish borrowings of verbs.

Danish words have a tendency to resist palatalisation,—that is, the conversion of the gutturals k or g to the corresponding palatals ch, j, or y. Many of our words beginning with sk, such as skill, skin, are Danish. The suffix -sk, as in bu-sk (prepare oneself), ba-sk (orig. to bathe oneself) is exclusively Danish, and is still used in Icelandic.

(1) Nouns of Danish origin :—tarn (pool), stag, hustings, bark (of tree), brink, beck (brook), bulk (size), cleft, cur, egg, fell (hill), fellow (felági, partner), geysir, harbour, husband, kid, leg, raft, reindeer, sister, skirt, sky, slaughter, trust, tryst, window, wing.

(2) Verbs of Danish origin :—bait, bask, busk, call, cast, dash, die, drip, droop, gasp, glint, glimmer, irk (hence irk-some), are (Third plur. of am), bark, raise, rouse, rush, skim, smelt, smile, take, thrive, wag, wail, whirl, rive, thrive, etc.

(3) Adjectives and adverbs :—both, bound (for some journey), harsh, ill, irksome, loose, same, scant, sleek, sly, their (Poss. Pronoun), tight, ugly, weak, etc.

(4) Patronymics.—The A.S. suffix for forming patronymics is -ing, as Hard-ing, Mann-ing, etc. The Scandian or Danish suffix is -son, as Ander-son, Eric-son, Collin-son, Swain-son, Robert-son, David-son, Thom-son, etc.

(5) Prepositions :—till, fro (a doublet of A.S. from or fram), a for on in aloft, etc.

(6) Pronouns :—they, them, their.

SECTION 3.—DUTCH.

458. Two sets of Dutch borrowings.—(a) In the time of Edward III. a large number of Dutch weavers were induced to settle in England, especially in Norfolk, Suffolk, Essex, and Kent. The dialects that they brought with them (Old Frisian and Old Dutch) had much in common with that brought by Frisians and Saxons many centuries before. (b) In the reign of Elizabeth, English soldiers, who went out to Holland as volunteers to assist the Dutch against the Duke of Parma, brought home a good many Dutch words with them. After the fall of Antwerp, about a third of its merchants and manufacturers settled on the banks of the Thames, and Dutch sailors at the same time brought some new nautical terms.

(a) First borrowings :—

(1) Words connected with weaving or the sale of woven goods :—Botch (to repair, patch), brake (machine for breaking hemp), curl (crimple), lash (to join a piece and make a seam), spool (a reel to wind yarn on), tuck, groat, hawker, huckster, lack (orig. blemish).

(2) Other words in common use :—cough, mud, muddle, nag, fop, loll, luck, rabble, scoff, scold, slot (bolt), slender, slight, sprout, tub, tug, wisacre (Dutch wijs-segger, a wise sayer, a sooth-sayer).

(b) Second borrowings :—

(1) Naval words :<sup>1</sup>—deck (of a ship), freebooter (pirate or sea-robber), hoise or hoist, hold (of a ship), hoy (a small vessel), hull (of a ship), skipper (mariner), yacht, boom (pole), cruise, sloop.

(2) Trade words :—cope (orig. to bargain with ; cf. cheap), dollar, gilder, hogshead (Dutch oxhoofd), holland (Dutch linen), ravel (to unweave or entangle).

(3) Words picked up by volunteers, etc. :—boor (Dutch peasant), burgomaster (lit. town-master), canakin, frolic, fumble, glib (smooth, voluble), jèer, leaguer (a camp ; cf. be-leaguer, lair, lie), loiter, land-scape, manakin, mop, mope, rover, ruffle, sniff, sutler, toy, trick, slope, fop, wagon, etc.

(4) A few words connected with painting,<sup>2</sup> such as easel, landscape, lay-figure (Dutch lee-man, a jointed model of the human body that may be put up in any attitude).

Note 1.—Some very recent Dutch borrowings have come to us from the Boers in South Africa :—laager (a camp), kraal (a collection of huts within a stockade), trek or treck (to migrate with waggons drawn by oxen).

Note 2.—The diminutive suffix -kin, as in bump-kin, mana-kin, manni-kin, is usually Dutch, in which it had the form of -ken. The suffix scape occurring in landscape is from Dutch schap (shape).

SECTION 4.—LATIN.

459. Latin borrowings distinct from French.—Since French is little else than a modern form of Latin, it has been usual to put the Latin and French borrowings together, and to arrange them in the following periods :—

First Period, A.D. 43-410 :—borrowings traced to the Roman occupation of Britain or picked up on the Continent : all Latin.

Second Period, A.D. 596-1066 :—words borrowed during and after the conversion of our ancestors to Christianity : all Latin.

Third Period, A.D. 1066-1480 :—words borrowed on and after the Norman Conquest till the accession of Henry VII., the commencement of Modern History : all French.

Fourth Period, from A.D. 1480 :—words borrowed during and after the great intellectual movement known as the Renaissance or Revival of learning : all Latin.

The arrangement is faulty, because shoals of Latin borrowings came in within the third period, and shoals of French ones within the fourth. Moreover, there was a special class of French borrowings in the time of Charles II., of which no account is taken in the above arrangement.

<sup>1</sup> It must not be supposed, however, that all, or even the majority, of our naval terms are from Dutch. Others are Romanic, Scandian, or Anglo-Saxon. Romanic : anchor, vessel, navy, navigate, flotilla, careen, gally, hulk, proW, port, mariner, poop, mizzen-(mast). Scandian : lee, harbour, raft. Anglo-Saxon : ship, oar, seaman, sail, mast, steer, stern, helm, keel, fleet, yard.

<sup>2</sup> On art terms borrowed from Italian, see § 471, (1), (a).

The plan followed in this chapter is to keep the French and the Latin borrowings apart, and to subdivide each aggregate into separate periods of its own.<sup>1</sup> We shall take the Latin borrowings first, as the earliest of these were fixed in English, even before the French language had begun to exist.

The first two periods in the new arrangement tally, as will now be shown, with the first two in the old.

460. I. First Period: pre-Christian, up to A.D. 596.—These borrowings, about ten in number, may have been picked up on the Continent by the English before they landed in Britain; but some could easily have been learnt in Britain itself from the conquered natives.

Caster, Chester: A.S. ceaster, Lat. castrum, camp or fortified place; seen only in geographical names:—Chester, Caster, Caistor.

Coln: Lat. colonia, settlement:—Lin-coln, Colne, Colchester.

Mile: A.S. mil, Lat. mille (passuum), a thousand paces.

Pine (verb): A.S. pin, Lat. pæn-a; cf. Eng. pain, pun-ish-ment.

Pool: A.S. pól, Welsh pwll, Lat. padul-is, a marsh.

Port: A.S. port, Lat. port-us, a harbour; cf. Porchester.

Street: A.S. stræt, Mercian strét, Lat. strāta (via), a paved road.

Wall: A.S. weall, Mercian wall, Lat. wall-um, a rampart.

Wick, wich: A.S. wic, Lat. wic-us, a town or village; seen only in geographical names: Wick-ham, Wig-ton, etc.

Wine: A.S. wín, Lat. win-um.

461. II. Second Period: pre-Norman, A.D. 597-1066.—In A.D. 597 St. Augustine with a band of forty monks landed in Kent to teach Roman Christianity to the heathen English. The number of Latin borrowings arising from this event amounts to less than 200.

(1) Church terms of Latin origin:—altar, candle, chalice, cowl, creed, cup, disciple, font, mass (sacrifice), nun, shrine, shrive, etc.

Church terms of Greek or Hebrew origin borrowed through Latin:—alms, angel, anthem, amen, apostle, bishop, canon, Christ, church, clerk, deacon, devil, martyr, minster, monk, paschal, pope, priest, psalm, school, stole, etc.

(2) Trade words, articles of commerce, etc.:—beet (beetroot), box (chest), cap, cheese, fan, fork, kettle, linen, mat, mint, mul-(berry), pease (Lat. pis-um, from which a false singular pea has been formed), pear, penny, poppy, pound, sock, spend (Lat. dis-pend-ere), ton, tun, etc.

(3) Miscellaneous:—ass, belt, box (tree), castle, chalk, coulter (of a plough), fever, fiddle, fennel, hemp, kiln (Lat. culina), kitchen (Lat. coquina), lake, lobster, mill, mount-ain, noon (Lat. nona hora, the ninth hour), pan, pillow, pine (tree), pipe, pit, post, prime, punt, shambles, sickle, sole (of foot), tile (Lat. tegul-a), tunic, turtle-(dove), verse, dish (A.S. disc, Lat. disc-us), etc.

<sup>1</sup> The arrangement observed in this chapter is in accordance with that shown in Professor Skeat's Principles of English Etymology, series i. and ii.

462. III. Third Period: pre-Classical or pre-Renaissance, A.D. 1066-1485.—The Norman Conquest, which took place in 1066, and was the means of making about half our vocabulary French two or three centuries later, gave a great impetus to the study of Latin, from which French itself is mainly derived.

It must be remembered, too, that during the Middle Ages, as Craik observes, "Latin was the language of all the learned professions, of law and physic as well as of divinity in all their grades. It was in Latin that the teachers in the Universities (many of whom in England were foreigners) delivered their prelections in all the sciences."

Words borrowed direct from Latin, as the following examples show, are more like the original Latin than the early French borrowings (A.D. 1066 to about 1350):—

Ab-brevi-ate (Latin brevis; cf. Fr. abridge). Ab-negat-ion (Lat. neg-, negat-; cf. Fr. "de-ny"). Ac-qui-esce (Lat. -quiesc-ere; cf. Fr. ac-quit). Ac-quire (Lat. quær-ere; cf. Fr. "con-quer"). Ad-judicate (Lat. judic-, judicat-; cf. Fr. "ad-judge"). Ag-grav-ate (Lat. grav-, gravat-; cf. Fr. "ag-grieve"). Al-levi-ate (Lat. levis, light; cf. Fr. "re-lieve"). Ap-preci-ate (Lat. pretium, price; cf. Fr. "ap-praise"). Ap-prehend (Lat. prehend-; cf. Fr. "ap-prise"). Ap-proxim-ate (Lat. proximus; cf. Fr. "ap-proach," from Lat. prope, near). Dis-simul-ate (Lat. simul-, simulat-, to pretend; cf. Fr. "dis-semble"). Bene-diction (cf. Fr. benison). Male-diction (cf. Fr. malison). Cad-ence (cf. Fr. chance), etc.

One of the borrowings of this period, autumn, has superseded harvest, which in A.S. denoted the season (of autumn), and is now made to denote the fruits of the season.

The great difference between the Latin borrowings of Period II. and those of Period III. is that the former were adapted to Saxon models, and the latter to French ones.

463. IV. Fourth Period, from A.D. 1480.—The tendency to Latinise our speech received a new and very powerful impulse from the Revival of classical learning, Greek and Latin.

A writer in Queen Elizabeth's time condemns such innovations as the following, though all but the last three have held their ground:—audacious, compatible, egregious, despicable, destruction, homicide, obsequious, ponderous, portentous, prodigious, attemptat, facundity, implete.

Among the rejected words the following will serve as examples:—

torve, tetric, cecity, fastide, trutinate, immanity, scelestick, perversity, stramineous, lepid, sufflaminated, facinorous, immorigerous, stultiloquy, mulierosity, coaxation, ludibundness,<sup>1</sup> etc.

It has been estimated that the total number of words which we have borrowed immediately from Latin, and not through the medium of French, is considerably above 2400.<sup>2</sup>

SECTION 5.—FRENCH.

464. Three sets of French borrowings.—There are three different sets of French borrowings, as against the four of Latin.

I. “Words of Anglo-French origin, that came into the language before 1350, and belong to the good old stock, being of equal value and use with the words of native origin.” It was the Norman Conquest in 1066 that set this stream flowing in force, and led to the formation, in England itself, of a separate French dialect, which has been called “Anglo-French” (§ 466).

II. “Words of Central (or Parisian) French origin, imported chiefly between 1350 and 1660, the date of the accession of Charles II.”

III. “Late French words (of Parisian origin), introduced into the language since 1660 or thereabouts. They are on the whole of far less value than those in the two former classes” (Skeat).<sup>3</sup>

Note.—It has been asserted by very high authorities that there was a set of French borrowings which preceded the Norman Conquest (see article by Kluge in Englische Studien, vol. xxi. p. 334):—bat, capon, castle, cat (North Fr.), catchpoll (in late A.S. cæcepól), false, mantle, market, proud, pride, purse, rock, sot, targe, trail, turn. All these appear in late A.S., and are traceable to a French origin.

465. Popular and Learned.—The former belong chiefly to Class I., the latter (to a large extent) to Classes II. and III.

(a) “Popular” French words are such as grew up orally in ancient Gaul from the intercourse of Roman soldiers and settlers with the Gauls or people of the province; and hence they are called popular—“lingua Romana popularis”—lip-Latin, and not book-Latin. Such words are a good deal changed from the original Latin speech.

(b) “Learned” French words are such as were borrowed by French writers from the study of Latin books, and not from lip-

<sup>1</sup> Trench’s English Past and Present, ed. 1877, pp. 102-110.

<sup>2</sup> Skeat’s Princ. Eng. Etym. series ii. p. 250.

<sup>3</sup> Ibid. series ii. chap. ix.

Latin. They are merely Latin words slightly altered and put into a French dress. Central or Parisian French enriched itself with a large stock of such words. Among our "Learned" words some were borrowed direct from Latin itself, others from literary French. In the following list, which is by no means exhaustive, we put the "Learned" word first, because its connection with Latin or literary French is more easily traced. Historically, however, the "Popular" form of the word came first.

|                          |                       |                     |
|--------------------------|-----------------------|---------------------|
| Abbreviate, abridge.     | Dignity, dainty.      | Penitence, penance. |
| Aggravate, aggrieve.     | Dilate, delay.        | Piety, pity.        |
| Allocate, allow.         | Diurnal, journal.     | Portico, porch.     |
| Antique, antic.          | Errant, arrant.       | Potion, poison.     |
| Appreciate, appraise.    | Example, sample.      | Predicate, preach.  |
| Assimilate, assemble.    | Fabric, forge.        | Probe, proof.       |
| Benediction, benison.    | Fact, feat.           | Prolong, purloin.   |
| Cadence, chance.         | Faction, fashion.     | Propose, purpose.   |
| Calumny, challenge.      | Fidelity, fealty.     | Prosecute, pursue.  |
| Canal, channel, kennel.  | Fragile, frail.       | Provide, purvey.    |
| Cancer, canker.          | Granary, garner.      | Prune, plum.        |
| Cant, chant.             | Hospital, hotel.      | Quiet, quite.       |
| Capital, chattel.        | Illumine, limn.       | Redemption, ransom. |
| Captive, caiff.          | Indict, indite.       | Reprove, reprove.   |
| Castigate, chastise.     | Invidious, envious.   | Respect, respite.   |
| Castle, chateau.         | (In)vite, vie.        | Rote, route, rut.   |
| Cave, cage.              | Locus, lieu.          | Secure, sure.       |
| Collect, coil, cull.     | Locust, lobster.      | Senior, sir, sire.  |
| Collocate, couch.        | Major, mayor.         | Separate, sever.    |
| Complacent, complaisant. | Malediction, malison. | Spirit, sprite.     |
| Complete, comply.        | Memory, memoir.       | Status, estate.     |
| Comprehend, comprise.    | Native, naive.        | Strict, straight.   |
| Compute, count.          | Obedience, obeisance. | Tract, trait.       |
| Conception, conceit.     | Oration, orison.      | Tradition, treason. |
| Conduct, conduit.        | Pallid, pale.         | Triumph, trump.     |
| Deposit, dépôt.          | Par, pair, peer.      | Vast, waste.        |
| Describe, descry.        | Patron, pattern.      | Verb, word.         |
| Desiderate, desire.      | Pauper, poor.         | Vocal, vowel.       |

466. I. Anglo-French borrowings, up to about A.D. 1350. —These are called Anglo-French, as distinct from those of every other French dialect, because this dialect was developed in England independently of foreign influence.

Our Anglo-French words are on the whole quite as necessary to our language as our Anglo-Saxon ones. The word hour, for example, is indispensable, because A.S. tid (= tide), which also meant "hour," is now used to denote the ebb and flow of the sea. Again, second is indispensable as the ordinal for "two," because A.S. ōðer (= other, lit. "second") has become useful in other ways. Cf. Lat. autumn and A.S. harvest in § 462.

(a) Titles, offices, etc.:—duke, marquis, baron, constable, count, lieutenant, mayor, prince, viscount, emperor, vicar, dean, canon, chancellor, etc.

(b) Feudalism and war, etc.:—aid, cavalry, banner, battle, captain, fealty, lance, realm, armour, arms, fief, escutcheon, homage, vassal, serjeant, serf, trumpet, etc.

(c) Law: attorney, barrister, damages, felony, larceny, fine, judge, jury, justice, estate, fee, plea, plead, plaintiff, defendant, assize, prison, suit, summons, etc.

(d) Government: people, parliament, crown, reign, treaty, council, cabinet, court, minister, etc.

(e) Church: friar, relic, tonsure, ceremony, baptism, Bible, prayer, preach, lesson, cloister, penance, homily, sermon, etc.

(f) Hunting: course, covert, falcon, leveret, quarry, rabbit, venison (hunted flesh), catch, chase.

(g) Cookery: beef, veal, pork, mutton, pullet, boil, roast, broil, salmon, sausage, etc.

(h) Abstract terms: sense, honour, glory, fame, colour, dignity, chivalry, piety, art, science, nature, etc.

(i) Relationship: aunt, cousin, spouse, parent, uncle, nephew, niece.

Note.—Most terms expressing very close relationship are, however, Teutonic; such as son, daughter, father, mother. Hybrids like grandfather, grandmother help to show how completely the two languages were blended.

467. II. Central French borrowings, from A.D. 1350 to about 1660.—By the middle of the fourteenth century, when English was the only language spoken, and Anglo-French had almost ceased to affect our vocabulary, we had begun to borrow from literary French, that is, the French derived from book-Latin, and not that derived, as old French was, from lip-Latin.

Specimens of Central French borrowings found in Chaucer:—

Cadence (Lat. cadentia, Anglo-French chance), poetry, advertence, agony, annex, ascendant, casual, complexion, composition, conservative, cordial, duration, existence, fructify, oracle, persuasion, reprehend, triumph, urn, volume, vulgar,<sup>1</sup> etc.

Specimens in Lydgate, fifteenth century:—adulation, ambiguity, artificer, combine, condign, chronicle, deception, decoction, demure, dissent, doublet, encourage, fraudulent, hospitality, immutable, inclination, influence, inspection, etc.

The French borrowings of this period were not all book-words. Some were names of products imported into England through France by way of Calais. The following examples are given in their modern English spelling:—

Sugar, almonds, spicery, vermilion, figs, raisins, saffron, ivory, pepper, ginger, liquorice, sulphur, incense, pæony, anise, dates, chest-nuts, olive oil, rice, turpentine, cotton, canvas, fustian, etc.

<sup>1</sup> Skeat's Princ. Eng. Etym. series ii. p. 153.

468. III. Late French borrowings, from A.D. 1660.—The borrowings of this period differ from those that preceded it in three respects at least—(1) They contain scarcely any verbs, which shows that Modern French is to Modern English an exotic, and not a true graft; (2) they have in many instances retained the Modern French system of accentuating the last syllable, whereas the older borrowings followed the English method of throwing the accent back on the first; cf. cap'tain (Old French), cam-paign' (Modern French); (3) they have in many instances preserved the Modern French method of pronouncing vowels and consonants; compare for example rage (Old French) with rouge (= rōōzh, Modern French). Old French, on the contrary, was pronounced in nearly the same way as English was at the time of its incorporation.

An affected preference for everything French came into fashion with Charles II., whose vicious reign of twenty-five years corrupted the language no less than the morals of his country. The poet Dryden (1631-1700), from a desire to please the Court, fell in with the prevailing fashion, as when he needlessly substituted the French fraicheur for the English freshness:—

Hither in summer evenings you repair
To taste the fraicheur of the purer air.

The following are a few examples of the borrowings of this period:—adroit, brunette, cadet, cajole, campaign, caprice, caress, festoon, grimace, guitar, harangue, intrigue, grotesque.

SECTION 6.—GREEK.

469. Continuity of Greek borrowings.—Greek shares with Latin, though to a much smaller degree, the distinction of having been a continuous source of supply from the fifth century down to the present day.

All Greek borrowings up to the Revival of Greek learning (which for England may be dated from A.D. 1540) reached us at second or third hand through Latin or French.

Since 1540 some Greek words have been borrowed direct from Greek, and are especially so borrowed at the present day, when new words are wanted for some new fact or object in art or science. Others have been borrowed through Latin or French, as before, or through Italian, Spanish, Arabic, Portuguese, or Dutch.

470. Specimens of Greek borrowings:—

(a) Out of the Latin borrowings (rather less than 200) of the Second Period (§ 461), at least one-third were Greek before they became Latin:—

Alms (A.S. ælmesse, Gr. eleēmos-yne); anthem (A.S. antefn, Gr. anti-phona); angel (Gr. angel-os); apostle (Gr. apostol-os); bishop (A.S. biscop, Gr. episcop-os); chest (Gr. kist-e); Christ (Gr. Christ-os); church or kirk (A.S. cyric-e, Gr. kuriak-a); clerk (Gr. cleric-os); devil (A.S. déofol, Gr. diabol-os); dish (A.S. disc, Gr. disc-os), etc.

(b) Greek borrowings that have come through French, having first passed into Latin:—

Blame (Fr. blasmer, Lat. blasphem-are, Gr. blasphem-ein); currants (Fr. raisins de Corinthe, Gr. Corinth-os); dropsy (Fr. hydropisie, Gr. hydropisis); fancy (Fr. fantasie, Gr. phantasia); frenzy (Fr. frenaisie, Gr. phrenesis); govern (Fr. gouverner, Gr. kubern-ān); graft (Fr. greffe, Gr. graph-ein); ink (Fr. enque, Gr. en-caust-on); place (Fr. place, Gr. plat-eia); slander (Fr. esclandre, Gr. scandal-on); surgeon (Fr. chirurgien, Gr. cheir-urg-eon); palsy (Fr. paralysie, Gr. para-lysis); al-chemy (Arab. article al: Gr. chemia, mingling).

(c) Greek borrowings that have come from Greek direct:—

Analysis, hydrophobia, monopolist, telephone, anthology, demology, zoo-logy, tele-gram, epi-dem-ic, epi-lepsy, epicure, utopia, æsthetic, cosmetic, cosmo-polite, etc.

(d) Hybrids:—

Con-trive (Lat. prefix con-; Old Fr. trouver, to find; Gr. trop-os, a turn, revolving); re-trieve (Lat. prefix re-, base the same as the preceding); in-toxic-ate (Lat. prefix in-, Gr. stem toxic-on, poison, Lat. suffix -ate), etc.

Verbs of Greek origin are rare. But a very large number of verbs have been formed with the Greek suffix -ize or -ise, which can be freely attached to stems of any origin whatever.<sup>1</sup>

SECTION 7.—MODERN BORROWINGS: MISCELLANEOUS.

471. Modern borrowings.—Under this heading we include the various sources not already named, from which new words came into English within the modern period of our language,—that is, after A.D. 1500.

(1) Italian.—The Renaissance or Revival of Learning, which originated in Italy, led to a study of Italian literature. Dante, Tasso, Ariosto, and Petrarch were all translated into English. The poems of Surrey, Wyatt, Spenser, and Milton all show an intimate acquaintance with Italian. In the reigns of the Tudors <sup>1</sup> The spelling -ise is French; but this was altered to -ize by pedants, who knew Greek, but forgot that -ise came to us through Fr. -iser.

Italian was as necessary to every courtier as French was in the time of Charles II. The Ottava Rima, Blank Verse, and the Sonnet all came from Italy. The scenes of seven of Shakspeare's plays are laid in Italy. The tide receded with the establishment of the Commonwealth, and was entirely thrown back by the overwhelming taste for French, that set in with the accession of Charles II.

One word, and possibly two more, came from Italy at a very early period. Pilgrim occurs in Layamon's Brut, spelt as pilegrim, from Italian pellegrino. Another word is roam, probably derived from Rome, to which pilgrimages were made by Englishmen from the time of Alfred the Great to that of Chaucer's Wife of Bath. Ducat, a Venetian word, occurs in Chaucer.

(a) Direct from Italian :—

Balcony (It. balcone, a stage); bandit (It. bandito, outlawed); canto; comply (It. complire, Lat. complere); contraband (Lat. contra, against, bannum, a decree); ditto (a thing already said, from Lat. dictum, said); duel; duet; monkey (It. monicchio); gusto (Lat. gust-us, taste); fresco (of the same root as fresh); milliner (a dealer in Milan goods); isolate (It. isolato, detached); imbroglio; grotto; portico; quota; rebuff, etc.

Note.—We are indebted to Italian for many of our terms in music, poetry, and painting :—

Music :—concert, sonata, spinet, fugue, breve, duet, contralto, opera, piano, prima donna, quartet, quintet, solo, soprano, trio, canzonet, tremolo, falsetto, etc.

Poetry :—canto, sonnet, stanza, improvise, octava rima.

Painting :—miniature, profile, vista, model, palette, pastel, mezzotinto, amber, etc. (On painting terms derived from Dutch, see § 458, b.)

(b) Through French :—

Alert (It. all' erta, on the watch); arcade; artisan; bank-rupt (It. banco rotto, afterwards changed to Lat. rupta); brusque (It. brusco); bust (It. busto); caprice (It. capriccio, a whim); canteen (It. cantina, a cellar); cartoon (It. cartone, Lat. charta); cavalcade (It. cavalcata, a troop of horsemen); cascade (It. cascata, a waterfall), etc.

(2) Spanish.—Our borrowings from Spain were not due to a study of Spanish literature, but to our commercial and political relations with Spain, and to the descriptions of the country and her colonies furnished by English travellers. Spanish borrowings are almost as numerous as Italian. The al-prefixed to some Spanish nouns is the Arabic article, al.

(a) Direct from Spanish :—

Alligator (al ligarto, a lizard); armada (armed fleet); booby (bobo, a blockhead); buffalo; canoe (West Indian); cargo; cigar; armadillo (the little armed one, an animal); cork (corcho, Lat. corticem, bark); domino; don; filibuster (Sp. filibuster; corruption of Dutch vrijbouter, Eng. freebooter); peccadillo (dim. of pecado, a sin), etc.

(b) Through French:—

Bizarre; calenture; cask (Fr. casque, Ital. casco); castanets (of the same root as chestnut); escalade; garble; parade (parada, a show); risk (risco, a steep rock), etc.

(3) Portuguese.—About four dozen words:—

Albatross, albino, apricot, caste (Indian trade-guild), corvette (small frigate), firm (mercantile association), lingo (language), marmalade, molasses, parasol, tank (cf. Lat. stagnum, a pool of standing water), fetish (Lat. factitius, artificial).

(4) German: that is, the High-German (see § 434). Only about twenty-four all told; and all of these are scientific and technical terms, except the following:—

Landau (a kind of carriage), meerschaum, mesmerise, plunder, poodle, swindler, waltz, zinc, carouse (through Fr. carous, Germ. gar-aus, lit. “quite out,” a bumper drunk right off).

(5) Russian or Slavonic: rather fewer than the German:—

Knout, mammoth, argosy, mazurka (Polish dance), sable (an animal), rouble, polka, slave, steppe, vampire, czar.

(6) Persian:—

Bazaar, bezique (a game), caravan, divan, orange (P. naring), check or cheque, chess, dervish, exchequer, hazard, jackal, jasmine, jujube (through French), lemon, lilac, etc.

(7) Sanskrit:—

Banyan (a kind of tree), camphor, chintz, crimson, ginger, hemp, indigo, jangle, loot (to plunder), etc.

(8) Hindustāni (Northern India):—

Bangle (a ring bracelet), chutny (a kind of pickle), dacoit (highway robber), topee (a sunshade for the head).

(9) Hebrew:—

Balsam (cf. older form balm, through French), alphabet (through Greek), amen, bedlam (mad-house, corruption of Bethlehem), cinnamon, cherub, cider (through French), maudlin (corruption of Magdalene), jubilee, jockey (corruption of jackey, dim. of Jack, Hebrew Jac-ob), hallelujah (halelū jāh, praise ye God), seraph (coined from the plural seraphim), shekel, etc.

(10) Syriac:—

Abness, abbot, abbey (all from abba, father), damask (from Damascus), damson (a Damascene plum), muslin (from the town Mosul), mammon (riches), Messiah (anointed), etc.

(11) Arabic: rather numerous; some have come from the Levantine trade through Greek or Italian; others by way of Spain, in which country the Arab-speaking Moors were dominant for about 700 years; others less directly by way of France.

Admiral (spelt by Milton as ammiral; Arab. amir, prince, with suffix -al, which may have arisen in various ways; see New Eng. Dict.), alcove (a recess), algebra, Arabesque, arsenal, artichoke, assassin, caliph, caraway (seed), cipher, coffee, cotton, garbage, garble, nadir, zenith, etc.

(12) Turkish :—

Bey (provincial governor), horde, bosh (nonsense), ottoman (from Ottoman, founder of the Turkish empire), yataghan (a dagger-like sword), janizary, and a few more.

(13) Dravidian (Southern India) :—

Teak (a kind of timber), bandicoot, mungoose, curry, cheroot, cooly (labourer), mango (kind of fruit), tope (mango-orchard), pariah (out-caste), and a few more.

(14) Malay :—

Bamboo, caddy (small tea-chest), cockatoo, gong, mangrove, orang-outang, paddy (rice), rattan (cane), sago, upas (a fabled poisonous tree), amuck (as in the phrase "to run amuck." Dryden treats the a as an article, and uses the phrase "to run an Indian muck." The noun mucker for muck is well fixed in colloquial speech).

(15) Chinese :—

China (in the sense of porcelain), tea (Ch. tsa, chá; the last, though not used in England, is universally used in India, where it became current through the Portuguese), nankeen (a kind of cloth, from Nankin).

(16) Thibetan :—

Lama (Buddhist high priest at Llassa), yak (Thib. ox).

(17) Australian :—

Boomerang, kangaroo, paramatta (so called from the place).

(18) Polynesian :—

Taboo (a prohibition), tattoo.

(19) Egyptian :—

Behemoth, sack (hence dim. satchel, and sack-cloth), gum, gipsy, ibis, oäsis, paper (papyrus).

(20) North African :—

Barb (a horse), morocco (from the country), fez (Moorish cap).

(21) West African :—

Canary, chimpanzee, guinea, gorilla, yam (sweet potato).

(22) North American :—

Caucus (perhaps, one who urges on; now, a preliminary meeting for a political purpose), moose, skunk, squaw, tobacco, tomahawk, totem (ancestral symbol), wigwam (Indian hut), opossum, raccoon.

(23) Mexican :—

Cocoa (orig. cacao), chocolate, copal, jalap, tomato.

(24) Peruvian :—

Alpaca, coca (whence cocaine), condor, guano, llama, pampa (a wide grassy plain in South America; cf. prairie in North America, and steppe in Russia), jerked beef (corruption of charqui, raw meat cut up into strips and dried in the sun), puma.

CHAPTER XXXIII.—NOTES ON AFFIXES AND ACCIDENCE.

SECTION I.—ORIGIN OF TEUTONIC AFFIXES.

472. The study of Affixes.—There are two points of view from which prefixes and suffixes can be studied :—(1) the enlargement of the vocabulary, dealt with already in Chapter xxv. ; (2) the etymology of words, which includes the origin of the affixes themselves.

Our language, as the reader is aware, contains three different sets of affixes,—the Teutonic, the Romanic, and the Greek. The last two (see §§ 325-341) appear in our language in much the same forms as those by which they were known in their original tongues,—the Latin, the neo-Latin, and the Greek. On the other hand, most of our Teutonic affixes appear in a form which is much less easily recognised, since Anglo-Saxon is less generally known than Latin or Greek. The present section, therefore, gives some account of the origin of our Teutonic affixes.

473. Prefixes.—These are distinguished into Separable, viz. those which can be used as independent words ; and Inseparable, those which are now seen only as prefixes.

A. Separable :—

After-, A.S. æft, æfter, preposition and adverb : after-wards.

Al-, I., A.S. eal, all, adjective : al-one, l-one, al-ready.

At-, A.S. æt, at, preposition : at-one, at-one-ment.

By-, A.S. bi, by, preposition and adverb : by-path.

Fore-, A.S. fore, in front, preposition and adverb : fore-tell.

Forth-, A.S. forth, adverb : forth-coming.

Fro-, Norse frá, from : fro-ward.

In-, A.S. in, in, preposition : in-sight, in-land.

Mis-, A.S. and Norse mis, wrongly, adverb : mis-deed (A.S. mis-dæd).

Off-, A.S. of, of or off, preposition : off-spring, off-ing.

On-, A.S. on, on, preposition : on-wards, on-set.

- Out-, ut-, A.S. út, out, adverb : out-side, ut-most.
Over-, A.S. ofer, over, preposition : over-whelm.
Through-, thorough-, A.S. thurh, through, prep. : thorough-fare.
To-, A.S. tó, to, preposition : to-day (A.S. tó dæge, for the day).
Under-, A.S. under, beneath, preposition : under-let.
Up-, A.S. up, up, adverb : up-lands.
Wel-, well-, A.S. wel, well, adverb : wel-fare.
With-, A.S. with, against, by, near, prep. : with-stand.

B. Inseparable :—

- A-, A.S. of : a-down (A.S. of-dune, off a hill or dune).
A-, A.S. on : a-light (verb, A.S. on-liht-an, to light on).
A- or an-, A.S. and (against) : an-swer (A.S. and-swer-ian, to swear or speak back), a-long (A.S. and-lang).
A-, A.S. án (one) : a-ught (A.S. á-wiht, one thing).
A-, A.S. á (intensive) : a-rise (A.S. á-ris-an).
A-, A.S. æt (at) : a-do (for at-do, Northern dialect).
A-, A.S. ge : a(f)-ford (A.S. ge-forth-ian, to further).
Be-, A.S. be (by) : be-hoof (A.S. be-hóf, advantage).
E-, A.S. ge, which became i-, e- : e-nough (A.S. ge-nóg).
For-, A.S. for (intensive) : for-lorn (A.S. for-loren).
Gain-, A.S. gegn (against) : gain-say (the only word left).
N-, A.S. ne (not) : n-aught (A.S. n-á-wiht, nothing).
Or-, A.S. or (out) : or-deal (A.S. or-dél, a dealing out).
Tw-, A.S. twi (double) : twi-light, a doubtful light.
Un-, A.S. un (reversal) : un-lock, to reverse the locking.
Un-, Frisian und : un-to, for und-to ; un-til, for und-til.
Y-, A.S. ge : y-clept, y-wis (wrongly changed to I wis).

474. Noun-forming Suffixes.

A. Separable, or formerly Separable :—

- craft, A.S. cræft (skill) : hand-i-craft.
-dom, A.S. dóm (jurisdiction) : wis-dom.
-fare, A.S. far-u (journey) : thorough-fare, chap-fer (cheap fare).
-herd, A.S. heorde (keeper) : shep-herd, swine-herd.
-hood, -head, A.S. hád (state) : man-hood, maiden-head.
-ledge, léc-an (to play, verb) : know-ledge (the only word).
-lock, A.S. lák (play) : wed-lock (the only word).
-lock, -lic, A.S. léc (a plant) : hem-lock, gar-lic.
-man, A.S. mann (person) : wo-man (A.S. wif-man).
-monger, A.S. mang-ere (dealer in mixed goods) : fish-monger.
-red, A.S. ræden (counsel, condition) : kin-d-red.
-red, A.S. ræd (rate) : hund-red (the only word).
-ric, A.S. rice (dominion) : bishop-ric (the only word).
-scape, Dutch schap (form, shape) : land-scape.
-ship, A.S. scipe (form, shape) : friend-ship.
-son, A.S. sun-u (son), a patronymic : Ander-son.
-stead, A.S. stede (place) : bed-stead, Hamp-stead.
-tree, A.S. tréow (sawn timber) : axle-tree.
-ward, A.S. weard (keeper) : ste-ward (A.S. sti-weard).
-wife, A.S. wif (female, not wife) : fish-wife, mid-wife.
-wright, A.S. wyrht-a (workman) : wheel-wright.

B. Inseparable :—

- d, -de (akin to p.p. Weak verbs): bloo-d, gle-de (a burning coal).
- el, -le, -l, A.S. -el, diminutive, or instrument: hov-el (dim. of A.S. hof, house), gir-l (dim. of gör, child), spin-d-le (a thing to spin with).
- en, -n, -on, A.S. -en: (1) dim. maid-en; (2) fem. vix-en, fem. of "fox"; (3) agent, wag-on (that which carries), rai-n (that which moistens); (4) akin to p.p. Strong verbs, bair-n (that which is born); (5) plural, ox-en.
- er, -r, A.S. -or, -er, instrument: lai-r (a thing to lie on), tim-b-er (a thing to build with).
- er, -ier, -yer, -ar, -or, A.S. -ere or -iere, agent: rid-er, cloth-ier, law-yer, li-ar, sail-or.
- ing, A.S. -ing, dim., part of a whole: farth-ing (the fourth of a penny), Rid-ing (division of Yorkshire).
- ing, A.S. -ung, -ing, abstract suffix: rid-ing.
- kin, chiefly Dutch, dimin.: lamb-kin or lamb-i-kin.
- ling, A.S. -el + -ing, double dim.: cod-ling, dar-ling.
- m, -me, -om, A.S. -m, -ma: hel-m, na-me, bes-om, doo-m.
- nd, -and (old suff. of pres. part., § 442): err-and, wi-nd.
- ness, A.S. -nis, -nes, -ness, abstract: dark-ness.
- ock, -k, A.S. uc, diminutive: bull-ock, stir-k.
- ow, -w, A.S. -we, Dative of -u: mead-ow, stra-w.
- st, -t, -est, A.S. -st, -t, -est: rus-t, twi-st, harv-est.
- ster, A.S. es-tre, originally fem.: spin-ster, song-ster.
- t, -th, A.S. -ith: leng-th, heigh-t.
- ter, -ther, -der, A.S. -ther, -der: laugh-ter, spi(n)-der, mo-ther.
- y, -ey, -ie, A.S. -ig, chiefly dim.: bod-y, hon-ey, bird-ie.
- y, A.S. -e, place of action: smith-y (smith's workshop).

475. Adjective-forming Suffixes.

A. Separable, or formerly Separable :—

- fast, A.S. fæst, firm, sure: stead-fast, shame-facéd (for shame-fast, A.S. sceam-fæst).
- fold, A.S. feald: two-fold, mani-fold (for "many-fold").
- ful, A.S. ful, full: hope-ful, pocket-ful (noun).
- less, A.S. léas, loose, free from: spin-less, hap-less.
- × -like, A.S. lic, like: life-like, war-like.
- right, A.S. riht, direction: up-right.
- some, -som, A.S. sum: hand-some, bux-om (A.S. bug-an, to bend).
- teen (A.S. tén, ten), -ty (A.S. tig, ten): four-teen, for-ty.
- ward, A.S. weard, inclined to: fro-ward (A.S. from-weard).
- wart, A.S. weorth, worth: stal-wart (A.S. stéel, foundation).
- wise, A.S. wis, knowing: right-eous for "right-wise" (knowing the right).

B. Inseparable :—

- d, -ed (akin to p.p. Weak verbs): bal-d, gift-ed, ragg-ed.
- el, -le, -l, A.S. -ol, -el: scrann-el, fick-le, fou-l.
- en, -n, p.p. Strong verbs: drunk-en, op-en (that which is up).
- en, -n, A.S. -en, made of: wood-en, swi-ne (cf. Lat. su-in-us).
- er, -r, A.S. -or, -er: bitt-er (A.S. bit-or, biting), fai-r.
- ern (perhaps allied to A.S. irn-an, to run): north-ern.

- ish, -sh, -ch, A.S. -isc: mawk-ish, pal-ish.
- ly (inseparable form of A.S. lic, like): woman-ly.
- most, A.S. mest, double superl. -ma + -est: fore-most.
- ow, -w, A.S. -we, -u: call-ow (A.S. cal-u), slo-w.
- t, -th (akin to p.p. Weak verbs): swif-t, four-th, uncou-th.
- ther, A.S. -ther, Comparative suffix: o-ther, fur-ther.
- y, A.S. ig: might-y, an-y (A.S. án-ig, from án, "one").

476. Adverb-forming Suffixes.

A. Separable, or formerly Separable:—

- meal, A.S. mæl-um, Dative plur. of mæl, a time: piece-meal.
- wards, A.S. weard, the s is possessive: back-wards.
- ways, A.S. weg, a way; the s is possessive: al-ways.
- wise, A.S. wis-e, manner: other-wise.

B. Inseparable:—

- er, -re, A.S. -re and -r: ev-er, he-re.
- ling, -long, A.S. lung-a, later ling-a: dark-ling, head-long.
- ly, A.S. lic-e: on-ly, happi-ly.
- n, A.S. -nne: whe-n (A.S. hwæ-nne), the-n.
- om, A.S. -um, Dative inflexion: seld-om, whil-om.
- s, -ce, -se, A.S. possessive -es: sometime-s, on-ce (A.S. án-es), el-se (A.S. ell-es).
- ther, A.S. -der: hi-ther, thi-ther, whi-ther.

477. Verb-forming Suffixes.

- en, -n (causal; akin to p.p. of Strong verbs): dark-en, ow-n.
- er (another form of the above): clamb-er, whimp-er (from whine).
- k (A.S. -c-ian, frequentative or intensive): har-k, hear-k-en.
- le, -el, -l (frequent. or continuat.): babb-le, sniv-el, knee-l.
- se, A.S. -s-ian: clean-se, glimps-se.
- sk (of Norse origin, "self"): ba-sk (bathe oneself).
- y (the i of A.S. -ian, Infin. suffix): ferr-y, tarr-y.

SECTION 2.—NOUN FORMS.

478. Feminine suffix "-ess."—Our old Feminine suffixes were -estre (cf. spin-ster, A.S. spinn-estre, a woman who spins), and -en (cf. vix-en, A.S. fyx-en, orig. the feminine of "fox"). These (with one more, of which no trace now remains) were eventually superseded by the Norman-French -esse (now spelt as -ess), late Latin -issa. Thus "songster" (which in A.S. sang-estre meant a female singer) became, after the meaning of the -ster had been forgotten, a noun of the common gender; so to form a Feminine the suffix -ess was added, making "song-stress."

479. Possessive inflexion.—The original ending was -es, which for some time continued to be a distinct syllable. It occurs as such, though very rarely, in Shakspeare:—

Larger than the moon-es sphere.—Mid. N. Dream, ii. 1.

To show his teeth as white as whal-es bone.—Love's L. Lost, v. 2.

When the -es became non-syllabic, the e was elided, and its loss was indicated by the apostrophe (§ 43).

480. Substitution of "his" for "s."—The Genitive or Possessive inflexion was sometimes spelt as -is instead of -es. When the noun was a foreign proper name, that had no real genitive of its own in our language, the is was often written apart from it. Owing to the uncertainty of initial h, the is became confounded with his :—

Decius Cæsar his tyme.—TREVISA, A. D. 1380.

For Jesus Christ his sake.—English Prayer-Book.

Note.—The old theory that our possessive inflexion es or 's came from his is, of course, ridiculous. We could never have said "Jane his bonnet."

481. Plural inflexions.—(a) Plurals in -ies (§ 35) are, in fact, formed quite regularly, because the original Singular ending was -ie, not -y; as citie, cities.

(b) Plurals in -en (§ 38) are from A.S. -an (as, steorr-an, stars). This ending long disputed the ground with -es. Hosen, plural of hose, occurs in Old Test., Dan. iii. 21; shoon, plural of shoe, in Shakspeare. Spenser has eyen for eyes, and foen for foes.

(c) Plurals in -es are from A.S. -as (as, "stán-as," stones). Originally this inflexion was not much more common than -an, though it has now become practically universal.

482. Mutation Plurals.—This is the name given to those plurals that are formed by a change of the root-vowel (see list in § 38). The earliest forms of these plurals were mann-is (men), mús-is (mice, cf. Lat. mur-es), lús-is (lice), fót-is (feet, cf. Lat. ped-es), tóth-is (teeth, cf. Lat. dent-es), and gós-is (geese). The Plural was formed simply by adding -is (= -es) to the Singular.

The effect of the vowel in -is was to change the vowel of the Singular noun into something more like itself; so that mann-is became menn-is, mús-is became mýs-is, lús-is became lýs-is, fót-is became fét-is, tóth-is became téth-is, and gós-is became gés-is. When the plural ending -is dropped off, as it did even in Anglo-Saxon times, nothing but the mutation of the root-vowel remained to indicate the plural. Hence in Anglo-Saxon we find menn = Eng. men, mýs = Eng. mice, lýs = Eng. lice, fét = Eng. feet, téth = Eng. teeth, gés = Eng. geese.

Many other nouns in our language were once formed by this process of mutation.<sup>1</sup> The instances quoted are the remnants of what was once a larger class.

483. Same Form for Plural as Singular; see § 38 (c). In A.S. the plural forms of deer, sheep, swine were the same for the plural as for the singular, because the nouns were neuter. The A.S. plural of yoke was geoc-u, in which the final u became levelled (§ 435) to e, and the e became eventually silent. The word score was Plural, before it was ever used as a Singular. The foreign words grouse, trout, cod, brace, dozen, gross, and the native word heathen, all of which have the same form in the Plural as in the Singular, have followed the same model.

SECTION 3.—ADJECTIVE FORMS.

484. Origin of the Articles.—The origin of the Indefinite article a or an from the A.S. numeral án, “one,” is well in keeping with the fact that the Indefinite article is never used with any but Singular nouns, and that it still sometimes has the sense of “one” :—

A bird (=one bird) in the hand is worth two in the bush.

The form “a” is short for “an,” the latter being retained only before vowels or silent h; and an is merely an unaccented form of A.S. án.

In A.S. the form the was used as an Indeclinable relative, and not, as it now is, as a Demonstrative adjective. For all cases and genders of nouns, singular and plural (excepting the Nom. Sing. Masc. and the Nom. Sing. Fem., which had sé and seó respectively for their Definite articles), the Definite article was expressed by a declinable adjective containing the base tha, out of which we get our present forms this, that, these, those. Eventually the simple form “the” superseded every other for all cases and both numbers, and became, what it now is, the Definite article.

Note 1.—It is therefore opposed to history as well as to reason to consider the Articles a distinct part of speech. It is opposed to reason, because, wherever they are used, they discharge, as their origin would imply, the function of adjectives in limiting or defining the application of a noun. The universality of their use gives them, it is true, an exceptional character, which distinguishes them from ordinary adjectives; but this does not make them distinct parts of speech.

Note 2.—In such a phrase as “a many tears” (used by Tennyson, and commonly used in colloquial speech), there is no confusion of construction. Many is here not an adjective, but a noun from A.S. menigū, a multitude; and the preposition "of" is understood: thus "a many tears" = a multitude of tears.

<sup>1</sup> In German this process of mutation is called Umlaut. The English name, however, is quite as suitable, besides being more generally understood by English readers.

This many summers on a sea of glory.—Henry VIII. iii. 2.

Compare "a thousand (of) pounds" (see § 38 (e) Note). The phrase a few has been formed in imitation of the phrase "a many"; that is, the numeral "few" is regarded as a Collective noun.

In the phrase "many a," many is a real adjective used in a Multiplicative sense (§ 51); thus "many a man" = many times one man.

Note 3.—On the origin of the adverb the used with Comparatives, see § 153.

485. Comparative forms.—In A.S. degrees of comparison were expressed by three flexional or synthetic methods, and by one analytical.

(1) Flexional: the A.S. -ra, answering to our -er, and the A.S. -ast, -ost, or -est, answering to our -est. The r of the Comparative was s at a still earlier stage, of which we retain a trace in our Comparative "wor-se."

(2) Flexional: -ter, -ther (Comparative suffix), of which we still have traces in our words "fur-ther," "o-ther," etc. Cf. Lat. "al-ter," "u-ter."

(3) Flexional (Superlative suffix): -ma, cf. Lat. "pri-mus." Of this we have traces in some double Superlative forms, such as "hind-most" (A.S. "hinde-m-est"). The suffix "most" is a misspelling of A.S. mest, through a confusion with the word named under (4).

(4) Analytical method: A.S. māra (more), māst (most). This came into use at a much later period (fourteenth century) than the flexional methods.

SECTION 4.—PRONOUN FORMS.

The following are among the most salient points:—

My, thy.—These are simply abbreviations of A.S. mīn, thīn. Thus the forms "mine," "thine" are much nearer the original, but a separate use has been assigned to them (§ 68) by modern idiom.

Ours, yours.—These are merely double Possessives. The inflexion -s (A.S. -es) has been added to another inflexion -r (A.S. -re, Genitive plural); as in A.S. ūre (our), ūres (ours). The secondary form "hers" is due to analogy.

It, that, what.—The final t is a neuter suffix; cf. Lat. "i-d," "illu-d," "quo-d."

Its.—This has taken the place of the old Neuter possessive his, which lasted till the Tudor period:—

No comfortable star did lend his light.—SHAKSPEARE.

Along with the use of his we find it used as a possessive by Shakspeare:—

The hedge-sparrow fed the cuckoo so long,
That it had it head bit off by it young.—King Lear, i. 4.

Its (written without an apostrophe, since there never was a form it-es) was not well established till Dryden's time. Dryden uses nothing else (see § 454).

She.—Wrongly ascribed to the fem. Definite article seó (of which mention is made in § 484). It has come from the Mercian scæ found in the Peterborough chapters of the Old English Chronicle. The spelling she is regularly formed out of scæ.

Own.—From A.S. agen, Past part. "possessed."

486. Myself, himself, etc.—The explanation of these forms is a very simple matter, if we attend to their history and avoid conjecture. The words occur in A.S. in such forms as mín self-es (of me the same), mé self-um (to me the same), mec self-ne (me the same, Acc.).

The first thing to be noted, as in fact the above forms show, is that self was originally not a noun, but an adjective which signified "same," as it still does in the following line; cf. self-same (adj.):—

At that self moment enters Palamon.—DRYDEN.

"Self" is still an adjective in the phrase himself (him the same). But, like many other adjectives, it came in modern times to be used as a noun, and acquired a plural selves formed on the analogy of "shelf, shelves." We must regard it as a noun in the phrase my-self (lit. my identity), our-selves (our identities). In the Tudor period his-self (his identity) was as common as himself:—

Who his own self bare our sins.—1 Peter ii. 24.

In low life we still hear the phrase, "He hurt hissel."

The phrase themselves is due to a confusion of construction. Here selves, which should be the adjective "self" qualifying them (as in "himself" the "self" qualifies "him"), has received the form of a plural noun by attraction to the plural "them."

Note.—We can now see why it is wrong (as pointed out at the top of p. 158) to use myself, himself, etc., as subject to a verb. Such phrases presuppose that the corresponding personal pronoun has been mentioned already. "I myself (the identity of me, the very same person as the speaker) saw it." "He did it himself" (i.e. by himself, or for himself, or to himself). Him is here the Dative case, which in Old English required no preposition.

SECTION 5.—VERB FORMS.

487. Past tense.—The theory that the d or t of the Past tense in Weak verbs has come from did (as "love-did" = "loved") has been entirely exploded. The flexional method of thus forming the Past tense is from A.S. -de or -te, which again is traced further back to the Gothic inflexion -da or -ta.

|                |             |                 |
|----------------|-------------|-----------------|
| Gothic. | A.S. | English. |
| brah-ta        | broh-te     | brough-t        |

In some Weak verbs we also find a difference of root-vowel, as sell, sold. In such verbs it is the Present tense that has changed, not the Past. Thus sal-de (sold) is regularly formed from the root sal; but this sal became sel by mutation (§ 482), through the influence of the i in the Infinitive suffix -ian; A.S. sal-ian, sell-an, Middle English sell-en, and finally (by the loss of final -en) sell.

488. Present Participle.—Of the three old forms of the Present Participle, -and was peculiar to the Northern dialect, -ende to the Midland, and -inde to the Southern (§ 442). The last spread into the Midland also, and fixed itself there. The ind, however, became changed to ing, owing apparently to the greater facility of pronouncing the latter syllable at the end of a word. The change was unfortunate in one respect: it reduced the Pres. part. to the same form as that of Verbal nouns ending in -ing, such as “binding,” with which the Pres. part. is very apt to be confounded.

489. Past or Passive participle.—In Strong verbs the inflexion -en (though now in many cases lost) was so spelt in Anglo-Saxon; as “ge-cum-en” (come).

In Weak verbs the suffix -d or -t was likewise so spelt in Anglo-Saxon. From the very first it was quite distinct from the ending of the Past tense -de or -te, though by loss of the final e in -de or -te they became indistinguishable. The Past part. suffix -t or -d is the same as the t in Latin; cf. “ama-t-us,” “moni-t-us,” “rec-t-us,” “audi-t-us.” But the Past inflexion -de or -te is peculiar to Teutonic languages.

490. Infinitive.—In A.S. the Simple Infinitive (indeclinable) had the suffix -an or -ian, which after being levelled to -en (§ 435) was eventually lost. Thus we have “bind-an,” “bind-en,” “bind.” In A.S. this Infinitive was never preceded by to, as it usually is in Modern English.

What we now call the Qualifying or Gerundial Infinitive was a phrase formed in A.S. by the preposition tó and by the inflexion -anne, which after being changed first to enne and then to en was eventually lost. Thus we have “tó bind-anne,” “tó bind-enne,” “tó bind-en,” “to bind.”

When the preposition to came to be added to the Simple Infinitive also (a process of which the earliest traces are seen about the end of the twelfth century), no difference in form between the two Infinitives was left. The functions, however, that is, the syntactical uses, of the two Infinitives are still as distinct as ever,—the Simple Infinitive having the force of a noun, the Gerundial that of an adjective or adverb (§ 127).

491. Gerund or Verbal noun in -ing.—The suffix -ing is from A.S. -ing or (as it was more commonly spelt) -ung. A word formed by adding -ing to a verb-stem, as “binding,” was a noun pure and simple. The -ung or -ing was purely a noun-forming suffix, like -th in steal-th, or -r in stai-r, or -l in aw-l, or -m in doo-m. Though we now call such a word a gerund, it is properly speaking a noun in Modern English also. In this respect there is no breach of continuity from the time of Alfred the Great up to the present day.

As we approach the modern period, the habit grew up of omitting the preposition of after such nouns; cf. a similar omission in “on board (of) ship,” “a thousand (of) pounds,” “a many (of) tears,” “despite (of) those riches” (Scott). Thus men began to say “showing compassion” for “showing (of) compassion.” The omission of the preposition “of” made the noun “showing” look like a verb with the noun “compassion” as its object. “Showing” as a Pres. part. was known to be a verb already, and so “showing,” the abstract noun, looked like a verb also.

It was thus the identity in form between the Pres. part. “showing” and the abstract noun “showing” which gave rise to the notion that the latter must be a verb like the former; and it was the omission of the preposition “of” which completed the illusion.

When the abstract noun “showing” was thus made out to be a part of the verb “show,” it was very easy to coin a Past form “having shown” corresponding to the form of the Past participle:—

He was praised for having shown compassion.

For words thus used, such as “showing” and “having shown,” “grammarians in despair have invented the term gerund” (Skeat); and we must now accept these forms as “developments of modern English” (Sweet).

But it should be clearly understood that there is no connection whatever between this modern Gerund and the old Gerundial Infinitive. The latter invariably ended in -anne, or -enne, or -en (§ 490), until by about A.D. 1500 the inflexion died out altogether. The final -enne never took the form of -inge or -ing, and in fact it has no connection with it whatever.

INDEX OF SUBJECTS AND SELECTED WORDS.

The references are to pages.

- "A, an, the," uses of, 28, 159
   origin of, 338
 Absolute participle, 91
   Imperative, 55
   Infinitive, 58
   case, 86
 Abstract nouns, defined, 17
   used as Common, 18, 19, 244
   expressed by Concrete, 243 expressed by Gerund, 19, 62, 63
   suffixes, 216, 221, 225
 Accentuation, 125
 Active and Passive, 46, 47
 Active verb in Passive sense, 47
 Adjective, defined, 8, 9
   kinds of, 26-29
   comparison of, 30, 31, 339
   position of, 127-129
   used as nouns, 30 substituted for adverb, 88, 292
   two uses of, 29, 30, 88
 Adjective-clause, 96-98
 Adjective suffixes:—
   Teutonic, 217
   Romanic, 222, 223
   Greek, 225
 Adverb, defined, 11, 12
   kinds of, 71-73
   two uses of, 74, 75, 89
   sentence qualified by, 71
   qualifying prepositions, 11, 70 qualifying conjunctions, 11, 70
   comparison of, 73
   position of, 129, 130
   object to preposition, 75
   substitute-adverbs, 72
 Adverb-clause, 98-100
 Adverbial objective, 87
   suffixes, 218
 Adverbs compounded with—nouns, 211
   verbs, 74
 Adversative conjunctions, 79
 "A few," "a little," 160
 Affixes, origin of Teutonic, 333-336
   sources of, 214
 Agent, suffixes, 216, 221, 224
 Alexandrine, 289, 290
 Allegory, 236, 275
 Alliteration, 251, 285
 Alternative conjunctions, 79
 Amphibrach, 286, 287
 Analysis of sentences, form, 106
 Anapaest, 286
 "And that," 164
 "And which," 159
 Anglo-French, borrowings, 326, 327
   dialect, 326
 Anglo-Saxon, origin of name, 307 periods of, 309
 Anomalous verbs, 69, 70
 Antecedent:—
   to Demonstrative pronoun, 34 to Relative pronoun, 37
   understood, 37
 Anticlimax, Bathos, 248, 249
 Antithesis, 139, 237
 "Any," "either," 160
 Apostrophe, figure of speech, 247
 Apostrophe in punctuation, 123
 Apostrophe s, 24, 25, 157
 Apposition, 3, 86, 87, 102
 Articles, 23
   origin of, 333, 339
 Aryan languages, 305
 "As," various parts of speech, 81 with same or such, 38, 158, 159
 "As well as," 79, 80
 Assertive sentences, 1
 Assonance, 285
 Asterisk, 125
 Attributive:—
   use of adjectives, 29
   use of adverbs, 74
   use of participles, 91
   use of infinitives, 91
 Augmentative suffixes, 227
 Auxiliary verbs, defined, 39 list of, 44, 45
 BALLAD, 300, 302
 Bathos, 248, 249
 "Be," conjugated, 50, 51
 Blank verse, 288, 289, 303
 Borrowings, miscellaneous, 329-333
 Brackets in punctuation, 124
 Brevity, described, 195
   choice of words, 195
   grammatical devices, 196
 "But," preposition, 77 various parts of speech, 82

- CÆSURA, 285, 286
 Capitals, use of, 126
 Case, 24-26, 86, 87
 Causal use of Intransitive verbs, 43 verbs, affixes, 226
 Celtic language, 304
   borrowings, 319, 320
 Central French, 327, 328
 Circumlocution, 193, 251
 Clash of negatives, 192
 Clause, defined, 3
   Noun-clause, 94-96
   Adjective-clause, 96-98
   Adverb-clause, 98-100
 Climax, 248
 Cognate object, 42, 43, 87
 Collateral sentences, 98
 Collective nouns, 17, 157
   suffixes, 222
 Colloquialisms, 152
 Colon, 122
 Comma, 118-121
 Commas, inverted, 123
 Common gender, 20, 21
 Common nouns, 16
   other nouns used as, 19
 Comparatives, irregular, 30, 31
   Latin, 31, 160
   old forms, 339
 Complement, defined, 4
   forms of, 40, 42, 103
   Subjective, Objective, 42, 103
 Complex sentences, 93, 94
 Compound words, Related, 212, 213
   Unrelated, 211, 212
   sentences, 93
 Concord and Government, 92
 Concrete nouns, 16, 17, 157
 Condensation, 201
 Condensed sentence, 239
 Conjugation of Finite moods, 48-51
 Conjunction, defined, 10, 11
   Co-ordinative, 78, 79
   Subordinative, 79, 80
 Conjunctive pronouns, 36-38
   adverbs, 73
 Continuative use of "who," 38, 93, 96
 Continuous forms of tense, 43, 49
 Cumulative conjunctions, 79
- DACTYL, foot, 286
 Danish influence, 311, 312
   borrowings, 320
 Dash in punctuation, 124
 Dative of Interest, 111
 Decay of metaphors, nouns, 254, 255
   adjectives, 255, 256
   verbs, 256, 257
   prepositions, 258-260
   limitation of, 260
 Defective verbs, 69
 Definite article, 28
 Degrees of Subordination, 104
 Demonstrative adjectives, 28
   pronouns, 34-36
 Depreciatory suffixes, 226
 Descriptive adjectives, 26
- Diæresis, 125
 Dialects of Old English, 306, 307 of Mid. English, 310, 311
   decay of, 319
 Didactic prose, 267
   poetry, 296, 303
 Diminutive suffixes, 217, 222, 225
 Direct and Indirect Narr., 114-117
 Direct object to verb, 40
 Disguised prefixes, 220, 221
   prepositions, 76
 Distributive adjectives, 29
 "Do, did," 52
 Double meaning, 183-186
 Double Parts of Speech, 13 object to verbs, 40
 Doubt, in Subjunctive mood, 56
 Dramatic poetry, 302
 Dutch borrowings, 321
- "EACH other," "one another," 159
 Elegance of Diction, 204
 Elegy, 299, 302
 Emphasis, by position, 136
   by Correlative conjunctions, 138
   by Repetition, 138
   by Recapitulation, 139
   by Antithesis, 139, 140
 English, origin of name, 304, 305
 English language, stages of change, 306
   Low German origin, 304, 305 bilingual character, cause, 316 continuity of, 308, 309
   triumph over French, 313
 Enlargement of Nominative, 3, 102
 Enlargement of Vocabulary, sources, 210
 Epic poetry, 296-298, 301, 302
 Epigram, 238, 239
 Euphemism, 250, 251
 Euphony, 204-206
 Euphuism, 190
 "Except," "without," "against," 163
 Exclamation, 81, 246
 Exclamatory sentence, 1
 Extension of Finite verb, 5, 103, 104
- FABLE, 236, 275
 Factive verbs, 4, 40
 Fairy tales, 276
 Feminines in ess, 20, 336
 "Few," "little," 160
 Figure of speech, defined, 230
   classified, 231
 Finite moods, conjugation, 49-51
 Finite verb, completion of, 4, 5, 103, 104 extension of, 5, 103
 Foot defined, 286
 Foreign Plurals, 24
   Words and Phrases, 153
 Forms of object, 103
 French and English, struggle, 313 influence on Eng. Gram., 313 influence on Eng. Vocab., 315
   borrowings, 325-328
 Frisian origin of Mercian, 306, 307
 Full stop, 123

Future tense :—

- Indefinite, 53
- Perfect, 52

GENDER, 20, 21

in Old Eng., 236

General Results of Affixes, 225-227

Genitive or Possessive, meanings, 25

Personal use in pronouns, 158

German borrowings, 331

Low and High, 305

Gerundial or Qualifying Infinitive, 58, 341

Gerundive use of Participles, 63

Gerunds or Verbal nouns, 61, 62

history of, 342

followed by objects, 62

Government of words, 92

Greek affixes, 223-225

plurals, 24

borrowings, 328, 329

"HANGED, hung," 66

"Have, had," 45

Heroic couplet and triplet, 239

"His" for apostrophe s, 337

Historic present, 51, 160, 247

Hyperbole, Exaggeration, 249

Hyphen, 124

"I," position of, 157

Iambic foot, 286

Idyll, 276, 300, 302

Illative conjunctions, 79

Imperative mood, uses of, 54, 55

sentences, 1

Impersonal verbs, 70

absolute, 91

Incomplete predication :—

Factive verbs, 40

Intransitive verbs, 41

Indefinite article, 28, 159

adjectives, 27, 28

pronouns, 36

Indicative mood, 51-54

Indirect object to verb, 40

Infinitive, two kinds of, 57, 58, 90, 91

with to, without to, 57, 341, 342

Innuendo, 245

Interjection, 12, 80, 81

Interjectional phrases, 15

Intermixture of fact and fiction, 276

Interrogation—

in punctuation, 123

figure of speech, 246

Interrogative adverbs, 73

adjectives, 29

sentences, 1

Interrogative pronouns, 38

Intransitive verbs, 41-44

in causal sense, 43

Inversion of Normal order, 135, 136

Inverted commas, 123

Irony, 245

Irregular comparatives, 80, 31

verbs, 70

Italian borrowings, 329, 330

"It is, it was," 86, 139

"Its," origin of, 340

LANGUAGES first spoken in Britain, 304

Late French, 328

Latin plurals, 24

comparatives, 31

borrowings, 322-325

and Greek equivalent prefixes, 224

Litotes, figure of speech, 250

Low German origin of English, 305

Lowland Scotch, 306, 319

Lyric poetry, 302

MATERIAL, nouns of, 17

used as Common, 19

May, might, 46

Mercian dialect, 306, 307

Metaphor, described, 232, 233 personal, 233

sustained, 233

confusion of, 234

succession of, 234

decay of, 252, 253

Metonymy, 240-242, 261

Metre, 286, 289, 290

Middle Eng., character of, 309, 310

three dialects of, 310

Midland dialect, 310, 311

Misuse of Words, 170-176

Mixed or Strong-Weak verbs, 66, 67

Mod. Eng. characteristics, 317

subdivisions, 318

Modern borrowings, miscell., 329-333

Modes of expressing comparison, 339

Moods, four kinds of, 48

Multiplicatives, 27

Multitude, nouns of, 17

Mutation Plurals, 337

"Myself," "himself," 340

"NEEDS," various parts of speech, 83

Newly-coined words, 154

Nominative in Analysis, 2, 101

in Syntax, 86

Normal order, nouns, 127

Adjectives and Participles, 127-129

Adverbs, 129, 130

Subject and Object, 130, 131

Pronoun and Antecedent, 131

Preposition and Object, 131, 132

Prepositions, 132

Correlative conjunctions, 132

Norman Conquest, 312, 313

Northumbrian dialect, 306

Note of Exclamation, 123

Interrogation, 123

Notional verbs, 39

Noun, defined, 7, 8

kinds of, 16, 17

of Multitude, 17

verbal, 63

Infinitive, 58

used as adjective, 88

Noun-clause, 94, 96
 Novel, 275, 276
 Number, of Nouns, 21-24
 Numeral adjectives, 27

OBJECT, position of, 130, 131, 135
 omission of, 75
 Objective case, 87
 Objects to verbs, five kinds, 47, 62
   Direct, Indirect, 103
 Obscurity, sources of, 180-183
 Obsolete words, 153
 Old Eng. compared with Mod., 308
 "One," 35, 36, 83, 158
   mixed character of, 307
 Onomatopoeia, 251
 Optative sentence, 1, 55
 "Or," 165
 Origin of Past suffix -de, 340, 341
 "Other," 159
 Ottava Rima, 289
 Over-brevity, 200

PARABLE, 236, 275
 Paraphrasing from poetry, 295, 296
 Parenthesis, 147
 Parsing chart, 84-86
 Participles, three uses of, 91 old forms of Present, 310, 341 old forms of Past, 341
 Parts of a verb not finite, 4
 Parts of Speech, defined, 7-12 same word as different, 81-83
 Passive voice, 46, 47
 Pastoral poetry, 300, 302
 Past Participle, 341
 Past tense in Weak verbs, 340
 Perfect tenses, uses of, 51, 52
   Infinitive, 56, 160
 Period, in punctuation, 123 sentence, 143-146
 Periphrasis, 190, 192
 Personal pronouns, 32, 33, 339, 340
 Personification, 247
 Perspicuity, described, 179
   grammatical precautions, 179, 180
 Phrase, 14, 15
   compounds, 213
 Play upon words, 206
 Pleonasm, 198, 199
 Plurals, old forms of, 337, 338 special senses of, 176-178
   by mutation, 337, 338
   with no change of form, 338
 Poetic diction, 290-296
 Poetry, main divisions, 296-301 names of kinds, 301-303
 Popular and Learned, 325, 326
 Portuguese borrowings, 331
 Possessive case—
   of nouns, 24-26, 157
   of pronouns, 33, 339
   syntax of, 86, 87
 Predicate, defined, 2 parts of, 5

Predicative, use of:—
 adjectives, 30, 88
 Gerundial Infinitive, 58, 91
 adverbs, 74, 89
 participles, 91
 Prefixes:—
   Teutonic, 215, 216, 333, 334
   Romanic, 218-221
   Greek, 223, 224
 Preposition, defined, 9, 10 kinds of objects, 75 sequence of, 162, 163
   omission of, 75, 76
   disguised, 76
 Prepositional verbs, 43, 44
 Present Indefinite, uses of, 51
   Perfect, uses of, 51
 Present Participle, 341
 Principal clause, 93
 Priority, rule of, 142, 143
 Prolixity, 199, 200
 Pronoun, defined, 8 kinds of, 31
   syntax of, 88
   old forms of, 339, 340
 Proper adjectives, 26
   nouns, 16
   used as Common nouns, 17
 Prose-composition:—
   classification by matter, 266-269 classification by form, 281-283 technical, 270
   history, 270-273
   biography, 273
   description, 273, 274
   reflection, 274, 275 fiction, 275-277
   persuasion, 277-279 censure, 279, 280
   humour, 280, 281
 Prosody, defined, 284
 Pro-verb, 46
 Provincialisms, 152
 Proximity, rule of, 126, 141
 Pun, 239
 Purity, tests of, 151

QUALIFYING Infinitive, 58, 161
 Quantitative adjectives, 27
 "Quite," 162

REDUNDANCY, 198, 199
 Refinement of Diction, 204
 Reflexive pronouns:—
   forms of, 33
   omitted after Transitive verb, 40, 41
   object to Intransitive verb, 43
 Relative or Conjunctive pronouns, 36-38
 adverbs, 73
 Repetition, 133, 249, 250
 Restrictive use of Relatives, 38, 96
 Retained object, 46
 Rhythm, defined, 284
 Rime, perfect, 284
 Romance, 275, 300, 302
 Romanic, prefixes, 218-221
   suffixes, 221-223

SATIRE, 301, 303
 Scanning, 287
 "Scarcely," "hardly," 162
 "Self, myself, etc., 158, 340
 Semicolon, 121
 Sense suggested by sound, 251
 Sentence, defined, 1 five kinds of, 1
         Periodic, Loose, 143-146
     Simple, Compound, Complex, 93, 94
 Sequence of tenses, 92 of Prepositions, 162
 "Shall, will," 45, 53, 160
 "She," origin of, 340
 Short sentence between long ones, 200
 "Should," 45
 Simile, 231, 232
 Simplicity described, 189
 "Since," "ago," 162, 163
 Smoothness of Diction, 204-206
 Sonnet, 289, 299, 303
 Spanish borrowings, 330, 331
 Spelling of Compounds, 213
 Spenserian stanza, 289, 290
 Spondee, 287
 Stanzas, 289, 290
 Strong conjugation, 64, 65, 66
 Subject, defined, 2
 Subjunctive mood, uses of, 55, 56
 Subordinate clauses, 94
 Subordinative conjunctions, 79, 80
 Suffixes :—
     Teutonic, 216-218, 334-336
     Romanic, 221-223
     Greek, 224, 225
 Superlative degree :—
     adjectives, 30, 31
     adverbs, 73
 Supposition expressed by—
     Imperative, 54
     Subjunctive, 56
 Syllabic division, 125, 126
 Synecdoche, 242-244

 TAUTOLOGY, 197, 198
 Technical terms, 152
 Tense, three kinds of, 48

Tense, four forms of each kind, 48, 49
 Teutonic languages, 305
     prefixes, 215, 216
     suffixes, 216-218
 "Than," as preposition, 76, 77
 "That," various parts of speech, 83 misuses of, 162, 164
 "The," adverb, 72
 "Them," 157
 "They," 36, 158
 "Though, but," 80, 164
 Transferred epithet, 244, 245
 Transitive verbs, defined, 4, 39
     how made Intransitive, 40, 41 with Double object, 40 formed by affixes, 226
 Trochee, foot, 286
 Two Singulars with Plural verb, 90

UNITY, rule of, 146, 147

VERB, defined, 9
     three kinds of, 39
     complete conjugation of, 49-51
     Impersonal, 70
     Defective, 69
     Anomalous, 69, 70
     Irregular, 70
     compounded with adverb, 74
 Verbal adjectives, 65, 67
     nouns, 63, 64
 Verb and Subject, syntax, 89, 90
 Verb-forms in Old Eng., 340-342
 Verbosity, 199
 Vision, figure of speech, 247
 Voice, Active and Passive, 46, 47
 Vowel-mutation, 337, 341
 Vulgarisms, 151

WEAK conjugation, tests, 64
 Weak verbs, in groups, 67-69
 Wessex or Anglo-Saxon dialect, 307
 "Whether . . . whether," 164
 "Which, whom, that," 37, 38, 158

"YES, NO," 72

THE END

University of Toronto
Library

---

DO NOT REMOVE
THE CARD
FROM THIS POCKET

---

Acme Library Card Pocket
Under Pat. "Ref. Index File"
Made by LIBRARY BUREAU

